ed communions which came out from Rome, though, as they are not idoluters, and as God has called them to come out of Rome (Rev. 18: 4. compared with Rev. 17: 18); and calls them his accopile, I believe they are God's people. But they did not restore all that was in the beginning at that time, for they did not have the books to learn it from which we have now, For let us remember that few of them had been published then.

Trine immersion I found then would not be easily, if at all, restored in the Protestant Episcopal Church. My hook brought me compliments from bishops and the Protestant Episcopal press, accompanied, however, with more or less of dissent from its conclusions as to mode. For they would not have approved them without invalidating their own so called baptism.

And as time wore on I felt more and more inclined to get the successional trine immersion through one of the churches which had preserved it as the general mode. The trouble with me for a long time was how to get it without being forced to approve the later errors and creature service of those communions. For the whole Christian Church has become creature-serving and idolatrous as did the Jewish before it. Yet I believe that baptism has never been lost though covered up at times or surrounded with some corruptions.

And so I went abroad in the Fall of 1868. and, on the sixth day of January, 4809, old style, that is on what is colled Emphany or Theophany day, that is the Manitestation or God-Manifestation day, kept of old by the Greeks to commemorate the Manifestation or Showing of the whole Trimty at the baptism of Christ, in the waters of the Jordan, I received the three total unmersions of the one baptism in the baptistery attached to the Greek Cathedral in the city of Syra, or Hermopolis as it is called by the Greeks, on the island of Syra in Greece. My haptizer was Alexander Lycurgus, a native of the island of Samos, not far remote from the apostle-founded church of Ephesus, a nephew of Cyril the second, the successor of James in the episcopate of Jerusalem, the first founded church of Christendom, who had himself been made presbyter by that uncle in Jerusalem in 1852. This Alexander Lycurgus had studied in Germany and had become disposed to aid in the work of reform in certain things in his own church. He wished me to enter their chiscopute, and to start a reformed church in America with Greek succession in legdasm by trine immersion and orders. And as his words were translated to me, by him who interpreted, they were about as follows: "Take this to America, purify it, and we will imitate you here." This accorded with my own desire.

But perhaps some one anxious as to defails may ask how was each immersion perfomed? I answer, according to the rubric of that church which is as follows:

"The priest bajdizes" [that is as the Tircek word used means dips} "hum, holding him upright, and looking towards the East, and saying so and so" | that is the given name, in my case, James] "the servant of God is baptized" | the Greek word used means "disped" | "into the name of the Father, Amen: and of the Son, Amen: and of the Holy Ghost, Amen.

At the name of each person of the Trinity be dijos him and raises him up again."

Each immersion was total. The four or baytistery was large enough for the total immersion of an adult. The Greeks uniformly baptize their children in infancy. But some one may further ask, with reference to controversies of which I see something in the weeklies of those who are termed Brethren was the immersion done like that of the Tuukers? that is, was the candidate first made to kneel and then pushed under water by pressing upon his shoulders?

I answer, No.

Some one may further ask, "how then was it performed?"

I answer, I was first put into the baptistery or font, the water being perhaps not far from four feet deep, and then the archbishop press ing me with his hand on my head plunged me completely under, once at the name of each of the three divine persons. In the water 1 did not kneel but stood erect on my feet at first. But at each dip I went down nearly straight coming down on one knee and bending slightly forward as any man will in that act and posi tion. I arose after each dip and stood on my feet, and, after the third submersion, came out of the font.

I ought to add, however, in perfect justice to all the facts, that when afterward, in the same year, I visited Constantinople and its environs, and met an American bishop, whose church, the national church of America, still commands tring unmersion, he contended that their custom of haptizing the infant by putting him uuder water on his back at each of the three dips. was nearer the scriptural symbol of a burial. For he arged that a man is buried on his back, not on his face.

Yet my own observation teaches me that the way of putting the infant under water among the Greeks is not always uniform, for of the four I saw dipped, two in 1869 on the island of James in Greece, were held erect by the haptizer, and phunged under, he holding them, if I recullect right, under the arms, the other two 1 saw baptized last year in Jerusalem, and the baptizer took each infant with one hand back of its neck, and the other about its two ankles or just above them and plunged it head first, but so that the whole budy went under water, the head however going down first and coming up first. And from what I have learned Lindge that neither the Americans or any other Eastern church is uniform in the backward position, or upright position. And while I have generally preferred the backward posifrom, yet I have bardized some four the upright position, as I was haptized by going straight down; and once at what I thought was the request of the candidate, I buptized in Tunker tashion, that is, she knelt, and I then plunged her thrice, face forward, and thrice wholly submerged her. I say Tunker fushion, for I suppose that to be the general or universal custom among those called "The Brethren." The oldest Rubrics of Western Christendom do not specify whether the trine immersion shall be straight down, backward, or forward, though Mr. Thurman, without any facts for a basis, asserts otherwise. The English church rubric in the first Prayer Book put forth after its reformation has something which may be singular to some, that is cruciform trine immersion, that is making the sign of the cross with the childs body in the font. It reads as follow-:

"Then shall the priest take the child in his bands, and ask the name; and naming the child shall dip it in the water Throck; first dipping the right side, secondly the left side, the third time dipping the face toward the font." But this empirement custom is mediaeval, I think. At least I never found it mentioned in any old told her that the baptism was incomplete, and requested her to rise and go backward, which was done and the three immersions were then made total.

To conclude as to this matter of position in going down under the water at each dip I would say that while myself preferring the backward, and straight down positions, the latter with the head bent a little forward, I regard all baptism as complete and valid, if it has two things, Ist., an administrator with the apostolic succession in the trine immersion and in orders. 2nd., three submersions in water of the whole body, the first in the name of the Father, the second in the name of the Son, and the third in the name of the Holy Ghost, one of these names being repeated before each dip, and in that order of the names.

Or to put it in another form these things are necessary, 1st., the proper minister, 2nd., the matter, water, 3d., the mode, trine immersion, 4th., the proper joining of the three names, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, one with

In the same year, 1869, Alexander Lycurgus the archbishop of Syra and Jenos ordained me a deacon, and then a presbyter. I afterwards went to Constantinople, but made up my mind that the then Patriarch as he is termed. the Greek bishop of that city could not be induced to favor a full reform, and that sinful conditions would be required of me in order to enter their episcopate, to which he had invited me; the conditions were approved of their later errors, image worship, creature, invocation, etc., and I did not go further. I then after a trip over the Black Sea, through Balgaria, the Danube, Hangary, Austria and Germany, came home and have since remained in both ministries the Episcopal and the Greek. But God grant me to see a repoduction of the Primitive Church in all respects, and that shall be my place to live and labor. "That is Christ's Old Order, which is older than Mack. When will men lay aside the prejudices of education and follow that wisdom which is without partiality." (James 3, 17.) When will men leave isms of the last few centuries and their late understandings of scripture, he what it really does mean.

I am weary of practically preaching the infallibility of the private opinions of well meanmg, but unlearned men like Mack, and Roger Williams and a host of others. And I am willing to give to any who have it not the haptism and the ordination which come, not from him, but from Christ and his Apostles, if they will only follow the scriptures not as understood by Muck, but by the men who lived near the Apostalic age, and some of whom had set at the Aposthe's feet. And to that, some of the more intelligent men among "The Brethren," and godly women, also will sooner or later drift by Gods leading. It is your fault not mine that we are separate. You hold to a part of the truth. You will not accept it all. Show me where I am wrong. Yours with best wishes for both JAMES CHRYSTAL.

m HEN Jesus told that disciple to follow him, the disciple wanted first to bury his father. and then he would follow him, thus making it a secondary object to do what Jesus commanded. But Jesus told him to feave the dead (sparitually dead) bury their dead, that is, those who are literally dead, giving us to understand that we should make the obeying of the commands of Christ's primary and not a secondary object in life, because on our spiritual welfure, depends more than on our temporal welfure.

A. E. M. ANSWERED.

Will some one please fell us, through the Bio ru-REN AT Wome who wrote the latter part of the last chapter of Dentermomy, from liftly verse to end of chaqder? A. E. M.

TITIS question is easier asked than answered. It is generally believed that Moses, wrote the book, but he could not have written the last chapter, for it gives an account of his death. We have no means of ascertaining who did write it; but it is very probable that Joshua wrote it, for he was Moses' bosom friend, and was to succeed him. Infidels have taken occassion to cavil at this, seeming inconsistency, but there is nothing meansistent here, for Moses could have employed Joshua or some one else to write the whole book, and yet he be its anthor.

It is not strictly necessary that an author should do his own writing. We have abund ant proof of this in the epostle of Sand, for in his first epistle to the Corinthians he employed four to write it, viz., Stephanus, Fortunatus, Achuicus, and Timotheus. There were at least six of the epistles of Paul written by others; they are, nevertheless, the epistles of Paul. R. R. Moon.

THE TWO WAYS.

ВТ ЛАСОВ ВВСК.

"Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to distinctice, and nearly there he which go in thereal; tecause, straight is the gaze, adoctor on is the way, which leadeth outer life, and low there loom the tine (n) Matt. 7: 1 - 14

THERE are but two ways through life, and the question which must concerns our present and eternal welfare is, upon which of the two shall we travel?

According to the natural order of worldly athairs, it is customary to follow the leading fashions, and taking that view of the matter. we will initurally drift with the current to the broad and downward road, as by far the greater portion of the human family travel thereon. There are many lanes and avenues fending to this great thoroughfare prominent among which are disobedience to parents, profanity, Sabhath-breaking, licentiousness, drunkenness. grumbling, and murder.

At first the way is comparatively level, and it is an easy matter to retrace our footsteps, and enter the strait gait, but if we allow ourselves to be carried along with the current, we will find the descent gradually increasing until it is almost impossible to return, and if we continue, we will be rapidly carried from one transition to another, until eventually we will be drawn into the vortex of eternal misery and woe, from which there is no exit, "where'the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched," where we must forever submit to indescribable tortures, and endure the socity of fiends and devits.

Pause for one moment, reader, and reflect upon the awful consequences, which are sine to overtake us if we continue in the popular and well-beaten way, when we shall hear the awful sentence prenounced upon us; "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," verily, 'there shall he weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth."

There are also several avenues leading to the other way, through all of which we must pass before we can travel thereon, the principal ones being prayer, faith, repentance, and haptism; after passing through these, we can "arise unto newness of life," and "having our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace," we can travel over the dark and thorny desert without fear, ever looking unto the "Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither sludow of turning."

The narrow way is not at all times strewn with roses, but on the contrary we will have many trials and temptations to encounter, but if we have girded ourselves with the helmet of salvation, and the shield of faith, we will be emibled to withstand all the fiery durts of the adversary, for "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

And we learn that "these light afflictions which are but for a moment work out for us a für more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; for if we had no battles to fight, there would be ne victory to gain.

If we travel on this way the blessings are not all reserved until the end of the journey. hut Jesus says, "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that buth left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, that the shall receive a hundredfold now in this time. houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come, eternal life."

We have now both ways pictured out, hefore us, and which will we choose?

ing right and wrong testore us, and being free! to choose for ourselves; let us not then abuse he says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life; ne man cometh unto the Eather, but by me.

fort, and trod continually upon small sea-shelts of beautiful colors. The ruins at Askelon are very extensive and interesting, but they are chiefly those of the walls and buildings erected by Richard Corr de Lion, while here as a crusader in the year 1192. The walls were built of small blocks of sandstone comented together. by a very hard coment, and to give them additional strength, gray granite columns, from the ruins, perhaps of heathen temples, were laid in the walls crosswise. Now, great masses of the outer course of stone have dropped away from the wall, especially on the side next to the sea, and these columns are left projecting from the part still standing, like great pieces of artillery projecting through port-holes. These columns are perhaps all that is left of the original Askelon of the Philistines. The predictions of the prophets have been strikingly fulfilled in the fate of these two Philistine cities. See Jer. 47: 1-5; Amos 4: 6-8; Zeph. 2: 4.

From Askelon we struck across the Philis. tine plain again, in a line nearly parallel with that by which we had approached Gaza. found the plain here, as below, a vast grain field; but unlike that below, it was dotted with numerous vilinges instead of the Bedouin. The people here, as everywhere else in Palestine, except among the Bellouin, live in villages, and cultivate the surrounding fields. Near the villages are the vincenrds, gardens, and fruit orchards, all of which, in the plain, are protected by cactus hedges; while farther out are the fields of grain entirely unfenced. All catale and sheep are kept constantly in charge of shet-

We struck the bills near Bet Jibrin, (promounced Bate Jibreen (which was called in the ernsuding times. Elentheropolis.) It is now a city of rooms, and it is most remarkable for the vast artificial caverns which abound in its vicounty, and which show plainly by their interior arrangements, that they were made for Immun habitations. They are cut in a soft white limestone, they have lofty arched ceilings, with an opening in the apex to let in light, and they have passage opening from one opening to the other like the doors from one room to another in a large house. It was doubtless in some of this series of cave dwellings that David and his men made their home near Adullam.

Our next movement was northward along the dividing line between Andah and the Philistimes, as far as Gath. It was Lieut, Conder, who first identified the site of this city, and it is one well worthy of the city's fame. It is the leveled summit of a hill at least 500 feet, above the surrounding valleys, and the ascent to it so steep on every side that it requires a Syrian horse to climb it. From the southern extremity of the summit the view stretches out over the entire country of the Philistines, and a signal fire lighted here could be instantly seen from all the confederated cities. Along its northern hase passes the valley of Elah, here a beautiful plain a mile wide, and rich in waving gram. It was down this valley that the Plahs times fled after the death of tedoath, and this noted event occured but a few unles above. Before visiting the spot, we rode across the mount-We are placed here as free moral agents, have an northeastward, to visit Turnath, the Valbey of Serek, Zorah, and Beth-shemesh. When we reached the northern brow of the same fall, the Valley of Sorek spread before us, and we voluntarily reined in our horses to gaze upon its beauty. From Beth-shemesh, whose identity was inmistakable, about three miles to our right, the smooth trough of the valley passed by beneath our feet and stretched away to the west, widening as it went, and variegated everywhere with alternate stripes of yellow and green gram and freshly idenghed ground. At no other point, above or below is their sufficient width of the valley on the Philistine side together with sufficient narrowness on Saul's side. Guided by these indica. tions, we went to the brook at the very place in which it appeared that David must have crossed it, and found it full of smooth rounded stones from the size of one's head to that of a small pebble. We picked up five each, of just the size which we think David selected. They would certainly knock a hole in any giant's head, if thrown from a sling with a strong

Dear Bretheren.—

MIE Brethren at Wome has been making ats weekly visits to me for some time through the kindness of some kind brother, for which I return my thanks. Truly it is a welcome visitor. I have been reading its columns carefully, and get all the information and news Lean, especially among the different churches. One among the best items I scan is, that Brother Eshelman is going to pay our State a visit; also stating that he will go wherever he is need ed the most. We, a small body need him very much, and it will suit us so well if he comes in October, as we expect, if the Lord willing, to hold our Love-feast on the 18th. Now, brother, if you come, come and make us a visit at that time. We need help, and would be very glad to see you. The people are generally pour here, but you are not after the wealthy. A suppose you intend to spread the gospel, and doctrme of the Brethren; you will get many calls: the months of September and October will not be long enough.

Kansas had its drawbacks last year. Our crops were almost an entire failure, yet I for one thank God it is no worse, for we have plenfy to live on. I heard many growling, even cursing the Almighty. O what can be the thoughts of such people when they think or the future! -1wonder if they think they will agree die? Why not come, and preach to this prople? Why is you are instrumental in saving one soul, what is the reward?-It is great. The angels rejoice to see signers brought to opentance. Yes come, we need you or some other good brother. We have three munisters, but so far apart, that we do not have meeting often enough. Brother J. Buck is our elder. He expects to be with us at our Love feast; he lives a great ways off, but he is working for the cause of Christ. There is preaching in the county every Sunday, but not by the Brethren.

O for that higher life in which my soul loves to dwell. Would | to God we had more of it in the Brotherhood at large. Less earth and more beaven; less contention and more union; less frivolity and more truth and soberness, less feasting and more fasting, less "living to eat," and more "enting to live." Could we but dispense with this immense amount of cookery, highly seasoned foods, fatty meats (pork) and live more on fruits, vegetables, cereals, &c., then we would have less aches and better health, sweeter repose at night and more invigorating growth to the body, better developed brain and brighter intellect, mind more vivid and active, producing better and richer thought, elevating us in that plane of better morals which would aid us to escape the marshy low lands of sin and sorrow. Then could we better "glorify God in the body and in the spirit, which are his." Then, my brother, when you and I go from home to labor in one common cause, the salvation of sinners, we could retain our bealth, labor better, be more successful, and he a greater honor to the cross I truly hope you may soon be sound in health, be ready to wield the pen with powerful effect, the voice with comforfing words and smiles that radiate with gladness and love to all

We are well; thank the Lord. Work in the ministry plenty. We feel the loss of Brother Teeter, but it animates us to greater activity and we trust all will be well.

Go Ye,

T does seem that we as a church cannot be aroused to our duty in regard to spreading the gospel. While thousands nod thousands are going to their long home without the bread of life, we are planning how to get it to them: and while we are thus planning and waiting the enemy of souls may and will steal or march upon us. If any think the way is not opeo in large cities let them read the following from the Western Bural. In speaking of the poor of the large cities, it says: "If the poor want to go to church they can't do it, Churches are not for poor people. In every large city there are thousands of the poor who are practically deprived of the privilege of church going. In Chicago there are churches which have actually crippled their mission work among the poor, for the purpose of erecting large and elegant edifices for the rich. The same is true of churches in other cities, and to some extent it is true of the churches in the villages.'

"If one wishes to know how much the poor are deprived of religious privileges, let him open a mission in some section of a large city where the poor congregate, and see how quickly the largest half be can secure will be packed." Let us go and work. If we knew that the midnight express with its five hundred souls were rushing to sure destruction we would do all in our power to have it stopped in fime to avert the danger and we could tell it, too, so that every one could understand, what, we meaut. But while millions are dying and going to their long home and going to a more sure destruction than the midnight express, we are planning and calling conventions, choosing committees to arrange plans how to carry the alarming news to the dying passengers, or the glorious news if they stop and turn unto the bord. Dear Beetheen. -

IMO-DAY, August 25th, our quarterly council meeting was held; not much business came (p. but what did we disposed of quite pleasantly. We have not been increasing but very little for a long while on account of discord and disunion; but now there seems to be a little more union, love, and affection in the church, so I do hope and pray that the good Lord may send a empions shower of grace into all our hearts so that his work may be thoroughly revived in us ill, that we may feel for the good of the church and the salvation of perishing souls. This hand be morenly object—to sure ourselves J. C. Miller. and those around us.

Dear Berthren:-

ITE have firsty members here, and but one of that number uses tobacco in any torm. Four of our Brethren have quit its use since coming here. None at our colony members use it, members or no members. We hope hat those who intend to come will also be free from its use. Can any other congregation give thetrer showing on the tobacco question?

Rose Hill, Ind .- We were to meeting this foremoon; had a large congregation. Seven more came out and were haptized; we think there are still more almost ready to come. Last Thursday there were ten imptized in Metzger's District. This is encouraging to us here; and we hope it is to you also. That is the reason A. Miller. why I write this card. Aug 17th.

Clinton, Mo.-Brother Hillery was with us; (Grand River Church, Henry Co., Missouri) held several night meetings, and assisted in our communion services, and lubored faithfully to promote us, as represented in the gospel of God's dear Son. The result of his labors, with the assisfance of other ministers is, that the church is much edified, and encouraged to press forward to win an immortal prize, and three precious souls were added to the church by baptism, and excellent impressions under upon the hearts of those who are yet strangers to the covenant of promise. Brother Hillery is in good health, and left us in excellent spirits. He goes from here to Mineral Creek, Johnson County, to assist in communion services; from there to Morgan County, thence north, towards his home in Illinois. J. S. Monnine Anopost 25th.

From Mt. Morris Seminary, Ill.

Dear "Brethren at Work;"-THINKING that perhaps many of your read-I ers would be glid to know something with reference to the scope and prospects and present status of this institution, I will briefly give you a few points. Situated in a beautiful. and productive country, and buildings that cost about $38,000, surrounded by a fine shaded park of six and one-liabl acres, and everything to make the student's surroundings pleasant, there is a grand opportunity here, for building up a first class institution. Under the former management, owing to the many competing ing schools in the denomination under whose ausnices it was conducted, the college had from a condition of great prosperity in former years dwindleddown until at the time when our friends took hold of the motter there were but about thirty students in attendance, and the buildings were in a very unsatisfactory condition. Now, under the careful management of Brothers Stein and Newcomer, everything presents a very different appearance. Blinds have been put on the windows, the inside nicely painted and calsomined, the floors are empeted in all rooms and halls, registers and ventilators are in every room, and a cosier, cleaner, and more attractive set of students' quarters are not to be found in this country so far as our knowledge extends. I think we can safely say that we have the most home-like surroundings of any college in the United States. Our lanning Hall is a model of neatness and order. The food is good and well cooked, and the price of board very low indeed. Too much praise can not be awarded those having the mutter in charge for the thorough and business-like manner in which everything has been done,

We have on the roll upwards of eighty students-intelligent and enthusiastic. The prospects are that there will be a large increase in number before Winter. President Stein is winning golden opinions from all who come in contact with him as an able and conscientions worker. There is a full corps of teachers who are all in earnest in their work and who will spare no pains to make the college worthy of the parronage it now erjoys, and of the much larger patronage which we confidently expect in the near future.

Yours truly,

ific character of its divine pattern; (6) the peaalty upon which it was enjouned; (7) its divinimport; (8) the necessity of its influence; (9) the blessings upon its observance; (10) its support by all the principles that suppor other christian ordinauces; (11) its primitive practice. These also remain unanswered. My friend labored to evade the force of this by separating the occasion of feet-washing and the communion, in which he failed. We showed, however, that had be succeeded, it would not have invalidated the authority for feet-washing, since it was given to the same apostles to whom the communion was given; and if they were the representatives of the church in receiving the one, they must have been also in the other.

My 2ml, reason why the Brethren possess this 5th Characteristic was founded apon their principles of peace, long-suffering, &c. We showed the incompatibility of war with christianity by no less than thirty six arguments drawn from important facts, principles and passages of scripture too numerous to recapitulate. To these I had no respondent. My friend thought that because John told the soldiers to be content with their wages, that he justified christians in bearing arms—as though John had any right more than we to interfere with notional subdiers and police. He also thought because Abraham, Moses, &c., fought, that christians might do likewise—but we showed that his aradmitted according to the same principle, that christians might practice polygamy and many other things which were allowed to Abraham, Moses, and others. To this he did not respond.

My 31 reason why the Brethren possess this Char a teristic was, their faith, as manifested in prayer and anomiting the sick, according to James 5: 14, 17csome six or seven principles and arguments which remain anaiswered.

We noticed as a 6th Characteristic of the church of Christ, that it is his betrothed. Bride (Isa, 54); 5, 6; 2 Cor. 11; 2), and is consequently separated from unholy alliances.

My first reason why the Brothorn possess this characteristic was based upon their refusal to take oaths, supported by Matt, 5: 34-37, James 5: 12, urged by several additional argaments, to which I have had no respondent.

My 2d reason was that the Brethren are not identified with secret worldly societies, which I supported by seventien arguments, to which also had no respondent.

My lid reason why the Brethren possesses this characteristic, was their refusal to conform to the world in the costliness, and, the bashicic of their apparel, etc. 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10, 1 Pet 3. 3 %; Rom. 12; 2; James 4; 4; 1 John 2; 45, 16; of our sister's head covering 1 Cor. 11

My 4th reason was founded upon the Breth-They," No. This I supported by 6 sugamentto which Mr. R. did not respond

I noticed us a seventh characteristic, that the hurch is Christ's lody. I Cor. 12: 27, Eph. 1 15; 5; 23; Col. 1; US

My first reason why the Brethien presesthis characteristic, was bounded upon the fact that they acknowledge we head but Christ.

My 21 reason was, that their rules of discipline are those continued in the last will and testament of Christ - In addition to all this, we have proven our pseudiaraties by my friend himseth. We have taken the very chareles can fessed by him to be tone chare he sor desus Christ, and have shown by incontrovertible historic trath, giving anchor, book, page, etc., statements with which he has not dared to grapole. that they captized buttin in decine the remission of sins, by feeting numbers on and the trial of pertore, observed the laying on of hands and prayer after Juptism, the salutation of the "kiss of went as a matter of duty-John 13; 14, 15; (4) charify," refused to take outh-, and go to war, was evacuated without one detensive shot.

My friend does not like for me to call attention, at this stage of the debute, to the fact that I have really had no respondent. I admit that he has mis-applied my arguments, mis-stated my position, based arguments upon by justlesses which he has falsely ascribed to the Bo theen, and emplayed the course usually adopted by expert sophists, skeptics, and rafi lets in fighting Bible

His 8th negative argument was based upon the charge that we "have established a saving church ordinance out of a full meal," whereas we have shown that our "love-leasts" are the routgrowth as well as the cultivation and expression of social, christian affection and benevalence. Neither did we "establish" them, for we have shown them to be peculiar to the apostolir church. Jude 12.

This 9th negative argument was founded upon the charge that we "have established feetwashing as a church ordinance essential to salvation," while we have shown that Christ himself established it for those who were saved or pandoned, yet enforced it on l'eter under no less penalty than excision from his kingdom. John

His 10th negative argument was based upon the charge that our church government is unscriptural, yet he faded to condemn one feature of a by the scriptures.

BY GEORGE IT ZOLLEUS.

IN solemn mood I now survey the home, Where oft in youth my wnyward feet did

The verdure meadow by the flowing stream, The hills and streams how natural still they seem. Dear scenes of old, all greet my vision now, That witnessed once in youth my weal or woe The fields bunifigr and the pleasant lawn, Where oft I wondered in the morning dawn, Rise up before me in my glad surprise, As when I viewed them with my youthful eyes While swiftly musing o'er life's fleeting page. I meet my friends of yore advanced in age, With deeply dimpled cheeks and heads so gray The tokens of departing day. O what a fesson this of lite's decline,

And man's speedy exit from the shores of time: How brief the period from our youthful bloom, To heary age and the mondering tomb. Here first I heard the still small voice of love, The wooings of the Spirit from above. Which stirred my fongings for our Father' hou∗e,

Where they shine forever in their vernat bloom Our time glides onward as the rolling stream, Its scenes all canish as the nightly dream, The friends we checish 'mid the smiles of youth Some desire sin, some wear the budge of truth Then vanish scenes of earth, its joys decline; I long to reach that better hand and clume.

CONTINUED. In the graveyard I'm sitting in sedema reflection, "For a lonely retreat:

While scenes of the past come in bright recoldection.

And life's story repeat. Here the friends of my youth in death's chainbers are bying.

And mondering to dust, Years have gone since they passed through the orded of dying,

EXAMINATION OF SOME OBJEC-TIONS AGAINST THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BIBLE.

DY LEWIS OF HEMMER,

NUMBER 111.

HIIIS number may seem interesting to my readers as a great many may not know that our translation in generaluse is as imperfect as it is, and that men will rather conceal the truth and keep the world in ignorance than give a faithful translation and then conform their practice thereto, they will chance rather thus change their practice to the word of God. The "Truth Sceker" asks the following pertinent questions $r\Delta tenot$ the errors and innermises, of the Pible sufficient to cause thinking prople to doubt its divine origin? To it sociable that with these there is a possi billity of making mistakes and committing arong Wesemonall the books of the The decopied and recognised many times! And is it not true that they were trunscript of transcript, with errors and charges creeping in with every new copy (4) and discremiting page 1, a not a new re-

Did not the American Bible Society. in 1847, appoint a committee of its members to prepare a standard edition of King James' version free from errors? And did they not prepare such an edition, correcting, as they confessed, twenty-four thousand errors? And did not the fear of the consequences of making | I did not fully understand, and that is. so many changes alarm them so greatly ["did he (Blayney) not reform the "text that they decided to defer making the corrections? And are they not this day continuing to circulate in vast numbers. a book, which, by their own acknowlerrors? Is it not true that the Bible Revision Committee in England, which for nearly ten years has been industriously engaged in making changes and improve ment in the revealed word, given out the information that the present version contains some one hundred and fifty thousand errors of one kind and another? When they shall have completed their work, and the changes are all made, when they shall have the improved word of God all completed, is there not danger that it will be so changed from the Bible we knew in our childhood, that we can scarcely recognize it as the same production?"

What I have quoted in this number may seem weighty to many men who are as destitute of critical accument as the "Truth Seeker," but the philosopher sees no difficulty here, or argument. How does it come that the writer knows all that is going on among—the translators, and is ignorant of the fact that many Christians do not recognize King James' version and have changed the translators with fraud? Is the writer ignorant of the fact that thousands of Christians have suffered martyrdom rather than acknowledge the authority of the church; to altar or change the word of God? Does he think any Christmu will sametion these forgeries?

But what has that to say about the gennine! Does the writer not admit that men have changed the original, which is virtually an admission that the gornine or malice or is of divine origin. I will venture the asser tion that he cannot do any letter than many Christians have done. There never was a translation in existence free from these errors, and it is highly probable if the men that say there are so many thousand errors would have any less if they gave us a translation free of error—as they would suppose. Philological accuracy is not an essential ele ment in any translation, if it were, no man could translate from one language to another, for there are many words in a language that have no exact counterpart in another language. The very terst of translations, will always admit of improvement, and the translation that cour eys the ideas the clearest is the best. Take for illustration King James' translation (an admitted corrupted translation.) and any ordinary mind can discover the truth. It is an easy matter for learned men to detect the spurious from the genuine, for it is much harder to change written documents so as to change their import as it is to forge counterfeit money. In fact it is an impossibility to change the import of any book. There may be two or more books in circulation claiming a certain anthor and then to ascertain which is the genuine, might be men have charged for their conveniences | more difficult, yet even then its generally The writer's arguments, commit suicide leasy to detect the spurious. If it is a divine and perfect production, can it possibly be right to tamper with it so extensively?" This extensive innipering is all imagination, and if any, one doubts this let him get a copy of the original or these improved versions and compare them. The fraudulently designs of translators have always been exposed by other Christians, so it is useless to blow so much on this point-it only manifests great ignorance or dishonesty.

THE ORIGIN OF BAPTISM-POUR. ING AND SPRINKLING.

ICY A. H. ELLIS.

N ordinance forever, is an ordinance A continuing through the longest time in which it can be an ordinance; that is, throughout the whole continuance of the dispensation of which it is a part; thus the ordinance of haptism is an ordinance as long as time lasts; no man has any right to do away with it. or to change it in the least. It was given us by the Savior. John the Baptist, and the aposites.

It appears that John the Baptist was about six mouths older than the Savior; ling; he laid the plan; he taught the peathe river dordan; he served his Maste. as long as he lived; he took no pay for his services. He owed his head and died.

The very nature of the act of baptism edescribed in the New Testament, im lies that it was administered in places adapted for the inconersion of persons in The fact that every age of the history of the church, and every land where the gospel in the early days spread, bear restimony to the existence of structnes especially intended for immersion, am impressive testimonial that in all age the prevailing conviction of his professed followers has recognized the nagire of the ordinance as the Savior appointed it. The statements of early fluistian writers, as to the mode in which and the places where baptism was administered, is not to be confounded with the doubtful truth of their views as the officiery of looptism. The one is smatter of eye-sight; the other of opinion; a distinction carefully observed in judging of the authenticity of all hismical records and in weighing all testimany of eye witnesses. The positively visting semetures now visited and examined by the Christian tomists are illustrated as well as confirmatory of the statements of those ancient witnesses.

The New Testament statements indiente that three distinct kinds of places were resorted to by Christ's mostles for the jail yard at Philippi. The testimo my therefore of the inspired records is that any place adequate for immersion is appropriate for the ordinance. The apostles used boths when there was no stream handy that contained [identy of] water for the immersion of the whole body. Thus Cornelius, the Roman centurion, was baptized in a bath, by the apostle Peter, also the Philipian jailer by the apostle Paul. The earliest known writer after Linke, was Clement of Rome; he says, "laquism may be performed in ariver, in the sea, or in a lake, so it is done in the name of the Holy Trinity." Tertullian describes the ordinance of baptism as being three actions, and where the water is of full depth to immerse the whole body. Ambrose established an order of Scripture reading. singing and prayers, in the language of the people. He baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and the Hely Spirit. He says this was the primitive mode prior to the year A. D. 360.

the teleteness by figure to the three days burial of Christ, Steabosays trin on mersion was the ancient mode up to the eighth century. Dr. Wall says the way of trine immersion or plunging the lead of the person three times into the water. was the general practice of all antiquity. The practice of tribe immersion prevailed in the West as well as in the East, fill the fourth conneil of Toledo, which, acting under the advice of Gregory the Great, in order to settle some disputes which had arisen, decreed that henceforth only one immersion should be used in lage tism. Who had any right to make this change? Did Ennomins the inventor of single immersion, or Gregory the Great? The ordinance of a threefold immersion was given us by the apostles.

It would seem that in France, in the eighth century, many of the clergy had in cases where immersion was impracticable or very difficult, volunteered to modify their practice by pouring or sprinkling, as the case might require. Thus Pope Stephen H., granted it, and also said that in a case of illness or an infant that the practice should be held valid, if it was done in the name of the Holy trinity; the Pope requires three actions in baldism. But what right has he or any other man to change the uncient mode of baptism, as it was given us by the apostles? Take notice this learned Basinge allows sprinkling only in case of imminent danger. This order was not noticed much, but was practiced by some that were too nice to go into the water. Shortly after this order by Poper Stephen, there was a law passed in France Eugland, and Germany, to compel dip ping, and without any provision for cases of necessity. These law-makers looked back to the ancient mode, and declared by a large vote that immersion was the mode in which our ancestors in the fatherland was haptized. This is manifest, not only from the history of baths, pools. and fonts, but from the earliest historical records. King Edwards the VI., and Elizabeth were both immersed.— Tyudai says, "The plunging into the water signifieth that we die and are buried with Christ. This is what dipping the performance of Laptism. River in the water doth betoken." It has ever shores as at Rethaliara and Philippit | Leen since Christ, or the apostles, that some public poods as at derusalem and on the will take one view of baldism, and some road to Gaza; and private baths, as in another. But the candid mind, and the the centurion's house at Cesarca and in reading man or woman who is informed in ancient history, that is not partial, must say, that immersion is the ancient mode, and all other innovations has been invented by poor mortal man. When the true spirit of Christ's simple word is awakened, there stands before the new believer in Asia, Greece, Italy, France, Germany, England, everywhere alike, the laptismal pools of the early Chris tian times, seeming to exclaim "This is the way the Master trod; walk ye in it." The Christian visiting Palestine, seeking at the spot where Jesus lowed his head beneath the stream of Jordan, to instruct his faith and to learn his Master's will, finds at each step, following Christ's apostles westward, new and constantly increasing testimonials, in the existing baths, and fonts, as to his appointment in the sedemn ordinance of baptism.

Dr. Judson, in the apostolic times the administrators hand, howed forward, aided by that genutlection which instinctively comes to one's aid, when attempting to how in that position, until his head was submerged, and then tose! by their covn effort. Thus it seems that the ancients baptized by three actions

Father, and Son, and Holy Ghost, according to the will of Christ by the Spirit! Remember that God hath said, "your coverant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand." Claist hath said, "he who be lieveth not the Son, shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

THE TWO ROADS.

[T was New Year's night. An aged man was standing at a window. He raised his mournful eyes toward the deep blue sky, where the stars were floating, like white lilies on the surface of a clear, calm lake. Then he east them on the earth, where few more hopeless beings than himself now moved toward their certain goal—the tomb. Already be had passed sixty of the stages which lead to it, and he had brought from his journey nothing but error and remorse. his health was destroyed, his mind vacant, his heart sorrowful, and his old age devoid of comfort.

The days of his youth rose up in a vision before him, and he recalled the solemn moments when his father had placed him at the entrance of two roads, ong leading into a peaceful sunny land, covered with a fertile harvest, and resounding with soft, sweet songs; while the other conducted the wanderer into a deep, dark cave, whence there was no issue, where poison flowed instead of water, and where serpents hissed and crawled. PROPOS of what Mrs. Livermore's late lecture on the above important question, and the Davenport Democrat thus sensibly makes answers:

Teach them self-reliance.

Teach them to make bread,

Teach them to make skirts.

Teach them to foot up store bills.

Teach them not to wear false hair. Teach them not to paint or powder.

Teach them to wear thick, warm

Teach them how to wash and iron

Bring them up in the way they should

Teach them how to make their own

Teach them that a dollar is only a hundred cents,

Teach them how to cook a good meal of victuals.

Teach them every day dry, hard, praetical common sense.

Teach them how to dara stockings and sew on buttons. Give them a good substantial common school education. Teach them to say no, and mean it, or yes, and stick to it.

Teach them to regard the morals and not the money of beaux.

Teach them to wear calico dressesand do it like a queen.

Teach them all the mysteries of the kitchen, the dining room and the parlor. Teach them to have nothing to do with intemperate and disolute young

Teach them that the more one lives within his income, the more they will Teach them the further one lives beyond their income, the nearer they get to the poorhouse.

Rely upon it that upon your teaching depends in a great measure the weal or woe of their after life.

Teach them to cultivate a garden, and drive a road team or farm wagon.

Teach them that G of made them in his own image, and no amount of tight lacing will improve the model.

Teach them that a good steady mechanic without a cent is worth a dozen call-patent leafers in broadcloth.

Teach them the essentials of life-truth, honesty, uprightness - and at a suitable age let them marry.

to break that oath and stop the progress of sin The oath is sin, execute it is sin, to abrogate the oath is a virtue."

The late Joseph Haven, professor in the Theological Seminary, Chicago, III., and in Amherst College, says on this topic:

"Suppose, for example, I have promised to do what is in itself unlawful—to commit crime, to lie, to steal, to commit murder, or in any way to violate the laws of society or the laws of God-am I under obligation to keep such a promise? Unquestionably not. There can be no obligation on any man to do wreng. It is a contradiction of terms to say that a man anyhi to do what he ought not to do. In case the unlawlidness of the act contemplated was known at the time of the promise was made, then the promise itself was a guilty one, and the sooner it is broken the better. The guilt of such promises, it has been well said, lies not in the breaking, but in the making,

"In the case the unlawfulness was not known but the thing promised was, at the time, sup. posed to be lawful, this supposed lawfulness was ma lifestly an implied condition of the promise; and a failure of the condition unquies a failure of the obligation. The promise is to be taken in its plain and obvious intent; and if there was no intention to do a wrong act, no promise to do a known wrong, of course there is no obligation in the promises,

"This was the case with Herod, whose promise was to give his daughter whatever she might ask; but who in making that promise, had no thought of her asking what she did. In taking the life of John the Baptist under such circumstances, that ruler committed the crime of murder in order to avoid breaking a promise which in reality he never made; and which, if made, he had not only no obligation, but no right to keep. In like manner a promise obtained by any misrepresentation or fraud on the part of the person receiving the promise, is not binding, when such fraud or misrepresentation is discovered, masmuch as the condition on which the promise was made proves false."

God insists that his children shall not swear at all. If they swear, they break the law of God, and the reader knows what abides on him who breaks the law. No one asks. Is it wrong not to swear? but is it right to swear at all? This God answers in the negative. Then since it is wrong to swear, when a man turns his face Christ-ward, he is bound to leave the evil of swearing behind kim with all other evils. If ne has sworn to murder a man, must be keep his oath? If he had fellowship with a hand of robbers, having sworn to aid them in plandering, must be now rob and plunder in order to keep his with? If Masons are empowered from on High to administer oaths, then are also all other societies likewise empowered. If Masons can admini ter outlis to be kept inviolate before God, then can any other society, no difference what its nims and objects may be.

The object of swearing a man into Masonry is to hold him to it. The of the results of such swearing is, secresy. Now if a man should commit murder, and bring misery upon a dear family, then turns to God, must be containe to ruffect misery just because he did what God says he should not do? So with the Masonic oath. God says, "Swear not at all." Now because he did that which God says he should not do, shall be continue to regard the result of that swearing? ORIGINALITY

The boast of origin dily belongs emphatically to the ignorant unlearned, and unthoughtful. It may be we thinked what do nev r rend or heard, but we might to know there is much to read and be heard with which we need require in contact and of which we know nothing. We liberty and chargeth not, shall have a sear in lought to know, too, that, because like causes meaven and hear the sweet music of angelig produce like effects, others may have applied song. But it does say, he that sweareth to has pline same force of mand, for the same question and therefore must have obtained the same our clasion which we have, although we never real nor bear hat them.

> People who read much and think little are not likely to explor thoughts of which they have mover read nor heard; while those who medicate, where lively or reason, much and of which this have never read mar heard.

Probably we have all been more or less surso ised by the fact that when we had reached a of the one is a way deferent from any of which or large that a ferwards meons creation reader, or at public specking, we would find out so' what we thought was original with us hall non though of years as deeven contains he

At our birth we are all (qual; no one is snperior or inferior in power or merit-intellectually and morally we are a cipher. All we shall arer know we must learn. This is not only teur of us now, but it is true of all who have fixed before vs. The way some people talk, though, it would seem nothing even was known before they existed, that knowledge, too, was horn with them. Such maintain that others, who know anything of language, mathematics or science which some one else has previously known and expressed, are frauds, quacks, impostors, plagiarists, etc., forgetting that all they the consumers) know they have learned.

Some persons, when they hear a good sermon areached, a good lecture delivered, or see a good sticle or book written, always say, 'lie stole that from -- it is not original."

When persons are so very free in condemning others for stealing because they have something good, we very much suspect then that those who are so ready with accusation, do not have any thing good themselves except they have stolen it, for our only rule by which to judge others is by ourselves. Is not the man who comprehends a thought just as much the nightful owner of it as the person who impartand to him? He has not paid the same price for it that his predecessor did. The price of an alea, in every case, is the necessary study and atention to comprehend it, and he, who houstly and manlike pays this full price for the article, has an absolute right to dispose of it as his own.

EVANGELISTIC WORK.

Nevangelist is one who is anthorized to A -preach the gospel, but has not the care and responsibilities of a church. Timothy was commanded to "do the work of an evang-list," and in obedience to this command he seems to have done his work well. There are still evangelists in the house of God, who, through their perseverance and stendfastness, are winning many souls to Christ,

A meeting of all evangelists, missionaries, connsellors, overseers, workers has been called m the Solomon's Creek Church, Indiana. We do not understand this meeting to be called in the interest of any class in the church, not to marp authority over the church, but to confor with one another in reference, to the best method of doing evangelistic work, and how to apply the pure principles of our holy religion. When brethren and sisters meet and talk over their differences in the spirit of the Master and g ande all prejudnes and notions, regarding schother as being purchased by the some recions blood, adopted by the same holy mus, and non-rished by the same vine, then trdes and divisions rapidly vanish. Who does at love the peace of John 14:27?

Pale, Calvert, Hendricks, Buckalew, Stump. formy, Workinger, Brown, Hoover, Loebr. sent others whose manes we cannot mention. These went forth with the "swood of the spirit," bank to d for the many valent soldiers. Not | for forty millions. they may be found among the humble walkways broden by there. Let these who have tooth, winds a sympathy for the weary ministers, beliege. Let have who trees the association of which ied by there. May all be benefited the first thereally and religiously that ost cut in the new or the Lord.

Note wearing the foregoing the Proposition recting. They we think would be well Schomon's Cook, Ind., we that We would like to see the Ogaris Creek of excellence that meeting, for there are many commendable features in that Plan. We believe our Brethren generally will do that which is fair and just in this matter, and in all things that are good and pure we wish to lend a helping hand.

DECOYS.

BUTCHER wants a decoy sheep, one that will lead others where he wants them, so he singles out one, pets it, fondles it until it will follow him. With this pet sheep, he will decoy or lead his sheep to the slaughter pen. Thousands of sheep are thus led by a single sheep unto death, but alas! the decoy sheep finally goes where all the others have gone. He gets old, is fattened, killed and hung up where those before him hung.

Fish will not so much as nibble at an empty hook. The delicious bait must cover it, before the finny fellow will take it in his mouth. The decoy must be complete before the fisherman can realize a dainty dish for his dinner. So sin is covered with many a bland smile, a shake of the hand, or a "hin do you do," in order to mislead. The devil does not keep a stock of decoys very long. So soon as they are detected by the "wise" and the "elect" he turns them out and introduces new ones. In the hannts of pleasure, each year he introduces now decoys The method of cheating so successful last year is supplanted by a new one this year.

Philip Costo went to the city, and, being a stranger, he looked around for some fine looking stylish gentleman, with whom to spend the time and see the sights. He soon finds him. The evenings are long, so the men proposes croquet. It is delightful! Time passes so rapidly! But it soon becomes too dry for them on the commons, so some interesting billard table is sought. The nights are too short, so a part of the day is spent in the "pleasurable amusement." Philip learns rapidly, soon thinks he is the best player in the State, if not in the world. He bets and loses, bets again and loses. Money nearly all gone, ashamed to go home, and too lazy to work, he stakes his last dollar. It goes where the others have gone. No money, no food, no friends, the fine gentleman, the decoy, gone to finish another Philip Costo. Poor Philip! decoyed in to play croquet, he was easnly led from bad to worse until his found himself a pour outcast, a lonely, friendless boy in a great city. Decoyed by a wolf, and left a carcass, he goes down to the river, plunges into it. and—well the next day the papers read: "Round, m——River, Philip Casto: Supposed to have committed suicide.

thus the tracts will be distributed from many different points. Suppose you have a donor in every church district, then it follows there will be a distributor of tracts in every church district, one who can have the opportunity to scatter the good seed out into the highways and hedges and into the families of those who do not attend our meetings,

Thirdly, the donation never becomes exhausted. Oh! what a grand opportunity for every child of God whom the Lord has blessed with a little of this world's good to work for Jesus, not only while he lives, but for long, long years after he has passed away. Just think of it! Though the body lies mouldering in the dust, and the spirit gone to God, who gave it, still the leaven is at work in the world. If it is so (and why not) that in eternity we are conscious of transpiring events here, what a joy to know after we have passed over there that the little we have done to help on the good cause is still at work, and through this auxiliary to the preached word, souls are being brought to a saving knowledge of God's free grace. What a ready opportunity your plan of Brethren's Tract Society is to LAY UP TREASURES IN HEAV-EN. As time rolls on the more will be accomplished through our donation, and if any one is to be rewarded according to the deeds done in the body, surely the reward will be in proportion to the good results accomplished through our donations. As the good continues so shall our reward be continuous. As the interest here continues year by year so will our interest continue in heaven, not however, as a reward of merit, but of continued love and grace from God, simply because we did what it was our duty to do with the Lord's goods. We bespeak for the enterprise success and shall heartily do what we can to help on the move. In a matter of this kind we do not stop to inquire will it affect our reputation any way in our public capacity to lend a helping hand. Duty is always paramount to reputation or worldly praise. As we believe the Tract Society is one of the channels through which we may do good, our conscience condemns us not, and if our conscience does not condemn us God will not-that is so long as convictions of conscience are the result of obcdience to truth, and the outgrowth of Yours hopefully,

C. J. HEAD ANSWERED.

Will some one be kind enough to explain Heb. 10:26?

WILL give my humble opinion in regard to This question. The 26th verse reads as follows: "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of sin, there remaineth me more sacrifice for sins." If we sin willfully we must certainly, know if to las a sin before we do it. Therefore knowing it to be a sin and go and do it, we sin against the Holy Gliest, which is the unpurdentide sin, and this being the case, certainly there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin. By reading the 25th verse you will plainly see that the apostle has told us "not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together" and so on. Then if we do forsake the assembling of ourselves together, we do sin willfully, when we have everything comfortable in the way of warm clothes, and good conveyance, good health, etc. Hi we will read from the 21th to the 25th verse, and see what we may look for if we san willfully we certainly will be very careful how we do things will "this mortid put on immortality," that our conscience condemis.

THE POWER OF GOD.

IN JAMES WIRL.

"For Lam not ashamed of the Respel of Christ, for it is the power of Mad unto salvation to every one that believe the to the Jew tost and also to the Greek," Bonn, 1:16.

HME power of God is manifested in different. ways throughout the works of nature and in the economy of grace. The object of the through the agency of divine power, and this | terested in tract work. The soul of a Germini consists in the union of the human amb dryme natures in the person of the Mesiah.

Christ attested his power by the many miracles which he performed, having entire control of the elements of nature. Water was converted to wme, and the wind and waves obeyed him, the dead were raised to life and refinned to their homes and families, and all diseases, that flesh is here to were instantly removed by his the minds of the people by his speech was indeed wonderful. "He spake as never monand obey it.

is my seloved Son in whom I am well pleased." I

The transfiguration of Christ on the mount is another instance of divine power; and Peter. James, and John were allowed to witness this scene and hear words uttered by the Enther similar to those at his baptism. This revelation of God enabled Peter to reply to the question put to him by Jesus in the manner he did, for flesh and blood had not revealed this unto him. Another manifestation was the establishment of his ghurch on earth, which is proof against any attack made by all the combined powers of hell, as all power in heaven and earth is given unto Christ.

The power of God was displayed at the time of the crucifixion by the supernatural phenomna of nature, the sun was shrouded in darkness. the veil of the temple was rent in twain from top to bottom, the rocks burst asunder, and many of the saints arose from their graves and appeared in Jerosalem.

The resurrection of Christ is an exhibition of the power of God, and to those who were to be a witness of his resurrection be showed himself alive by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

Christ's ascension into heaven was a mighty display of infinite power. His body ascended boward the Zenith in direct apposition to the power of gravity. The promise to those who love his appearing is that he will come again in like manner as he departed. But to those who do not love his appearing, he will come with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking veng ance on them that know not Hod and obey not the gospel.

The descent of the Holy Spirit on the day of pentecost was a verification of the promise given by Christ our divine head which is to bring to remembrance all things, that will be to the interest or acometion of the cause of Christ.

Philip's Fountain, and the Pools of Jerusalem.

[From the "Christian Shandard" by special Arrangement [

BOUT five miles south west of Jerusalem is A a fountain, which is called by the Arabs Am et Hanigeh, but which has been known by Christians, since the close of the 15th century. as Philip's Fountain. Since this date, tradition has located here the haptism of the en much, having previously located it at a fountain called Am Dilweb, about three miles north of

So far as water supply is concerned, the socalled Philip's Fountain is admirably suited to the event. The spring, which issues from the hillside high above the road, is led down the hill to a wall of louidsome masonry, through which it flows in a stone sport, and falls into a stone watering-trough. It overflows this trough at one end and flows thence by a conduit into a pool, 20 or 30 steps distant. This pool is 41 feet long by 20 wide, and 8 feet deep. It is partly out in the natural rock, and partly built of masoury. The water is drawn from it to arrigate some beautiful gardens of fruits and vegetables below.

This pool is as good a baptistery as if it were made for the purpose, and it could not have failed to attract the ennuch's attention, had be ridden by it; but there is one serious objection tous being accepted as the place of the enunch's haptism; it is not on "the road that leads from Jerusalem to H. a. True, it is possible to go to Gaza by that way, as is clear from the fact that we came to Jerusalem that way from Gaza. But we came by a way, for a few miles beyond this fountain, ly which no clear a could possibly go, and by which I am sure there never can have been a chariot road. True, we aught have come by a road far smoother, it we had ascended the valley leading upota the fountafed also, and in this we follow him. For then ain, instead of crossing precipetons falls to shorten the distance. But such a corruptible be swallowed up by the une mrupti | though it may have been practicable, and probe ble." This road lies to the south of the valley in which Pulip's Fount in hes, and it leads by way of Bel Jibrin, ouce called Eleutheropolis. I think that on this road, and on this alone, should be our search for the place of the baptism in question.

This consideration is equally fatal to the older tradition which located the event at the bear the whole burden in these things. Had fountain north of Hebron; for that fountain is we tens of thousands of dollars, we might well | on the road, not to Gaza, but to Hebron. True, men may have traveled, at times, by way of Helmon to get to Gaza; but even if that were customary, the portion of the road in question would still be called the road to Hebron, and that section which leads off at almost a right angle from Helmon to Gaza, would not be called the road from Jerusalem to Gaza, but the road from Hobron to Gaza.

Fixing our mind, then, on the read to Gaza, Brethren will come forward with $100 each as we next consider three other conditions, made After his haptism in the rater of Jordan by a donation we will agee to put the tract work ancessary to the scriptures, to an identification corner is seven neer wide. M E. | Ward from Samaria, to intersect the road between the place and Jerusalem-for the text clearly implies that Philip came into the road VILSON translates as follows: "For the by an intersecting route, and not by going Worder God is living, and energetic, through deres dem. Ford, there must be space

On the road in question, all of these conditions are satisfactorily met. In the valley of Eliah, which the road to Gaza traverses for a mile or two, and crosses, about 18 miles from Jerusalem, is the brank mentioned in my last letter, from which David took the stones as he approached Coliath. It is a rapid mountain stream, filled, like all such streams, with alternating shoals and pools, and furnishing admir. able places for munersion when flowing at all. It flows now about six menths in the year, and it was probably perenaial LS00 years ago; for the well known decrease of rainfall within that period, and the less favorable distribution of it through the year, has very greatly diminished the flow of wider in all the streams of the country. Here, then was the water necessary to meet the first combition.

Secondly, there are many foot-paths leading from Sumarue southward, which intersect this road between Jerusalem and the valley of Elah. those passing within four or five miles of Jerusalem being the more favorable for travel. By any of these Philip may have traveled, and any of them would meet the third condition—it would give him ampletime, after be joined the ennuch, for the instruction which preceded the baptism. My conclusion, then definite and assured, is that the eunuch was bapdized in the brook which flows through the valley of Elah. The remark of the angles, "This is desert," refers to the place in which Philip would find the eanuch, and it fully agrees with my conclusion: for the rough and rody hill-slopes traversed for a few nodes before reaching the valley, was, in Jewish parlance, a desert. It could not refer to the plain reaching from the foot of the halls to Gaza; for that was a series of grain fields, and most of it sout present.

In this connection I will write that I have intended to say concerning the facilties for baptizing, in and around derusalem. There never was a city. I suppose, without a running stream. and must from its aquedoct, so well supplied as Jerusalem. Pesides a good supply of rain-water, cisterns under private property, many of which to the present day afford excellent water, there were no less than seven artificial pools accessible tothe public. The first of these that I shall mention, is the one called Upper Gibon, by Christians but known to the Arabs under the name Birket Momilla. It is 735 yards due west of the Joppa gate, in the midst of a piece of smooth ground descending toward the city, partly used as a perade ground for Turkish soldiers, and partly as a Mohammedan gravevard. The ground slopes toward it from the north-east around to the south-west, and it drains about a square mile of surface, perhaps more. It is supplied entirely from the surface drain. My measurements of it nearly agree with those of Dr. Barclay. It is 316 feet in length, by 215 in width, whole its depth, measured in three different places, is 19, 20, and 22 teel respectively. It is walled with good masonry, and was comen tod, but most of the cement is now gone. It casentarely dry when we saw it, its, water having been drawn into the pool of Hezekiah inside the city, with which it is connected by an underground conduct. We saw and measured the mouth of this conduct, in the bottom of the pool at its east oul. The conduit comes to the surface not more than 200 yards from the pead, and consistent the ende of the road nearly by the Joppa Gate, where it goes under the gooded again in order to mintain its downward slopes. Mr. Hornslein, keeper of the Mediterranean Holel, told me that be lead seen the connection of this conduit with the pool of Hezekiah, when some excavations were being made a few years ngo, within the

These facts establish in my mind the identity of this combut and these peaks with those mentioned in 2 Kings 15: 17 and 20: 20 Such is the relative level of the two pools, that though the Gibon can empty itself, entirely into the Hezekish, the former only he fided without overflowing the latter. It is now never full except in very wet Winters, and usually it goes dry early in the Summer. It affords to alties for immersing by means of two flight of - one ships, descending from top to halton. The of these, at the south-west corner, is five and owhalf feet wide, and the other, at the southeast these steps afforded the means, and when it was deeper it was quite practicable to immerse on the steps themselves by placing the cardi-

ANOTHER MEMBER GONE.

11()W sad are our feelings when the message of death reaches our ears! And why should it not? It must be a hard heart indeed that cannot be moved when death speaks, and summons a loved one from time to elernity. There is an awful solemnity that hovers around the cossution of human lite. How respectful we should be to the departed! How ready to render the last service of friendship and love to them and those they have left to mourn their departure! Soon, ab I soon our last hours will come when we shall forever retire from the world's stage of action. Let us, therefore, remember that we must die. Let us, like true Christians, live as we will wish we had lived when we depart.

This afternoon, July 24th, we attended the funeral services of an aged relative, a sister in the Church of Chait. Susan Shockey was harn in the year 1800. She knew what sorrow and affliction is. She was the mother of an only child-a daughter who died a number of rears ago. Later her husband died also. Both died in the faith, having united with the Church. Our sister was left alone, but not at all in want, being surrounded with an abundance of this world's good things. Sight field, total blindness followed, and under this great affliction, she ended her few remaining years, But she had joined the Church rather early in life, and her Christian hope was her greatest comfort. She rests now, we trust, with those who "sleep in desus."

The funeral discourse was preached in Prices Meeting-house, by brother D. F. Good, and others, from the words of the Revelator; "What are these?" The speaker spoke of John's vision on the 1sle of Patmos-what John saw in Heaven—the company of those who are saved through much tribulation-trials are a means to bring some near to Goil-we are all bound for eternity-religion, pure and undented, our means of preparation for eternity—our hope in the believer's death—the importance of the unconverted forming to God.

The body of the decreased was interred in the burying-ground near by the Meeting house in the presence of a large circle of relatives and supatoring frends.

OUR COUNCIL MICITING.

On the 31st altimo, we met in quarterly conneil at the Welty Meeting-house in the softhern end of the Antictam congregation. After the items of bismess were received and arranged, the inceting was opened to the usual devotional manner. Our lit-loop then addressed the meeting, directing aftention to the imporclandly admonshed to treat each other warmone is speed and be otherly love which become a circa as the profess to be joined together with both and no per orring Cospel.

considered, and is one that concerns our entire fraternity. When Trine Immersion, or any other cardinal doctrine of the Church is strongly advocated, it encounters opponents and disputers. So inside the church when rules of Ultristian duty are insisted upon, as non-conformity to the world, then too opponents arise. But brothren and sisters, let us contend for the Faith. Our work may soon be done, and we be called home to our Father's house above. How consoling to depart with the knowledge of having tried hard to do our stuty. Conformity to the word in our feelings, and conduct, and appearance, are bad signs. We are "strangers and pilgrims" on earth. Let us act so. Let us love the church and its quiet, humble life, that we may escape the "wrath to come."

OUR SUNDAY SERVICES.

Our meeting on the 3rd inst. was at Prices M. H. The 11th chapter of Matthew was read. The last three verses were chosen by brother Snyder who spoke of the Great Invitationhrist our sufficient Savior—all who are weary of the ways and rewards of sin can find rest-—the Gospel yoke must-be worn—nn casy yoke and light burden for the willing.

While the speaking continued a crash was beard in the woods, surrounding the Meetinghouse. A large tree fell to the earth, the decayed top which struck the shaft of our bishop's carriage. Our brother was not at the meeting owing to the infirmities of advancing age, but his wife, our sister, and an attendant were present. The noble horse, though a strong and lifeful animal, did not break his rein, and soon became quieted. There seemed to be no damage beside a broken shaft and torn trace which were soon adjusted. The tree had been tried by many storms, but to-day it fell when the air was apparently calm. Serious indeed might have been the result, but we believe the Lord protects those that trust in 11mm. This circumstance was and is a sermon to us all and worthy of our study and our gratitude to God for His wonderful care over us. This calls to mind another circumstance which shows forth the providence of God, and His protection over them that love Him. I clip the account from the daily Bultimore American:

WAYNESHORO, PA., July 14 .- "A very serious accident occurred about five miles south of this place, near the Western Maryland Railroad, yesterday noon. After religious services closed at the Danker Baptist Meeting house (Welfy's). many persons resorted to a stream of water about a half mile distant, where two persons were baptized, in accordance with the firsth of the Danker Baptists. Shortly after this impressive ceremony was ended some carriages were in waiting under the shadow of a great elm at the roadside, near which was a plank bridge. The horse and carriage of Mr. J. For the above contributions we hope the kindhearted givers will receive the blessing of the Lord, and you have my warmest thanks and fervent prayers in your behalf. Your words of encouragement are highly approciated. We hope that others will follow the example of the above brethren and sisters between this and the middle of September, as one-fifth of the amount has not been raised. We hope the good Lord, who is able to give you back double the amount you contribute, will put it into your hearts to aid me in this extreme case. I have a personal acquaintance with many congregations which I hope will yet, like the Black River Congregation, nobly respond, and I will try in the future to remember your favor. God bless you.

For the benefit of these who might believe what Mr. Hay says that Jesus did not teach the anointing the sick with oil, and that the Brethren do practice blasphemy in performing their duty, let us examine the following passages of Scripture: "The former treatise have I made. O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which he was taken up after that he through the Holy Ghost gave commandment to the aposites whom he had chosen," Acts 1:12. James, who was an apostle, in his epistle general to the Church, says, "Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church and let them pray over hun arounting him with loit in the name of the Lord," James 5: 14. We here become a spectacle to men and to angels in the conflict which bas grown out of misapprehension of our true mission. It is weakness to contend that but one costume can represent the Christian life; and greater weakness to fight for a change which cannot possibly represent Christ's ownership of us a whit better. If all the seed of Abraham were Isaacs and not some Ishmaels, dress might as safely be left to the individual as his daily meals. But "five are wise, and five are foolish," and for the sake of the foolish and carnal we must have authoritative restrictions.

With the results of sending furth good tracts and papers written in flaming letters on the canopy of heaven, must of us would stand amazed, and wonder why we have all our lives been so slothful in this work. Surely goodness and mercy will follow such as deny themselves for the kingdom of heaven.

Will some sister in each congregation take it in hand to canvass for the "Tract Society?" Sisters, your hearts are open to the poor and the unsaved; what will you do towards giving them good tracts and papers? A day or two spent in collecting dimes and dollars for the Tract Society" will not lose their reward.

Northing is more assuring of the righteousness of a cause than that unceasing efforts must be put furth to arouse the people to its importance. Burr Robbins and P. T. Barnum can get a crowd and a hearing on short notice, but a righteons cause must plead long and hard, Jesus, though possessed of all power, could not make some stubborn hearts submit.

Ir you desire to have the faith and practice of the Brethren perpetuated throughout your gen. erations, if you desire your children's children should be faught and teach what you are taught and teach, secure a share in the Brethren's Tract Society. Whatever you put in it will remain there when you, your children, your children's children and even when their grandchildren have passed away. When the full amount of your donation has been paid in tracts and papers to you, and then to your children, and again to your grand children, there remains still the same fund for their heirs there was in the beginning. In no way can you hand down to ages to come a legacy of such great value, blessings of such a divine character, as by depositing a little of your wealth in the Brethren's Tract Society.

THE Seventh Day Advent Tract Society of But le Creek Michigan, sent out free during the year ending Aug 1st, 1879, 717,123 pages of tracts, and gave away 77,192 papers. More than 1000 copies of their periodicals in the American, French, Swedish, Danish, German and Italian languages are being remailed each week. This shows how active the members are, and with what zeal they propagate their peculiar tenets. Each member gives one feath of his earnings for the support of Missions and Tract work.

It is a fact that not a single author in the Brotherhood, so far as we know, possesses much of this world's goods. We have many good writers, sound thinkers, but they lack the means to publish their works. These subscriptions will enable the Managers to publish many of them, and the donors to give them an extensive circulation. There are at this time many tracks prepared by able and expenenced Brethren waiting for means to pay be publication. Shall these lie dominant or will you deposit a few dollars and just them to MATTHEW wrote his treet about 31 year-after Christ ascended to beggen. Mark wrote his alout the same time. Duke wrote his about a year earlier, and Paul wrote his tract for the Brechren in Galatia about muetech years after Christ had left the earth. Paul was quite a tract writer, having written at least fourier tracts. These have, with those of others, be n collected and put into look form and given the name, "New Testament". This book contains the words of the Holy Sparit, and these words are designed to make a noan wive unto salve trun. These woods "rightly divided" are designed as the power of God unto salvation. They are to be sent forth, whether written of spoken, to bring sumers to Christ who about on save. Then tracts were viriten with pen an' ink, and the process of multiplying them was very slow, but it was in keeping with their method of farming. Now grain raising is far, very far alread of the Padestine farming in the days of Christ and the Apostles. And since new methods of farming have come up, and machinery of all kinds have been invented to shorter man's labor, and mercase the wealth of the country, the art of printing could not lag behind, so it seeks to keep up and the result is that to-day many millions of copies may be taken from the same form. Ought we not be idess God for these noble privileges? Truly every heart should be grateful.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—Herthren (or Tunker) Churches possess the Bilde Characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus disciples feet.

J. W. Stein, Alliens.

D. B. Ray, Demes.

Ray's 20th Repay. Summary Brewn Concluded.

AUD sixth negative was based on the fact J that the Funker churches are not the churches of Christ, because they hold the popish broop of charch subration. This we proved by their own writer, Mr. Moore, in his Sale Ground, FP, where he makes pardon and getting into the church the same thing; that we are pluckof from Satan by entering into the church. Al-10, our friend claimed that "the terms of salvabon and membership in Christ's Churches are the same?" The Public would have "lively dones" "built up a spiritual house"—materials boroughly prepared, and then placed into the building. According to this ductrine, all ex-Ept Tunkers are lost. To this argument Mr. Stem made no attempt to reply, except a bare votice in his recapitulation, where he charges filledy that we misrepresented the Tunker prstion. So the Tunkers stand side by side with the great Itomish agastasy in holding that all totale of their own communion, must, endure be damnation of hell

As a fifth churacteristic, Mr. S. contended that the Tunker "church is God's habitation brough the spirit" Where did the Spirit Well prior to the organization of the first Tunk- | the apost die charches er church? He tried to sustain this, because the Tunkers practice the "holy kiss"! Here we introduced our seventh negative, that they are not churches of Christ, "because they have elevated the kiss into a saving church ordinance." We did not object to the kiss of charity of the apostolic or present age; but the establishment of this common salutation as a church ordinance, to be observed on pain of damnation, exhibits the anti-christian character of the Tunker churches. Messrs. Moore and Eshelman both taught, as we showed, that the kiss of charity is essential to salvation. See our eighth reply. Yet our friend unblushingly says: "To these again I had no respondent." How untrue! Our eighth negative showed that the Tunkers are not the churches of Christ; "because they have established a saving church ordinance out of a full meal." They eat a full meal of beef or mutton, and soup, bread and such like, to satisfy "the cravings of hunger," and then call it the Lord's Supper. For this "ordinance of the church," they make no pretence of Bible command, Paul says, "If any man hunger, let him eat at home;" but Tunkerism says, let him eat "a full meat" in the church. See our ninth reply. Our minth negative argument showed that the Tunker churches are not the churches of Christ, "because they have established feet-washing as a church ordinance essential to salvation," they make baptism and feet-washing "to the soul what the washing is to the flesh"? They suppose that the Savior washed the disciples' feet in connection with the Lord's Supper. But we showed that this feet-washing occurred at Bethany in the boose of Simon the leper two days before the passover and the communion. The Lord's supper was observed in the upper room at Jerusalem. Matt. 26; 26; Mark 14; 22; Luke 22; 19, 20. To settle the time and place of the feetwashing, read Mark 14; 1-11; Matt. 26; 1-17; John 12: 1-11, and 13: 1-17. From these scriptures we gathered the following facts:

1. Jesus came to Bethany six days before the passover.

2. Jesus was invited to a "supper" prepared. for him in the house of Simon, the leper two days before the passover.

3. Martha, Mary, and Lazarus were present, with other dews, at this support

4. Mary anomited the feet of Jesus while at this supper.

5. At the close of this suppre in Simon's house in Bethuny, Jesus arose and washed his

6. At the close of this Bethany supper the devil put it into the heart of Judas to betray Jesus, and he went to the chief priests and made. the bargain to betray him. And from that time he sought apportunity to deliver him up-

7. About twodays after the Bethany supper desus, with the twelve, entered the upper room. at Jerusalem, to eat the passover.

S. At the close of the passaver Jesus instiintell the communion or Lord's supper. There-ber chinches reject the plan of salvation by fore, the feet-washing has no connection, either in time, place or circumstances with the communion.

The real church ordinances may be identified by the following characteristics:

- 4 A church ordinance is a solemn religious. rate or ceremony enjoined by Christ or the apostles upon the churches as organizations.
- 2. A church ordanaice must be performed by the church in her organized capacity, or through her ordained officers.
- 3. A church ordinance must be observed as a prescribed form of solemn worship, including invocation and prayer.
- A clinich ordinance must commemorate, that of christmants
- A church ordinance noist, he continued by revealed law of perpetuity.

Feet-washing is wanting in all the above parriculars, and therefore is not a church ordinance.

We have proved that the Tunkers have erred grossly in establishing feet-washing as a saving church ordinance, may be seen from the following considerations: 1. There is no command or injunction given by Christ or any of his apostles to any church to wash feet. The Savior washed fect socially in a private house, in harmony with the ancient custom. 2. If feetwashing was a church ordinance, then it would be confined to ordained administrators. No private member could perform it, any more than baptism and the supper. 3. The church ordinances must be performed as a part of a solema church worship; but there was neither prayer, singing, nor solemn formula joined with feet-washing. 4. The two church ordinances commemorate in a solemn manner the two great gospel facts-the death and resurrection of Christ. The communion is in remembrance of Jesus to show his death till be comes. Baptism declares the burial and resurrection of Christ, and is a pledge of the resurrection of all the dead. But if feet-washing has any religious symbolic design it is not revealed. 5. The church ordinances have the revealed law of perpetuity-to the end of the world, till Christ comes. But nothing is said about the perpetuity of feet-washing. G. Baptism and the communion were observed m and hy the apostolic churches. But there is no record of any apostolic church observing feet-washing.

With the above Bible facts and arguments the Tunker feet-washing church ordinance was entirely overthrown.

As to the Tunker childish quibbles concerning haptizing by a "forward bowing posture," and the laying on of hands in connection with haptism, we answered according to their folly. Yet Mr. S. says: "Mr. R. did not even attempt a reply," and " To these I had no respondent" Where is his love of truth?

Mr. Stein's second reason under his fifth characteristic is based upon the wonderful goodness of the Tunkers concerning war. While it is true that christians have no right to make war for the propagation or defense of christianity yet, as we showed, the citizens of political governments may obey the powers that be in aiding in the punishment of evil doors. Rom. 13: 1-7. John the Baptist advised the sordiers: "Be content with your wages." Luke 3: 14. We showed that the Tunkers in making laws on this subject, have violated the word of God. Our tenth negative argument showed that the Tunker church government is unscriptural, be cause they are controlled by a "national contercace," "to decide matters for which not thus saith the Lord can be found.' The decrees of this conference are to decide even, the fashion, style, and cut of the clothing of the memberslip. For this asurpation Mr. S. made no appeal to the scriptures

Our eleventh negative proved that the Tunkgrace. Against this false doctrine we appealed to Hom. 4, 2, 13; Eph. 2; 8-10; Gal. 3; 7. Sec. our twelvth reply.

Our twelith negative proved that the Tanks er churches are distitute of the Scriptural Churche Succession.

Mr. Stein tried to make out "That there were testimomes of the existence of an apostolic church from the beginning connecting with purbrothron in America, through the ancient Waldenses and Albigenses." He holdly insignated that our proofs of the origin of the Tunker church with Mr. Mack in 1708 were untrue. But his consternation and defeat was overwhelming when we torced him to admit, upon the as a sacred monument, some great fundamental | testimony of Messrs. Mock, that we were correet. The Pankers are forced to admit their Sall the Dunkarus et America have sprong toon the little band of eight souls, who started apbaptized by trine immersion, organized them-lampropers selves into a church, and chose Alexander Mack, for their first minister."

We forced Mr. Stein to admit the perpetuity of the true church. We showed by many infallible proofs from scripture, that the gates of hell have not prevailed against the true church. Mr. Mack, Sen., the founder of the Tunker church, says:

"We believe that the gates of hell have not prevailed against the church of Christ, but it has remained, and will remain even until the end of the world." The Writings of Alexander Mack, p. 117.

Thus, the historical question as to the origin of the Tunker churches is definitely settled by themselves. They acknowledge "that the true church never ceased to exist," "that the gates of hell have not prevailed against the church of Christ, but it has remained, and will remain, even until the end of the world." They also freely acknowledge "that all the Dunkards of America have sprung from the little band of eight souls who started up in Germany in the year 1708," under the ministry of Alexander Muck. Therefore the Tunker churches cannot be the true churches of Christ.

If will be remembered that Mr. Stein failed to name a single local congregation, holding the Tunker characteristics during the fifteen centuries prior to 1708. His overthrow is complete on the point of history. His "recapitulation" is such a gross batch of misrepresentations that it refutes itself. His utter disregard for truth must be attributed to his blindness and confusion. Did he hope to deceive the reader by his crying, "no respondent!" "I had no respondent!!" "I "hard really had no respondent!!!"? One conscious of the truth will not resort to such means.

We believe that Mr. Stein has done the best for his cause that can be done. Though a strong man, he has utterly failed to sustain his proposition. He has mis-stated our arguments and resorted to all the trickery of deception and "desurtical" sophistry, to aid a sinking cause.

He feels "more confirmed" in his positions! So did the anti-christs which went out from the apostolic church. We have but little hope of the conversion of one who has apostatized from the true church.

There are some minor points that we have omited from this summary as not needing forther mention here.

We here rejeat that we have proved by ansple testimony that the Tunkers as churches-(1) are based upon a carnal membership; (2) and as churches were built by uninspired, mer: (3) they hold baptismal salva(nor; (4) they have sided to our Lord's great commission; (5) they reject the word of God as the only rule of fath and practice; (6) they hold the doctrine of objects salvation; (7) they kiss for salvation; (5) sleep make a "full meal" into a saving church ordsnance; (9) they make salvation by feet-washing; (10) they have an unscriptural church g vernment, (11) they reject salvation by grass (12) they are destitute of scriptural church so ession;—therefore, the Tunker charches are not churches of Jesus Christ.

We suggest that every one carefully re-read the entire discussion on this proposition. Enth does not lose by investigation. May God, by his Spirit, guide and preserve as all in the way if tridle and salvation, is our praver.

EXAMINATION OF SOME OBJEC-TIONS AGAINST THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BIBLE.

BY LEWIS O. 113 MMER.

NUMBER BY:

WE are now getting to where the battle will require a little more generalship than in our preceding numbers. The Truth Seeker wants to know "when the fact is brought to our minds that so many errors exist in thy hook, is it not enough to destroy all be lief in its being directly from thy brain. and thy hand?" This is a hard question. to answer. Is a counterfeit bank note the production of the bank? 20 his it be possible that the highest confidence and veneration can always be cherished for a look that requires such extensive dectoring, finkering, and remodeling?" Who says it does require such "tinker ing": Brophetlan did the "rinkering" were men just like the Prath Section they thought they knew a little better than God, and therefore got to "tinker ing." The writer exhibits about as much of this "tinkering" spirit, as we shall presently show, as any one; he no doubt thinks it needs "tinkering."

Is not the influence which the Bible classes ited on women a great organism. against its divinity? Has it not placed her assubjection be the apposite sex and . possistently hold her in that degraded position?" Now we are getting directly to the Bible which opens out the is-

be in possession of a much more corrupt translation than King James' or he would certainly feel ashamed for such gross and obvious misrepresentations. If his Bible teaches what he says it does he may well Abraham, Jacob, Gideon, David, Sololose confidence in it.

Is putting a person under subjection degrading him? Are we degraded beeause we are placed in subjection to the laws of the Universe? What ideas these infidels have of degradation! Is not woman from her very constitution the one that needs the oversight? Is the woman to provide for the man and the family, or is the man the one that ought to do it? If the man does his duty, would it be right for the woman to usurp author ity over the man? It's man does not do his duty toward the woman, he is worse than an infidel and has no faith in God's injunctions, for this is just what God has enjoined upon man. The Bible that I have teaches just the reverse of what the Truth Secker does, so it is very doubte ful if he is in possession of even King James' revision, or knows anything about it. Men that are so ignorant of the teachings of the Bible may well reject it as a divine injunction; but the man that is fully acquainted with its teachings has no trouble to discover the divine counsel and wisdom therein.

³⁴With a few exceptions, were not the women of the Bilde mere slaves, to the male sex? And were they not regarded as ministers to the sensual passions of men? Was the disposition anywhere shown to accord to woman the position. in society and in the affairs of life that justly belong to her?" Yes, Mr. Truth Sciler, they were mistrented, and this shows exactly where women would be to-day was it not for the Bible. Had not Christ given special legislation on this point they would still be in that condition. Infidels are not the originators. of this law,nor ever did anything for weemen, it is only among Christians who l that treat women with due respect, and my? infidels who live in such Christian somand follow their example.

Now what a keen debater this Truth Secker is! What critical accumen he possesses! Do people regard everything right and best that people do, simply because there is no law directly against it! Ind God recognize polygamy be cause he did not prohibit it by law? Is a practice not prohibited by law so degrading as the writer endeavors to make out? Is a plurality of wives half as had as adultery under the Mosaic law? The writer would likely be in the same practies to-day if the Bible did not prohibit it under Christ, and would not be aware that it was a degrading practice. What makes polygamy wrong, is God's probi bition. Is there then any common sense in condemning a book after obtaining such advantageous knowledge therefrom that makes acre own knowledge look like barbarism.

"Could men be really first-class patriarchs and saints who were so sensual that their passions could not be gratified short of from five to one thousand women"? I suppose a man can be a good citizen so long as he does not transgress any law, and above all the injunctions of the government!

"Has not the Bilde damaged its claims to divinity by its advocacy of human slavery! Does it not recognize in numerous instances that unrighteous institution"? I would like to know what kind of a character the Truth Sceker's God is, or where he dwells and what relation he sustains to his God. I think he must be a good kind of a God, and allows all his sub. jects to determine right according to their own feelings. Now if the Truth Sceker knows so much about the character of God I would like to know where he gets his information.

> I will engage to show that the God of the Bible is the only God that we have any knowledge of, and any other has no existence except in the imagination of people. Let them prove that there is another God, such an one as they represent by describing the relationship. If I allowed the writer to fix up God to suit his notions of a God, and the Bible God differed in character, then it would be an "axiomatic truth" that the Bible was not of divine origin, but if I demand the evidence for the existence of such a God. his axiom is only imagination. If, how. ever, he can prove by competent testimony that there is in existence a differ. ent God than that represented in the Bible I should like to hear from him at his carliest convenience.

> Christians must begin to look out, for infidels are fixing up another God that is far superior (!) to the Christian's God. The existence of a God will no longer he doubted, but a new God has come into existence, and the Christian's God a delusion only. Surely this is the age of reason and reform. This new God is of such a character (from the Truth Seek. er's knowledge) that I would not be much afraid of; for he has no jurisdiction; and I think the reason he has no jurisdiction is because he has no existence, except in his imagination.

"Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

ENVY.

()F all traits of character most to be althorred, and one universally Irrev alent, is the detestable trait of envy. Each and every one of us have a slight sprinkling of it in our composition. From the time of Adam to the present day it has held sway with persistent tenacions ness, and will undouttedly until the end of time. But some are envious in a higher degree than others, and they may bid factored to all greatness while they allow envy to stir within their breast. Their glasses seem thickly covered with Agreen light, and everything beautiful and noble becomes distorted and mean resiler, that you will live to old age in quality in a person, but, like the owl, persons will allow their criticisms and inucadoes to fall indiscriminately upon every lovely thing, like frost mem flow ers. They will utter sharp speeches with sucering lips, and with supercilious brow, and impudent tongue, wagging to an empty brain, call to naught shat which is true and beautiful. This truit privilege of turning to Christ? "For I assert to be characteristic of shallow by Spirit will not always strive with and ignoble minds! In all great and noble characters in past and present time. this trait lay dormant and suppressed. Their minds were of such superior organization, and the exercise of such mind was so systematic and salutary that the ment, trait of envy was never prominent. All noble minds are loftily superior to the act of condemning a course of action or drawing inferences prejudicial to a party for the mere gratification of their envious spirit.

We would mildly suggest to those who are enviously inclined to forbear, and, fill out in the cold world of sin. What like the Spartan youth who smiled while suffering from secret wounds, have sufficient wisdom to conceal that which they may feel; or, like Macawber in Dickens' tale, if things do not quite satisfy you, like him assume the air of an optimist, and wait patiently and something will turn up; but do not give way to envy. Of all beings most miserable worthy of most profound pity, is an envious person. If they notice a person excreising their talents, developing their capacities, they will consure them, for they are fearful of their becoming super rior to themselves; and if perchance they hear the slightest rustling of another's laureis, their brains will seethe and their hearts burn, and their imprecations of hate reverberate throughout the air. Why, they would inspire one with the idea that this world was a land of wrangling and quarrels. Now, upon meditation. I arrive at the conclusion that there is nothing in life of sufficient importance to cause an envious spirit in any individnal. The end of all, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, ugly and beautiful, is one and the same. What are those illustrious and brilliant persons of past ages but a transformation of dust, et bien?

> It is well those envious persons cannot become exclusive rulers, for, if so, we might tremble for our safety. Even the actions of Nero, Cato and other tyrants would not have a parallel with those of an envious person of teeday. It is well to avoid the occasion which would tend to imbue us with this trait. and be content as we are. The little rolán chirlecus, gayly, as the gargeous bird of Paradise, and his note is as gay for it is truly content and knows not envy. When we see one climbing balon ously upothe hill of fame, we must not imagine that to gratify ourselves by send ing him a dart from the poisonous arrow of envy will add to our happiness or detract from his merit, for if we indulge that fallacious hope we will be supremely mistaken. And, alas, the criticism of the envious is simply cor of preteren nihil!-Sel.

A FAMILY,

BY MARY J. STEES.

FAMILY is as a coach filled with passengers driving along danger ons places, while ascending precipitons. heights, where, were the driver to make a mistake, all would be dashed to pieces in the abyss below. The parents are the drivers, the children the passengers. Dear parents, just where you drive, the children will go.

"Sometimes a passenger leaves the coach thicking he can find a more pleas ant and easy route, wanders off in anoth er direction and is torn to pieces by wild beasts, or starves to death. Thus do children often wander from home, become surrounded with vicious companions and permit their conscience to become so seared that they regard neither right nor wrong, home nor God. God looks down and sees man daily stepping along the edge of eternal disasters. He may hear, if he listens, the voice of God saying, "Don't step there." But on and on he goes until he has almost reached the fatal capsize where occasionally one will suddenly leap off and come away in safety. Do you wonder that the angels of God rejoice! Blessed be God, the heart of heaven beats close against the heart of this world, "For there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth."

"I shall say, No, thank you."

"O Dick! you don't mean it! Think how we promised nacemar we wouldn't! Think of the trouble intemperance brings!"

"I am not talking intemperance," said Dick, impatiently; "just a sip."

"But one sip might lead to more; don't take even a sip, dear brother."

"Cousin Mary will look, and Louis will think, 'How curious!' and George will put up his eye glasses. I hate to be looked at as a curiosity."

"So do I," said Alice, "Perhaps it won't be as bad as we think. I mean to say 'No' all the same. It will not be rude," she added eagerly; "General Washington said it was not."

"One day near the end of our Revolutionary war," began Alice, "a young officer came to Philadelphia to see Washington on business. He was invited to a dinner party. A little before they were to leave the table Washington, calling him by name, asked him to take a glass of wine."

'No, thank you, sir; I have made it a rule not to touch wine,'

"Every one looked surprised that the young man should refuse such an invitation from the General. 'He is rude' they thought. 'What! say no to Washington!' Washington saw in a moment how they felt. He said 'I do not want any one at my table to partake of any thing against his inclination. I honor you, sir, for refusing to do what you consider wrong."

"Good for the General!" exclaimed

"Good for the young man," said Alice. He was not sure what General Washington would think of him, and yet he was not afraid to do what he thought right." —Child's World,

m cannot}$, like Paul, say we entered "into a ship, meaning to sail by the coasts of Asia," for we are too far from said coasts and no ship can soil on dry land, but we might say we got "abourd" the train at Lunark, and would sny it, telling when and how, if it would make any one more pieus, more pure in thought and deed and us more hamble, but since nothing can be gained by telling when and where we took the train, where we ledged, what we ate and how much or how little, we forbear and pass to that, which, we trust, will be more benelicial to our renders.

Paul could well write about sailing "over the Sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia," and along "under Cyprus," for this seemed good to the Holy Spirit which directed the mind of the apostle. God thus shows as what great things that eminent apostle limit to suffer for "Christ's sake," But the entering into details concerning travels by the greatest of apostles by no means justifies us manisters going into details everytime we go a few miles from home. In these things we should exercise becoming wisdom, remembering that if all were to do so fifty papers could not contain all that might be writ-Whenever we hazard and endure what Paul endured, let it be written and published every where for the elect's sake to the glory and honor of God.

In this we shall not give a description of Labette County, Kansas, but reserve that for a separate article, when we have obtained sufficient data to give facts as they are. Many Brethren and friends are booking westward and the object of the writer is to give all such the tull benefit of his observations. GRIEF.

() NLY a few days ago we stood by an open grave. One "of such is the kingdom of heaven," was lowered therein. Disease had fed mpon the jewel until but little more than skin and hone was left. But oh, what angelic sweetness was still contained in the lifeless clay. The mother hows in grief and presses a few more kisses upon the cold lips. Ah, (then she rises and in despair cries:

"O God," I cannot ave without my blessed little one! D Land, lawe merey on the! Oh, my Rod. my God! what have I done that I cannot keep (ON) of my family? Oh dear! oh dear! I have not ONE left 'At i. are gone. Oh, how lonely and cold the world will be without my little comforter?"

Not one left! chilling thought! How sore the temler ties of affection. But such is life. "Man is of tew days and full of trouble."

Lord Byron while meditating upon the death of his mother and urged not to give way to sorrow, burst into an agony of grief, saying: "I have but one friend in the world, and she is

On the death of other friends he writes thus: "My triends fall around me, and I shall be left; lonely free before I and withered. I have no re source but my own reflectious, and they present no prospect here or hereafter, except, the selfish satis faction of surviving my before. I am indeed

AMONG THE DOCTORS.

THE following from the Record and Erangelist opens an interesting field at this time "Recently, Dr. Weaver, a Baptist preacher of many years' standing, was reimptized at Louisville, for the reason that his first baptism (immersion) was at the hunds of a Methodist preacher. The Religious Heruld, also Baptist, suggests some difficulties attendant upon the theory that the validity of a haptism depends on the administrator. They present a curious chapter of tangles. If he was before unbaptized, of course his ordination was invalid, for an unbaptized person cannot be properly ordained; if he was not ordained, then the ordinations which helped to confer were irregular, and ought to be gone over again; the baptisms which he performed were irregular if he was not haptized, and all the people whom he baptized ought to be immersed by some one else, In short, on this theory, before any person consents to receive immersion from any minister, he ought to make a careful inquiry into his credentials; and even then he does it at his own risk. If the inquiry is only extended back as far as Roger Williams, it will be found that he was immersed by Ezekiel Holliman, an unnimmersed man, whom he afterwards baptized. On this theory, Roger Williams' baptism was not valid, nor were those which he afterwards administered. Hence, the whole chain of Baptist baptisms cannot stand the test, and the Baptists are an unbaptized people!"

We will next hear Dr. Burrows, a leading Baptist:

"If an immersed administrator is essential to the validity of baptism, then none of us have been laptized, and there is no valid haptism in Christian churches. Dr. Weaver's first unbaptized administrator was only one remove back Dr. Boyce may have been five removes back Can that make any difference as to validity? If the first in the series was orbanized, must they not all have been unbaptized? At what point was the invalidity made valid? How many nothings does it require to make a something?"

He declares that "there is no valid baptism in Christian churches." These not the Baptist church maintain that it is Christian? Is there no called haptism in the Baptist church? Dr. Ray will have to take Dr. Burrows in hand for tearing down the Baptist fort-succession. Can Doctor Ray trace his immersion outside the line that goes back to Exckiel Holliman? Have the Baptists two lines in America-one that goes back to the English Baptists who first practiced backward single immersion as Doctor Judson affirms; and another line that stops at Ezekiel Holliman? We want these things made phain, and we insist on Doctor Ray sheddung ray of light upon them.

Since we are among the Doctors we will let Doctor Judson, the great Baptist Historian,

"All the Baptists in the world who have spring from the English Baptists, have practiced the backward posture. But from the beginning it was not so. In the apostolic times the administrator placed his right hand on the head of the candidate, who then, under the pressure of the administrator's hand, bowed forward, aided by that genuflection which instinctively comes to one's aid when attempting to bow in that position, until his head was submerged, and then rose by his own effort."-Judsm on Baptism, pp. 142, 41%.

SECRECY AND PRIVACY.

IT is maintained by the advocates of Secret Succeedings that the cabinet meetings of the president, some of the sessions of the Senute ge conducted in Secrecy, therefore why not he Lodge? They further maintain that grand infes sit in secret, that families have things which are sealed up from the public car, and hence the Lodge is justifiable in its course. this is a plausible plen, and by some will be neeived as eminently sound argument.

There is a difference between secreey and offracy. Lawful societies, designed for the public good may do some of their work in prirate, but this does not constitute them Secret societies. Their work done in private is not a constitutional feature of the society, while that of the Lodge is. Secrecy in the Lodge is one of its leading features, and each step in it is hedged with secrecy under the severest penalties. All that is learned therein is upon the condition that it be never rerealed to any other than its own members. This never revealing is constitutional, and any one violating it is in danger of having visited upon him the severest petialties of the Lodge. With the Lodge, serecy is the rule; but privacies in families, churches, and in the State is not the rule, but the exceptions. Families do not administer osths in order to keep its members from making public its privacies. Families do not place asentinel at their doors with a pass-word and instructions to admit only those who have the pass. The father does not require his children to understand a certain grip of the hand, movement of the arm, or eyes, or feet, in order that they may recognize each other. Grand juries do not instruct its members under oath to forever conceal its labors from the public. No guard stands at the door of the church councils to keep out those who have not a pass word. The business of the Cabinet, the Seunte, the church and family is such as simply requires privacy, and not secreey. Privacy withholds no good that can benefit the public; secrecy seeks to benefit its own members only. Privacy administers no oaths; secrecy must in order to carry its ends. Privacy is modest and massuming; secrecy is arrogant and selfish. Privacy advances work for the public good; serecy singles out the favored ones and bestows its kindness upon them. Privacy reports itself to all who may be benefitted by its labors; secreey selfishly assumes all the good to itself. Privacy has no guards, oaths, penalties, fees, favorites; secrecy has sentinels, penalties, ouths, fees, favorites. Privacy is not opposed to sunshine; secreey prefers darkness. Privacy is not afraid of exposure; secrecy is ever fearful, lest its deeds come to the light.

UST as certain as any one ever visits one of I these families, just that certain will be be obliged to listen to all the bifterness, and meanness that each individual member can say of all the others. The wife complains of her husband, of her children, and the nearest neighbors: the husband knows his wife has more faults thun all the other women in the whole county. and as for the children, their vileness, and bad deeds are deplorable beyond computation or degree. The children know they have the most cruel, overbearing, and stingy parents there are anywhere.

But a visit with the other family discloses a much different scene. The wife, if necessary to speak of her husband, always does so with the greatest respect and regard. She knows he has faults, but still she wont believe them. Then, as would most likely be expected, we find the husband affectionate, earnest, happy, and contented. He never speaks of his wife but to commend her. If his wife does any thing, foolish bellow! he thinks it is just right because she did it. The children's countenances beam like suns. They seem not to know what sorrow is. Their parents love them and think of all the children there are anywhere theirs are certianly the sweetest, most winning, and most noble.

If a member from the first of these families meet you or call upon you, his first word is one of fault. Now reader, don't you know some une Sho does this? Inst see if you can't pick out some one that this article is expressly written for

We avoid them all we can; partly through dislike, and partly through fear. Still we should not feel that way towards them-we should pity them. But when you are thrown in company with a member from the other families your pleasure is only enhanced. Their first word is not one of censure or fault; oh, no! it is one that cheers you up and makes you feel more bouyant,

After one of these parties leaves you, you feel sorry and yet glad—you are grieved at the conduct of your caller while with you, but still you feel glad to think he is gone and you are by yourself. After the other one leaves, you feel somewhat lonesome; but the pleasant words and smiles of approbation still linger in your mind and cause you pleasant sensations. The influence of the one harrows up your soul, irritates you, discourages you, makes you despondent—half sick of life, wishing you had been born somebody else -or not at all; while the infineucc of the other causes you to regret that so much of your life is past, that your stay in the world must be so short, and at what work you are engaged, you feel to do with double zeal.

So we might go on; the influence of the one is always good—elevating, and inspiring, while the other is always had—leading downward into filth, crime and corruption.

These two families represent two classes of society. Both classes are found in all circles. That congress nor church has never been known which has not been cursed with a faultfinder. He carefully stows away in his mind everything which he has a notion is evil. His heart becomes a store house of waste, corruption, poison, and malignaty. He has the true mark of a "reprobate mind." SOMETHING ABOUT CAPS.

OUMELIA, a province of Turkey, during 11 the late war, between Russia and Turkey, was for some time in the hands of the Romans. It is a rich and beautiful State, and in arranging peace it was agreed that Roumelia should have a Turkish Governor, hence the Sultan appointed Aleko to govern. This new Governor, naturally were the tex or Turkish official cap: As soon as he reached the province he perceived signs of discontent among the people. The deputation that had come to meet him and greet him, refused to do so formally unless he would agree to take off the Turkish fex and put on the Bulgarian cap. After considerable dehating, it was agreed that Aleka should receive the deputation with uncovered head, and then put on his red cap or fex. But his troubles were not over. The people demanded that he wear the Bulgarian cap if he expected to rule them. The Governor besitated for some time, scarcely knowing what to do. He finally put Sultan, who threatens to recall him unless be restores the fex to its place of honor. Now why all this dispute about caps? It seems to be a small thing to quarrel over, but when we come to think what those caps represent, it may not seem strange. They represent material anthority, and to lay off the fez was regarded by the Sultan as laying off his authority, and this he would not submit to. We thus see that a very small thing-even the covering for the head may represent authority. The same idea is presented by the Apostle Paul, when he says, "For this cause ought the woman to have power, or authority, on her head, because of the ungels" When any nation, society or organization, agrees that a certain thing shall represent it, then it does represent it, all the caviling to the contrary notwithstanding. When the Lord Jesus declared that those who partake of the encharist do show the Lord's death till he come, then it is an emblem of his death, say what we will.

The man who carries the flag of the United States by the direction of the officers of Government, carries with him anthority. The man who lays hold of the promises of Christ, puts him on in baddism, has gone forth under the anthority of his King. The church as the the executor of the Last Will of Christ, is clothed with authority and has a mark which is significant of her power to judge, and execute the law made by Jesus Christ. To lay down that sign or token of anthority is to lav down her power to do justly and obey the the preaching himself. "Son, go work to-day commandments of God. Then let us vinig to be my vineyard."

the token of authority, the representative of power to do all things acceptably before God.

"SON, OO WORK TO-DAY IN MY VINEYARD," MATT. 21:28.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

N the parable from which this text is taken. L the certain man represents the Lord of Hosts. The vineyard represents the church of Christ in which many earnest laborers are needed. The first of the two sons represents that class of persons who at first, when they are called, say, "I will not," but afterward repent and go, and of course are justified in going. The second son represents that class of persons who pretend to work in the vineyard, yet do not; those do not the will of the Master. Although this parable was spoken to the scribes and Pharisees and applicable to them, yet it may be applied to certain classes to-day. Reader are you like the first of the two sons, living out of the church, or vineyard, refusing to go and work in the vineyard; then the language is applicable to you. You are wanted in the vineyard, not as an idler, but to work. The time when you are wanted is to-day. "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard." Will you not repent and go and become justified and saved? "I go sir" and will not, thinking because you entered the vineyard, you will be justified whether you work or not. Be not deceived. Work is what is wanted from you, not merely being in the vineyard. This class is entirely too large, especially among the wealthy. Many of whom have the means to do much in spreading the go-pel, by assisting the ministry, distribut ng tracts, helping the poor, &c., but alas! they are at ease in Zion, saying, "I go sir, but will not." Is there smooth railing? No trouble in the church and not much said about means to carry on missionary work, then they are satisfied and will go to church meetings, and by pretense continue to say, "I go sir." Should, however, serious trouble arise in the church, or the workers urge strongly the necessity of working more in the vineyard through the Bible School, the Brethren's Tract Society, or preaching the gospel, then those meetings will not suit them, others may go and work so far as they are concerned.

Header, if you are in this class, up ' ur! It is work that is wanted in the vineyard. Sinners are perishing for the want of the bread of life, and every child of God must do what he can in order to get the best results. Perhaps you are no preacher, if not there are others who can and will preach, if you give them your symputhy, your prayers, and help. You can perhaps work in some munster's place, and thus enable the Turkish fee into his trunk and put on the him to go, or else send something to S. T. Bos-Bulgarian cover. This raised the weath of the serman, Dunkirk, Ohio, for the City Mission | H. S. Huntington, Ind. $1.00 or contribute something to the Brethren's Truct Society, and thus assist in spreading the truth through the press, and in that way bring sinners to Christ. I know a poor afflicted sister who has no home of her own, who said to the wife of a minister, "Your husband is away preaching so much leaving you and the children alone while he is, without dispensation, sloing the missionary work of the district. I want to do my part by helping you. Can you not give me some knitting or something that I can do so that I may do my part in spreading the gospel by helping the family along in his absence?"

> I know a young brother, who lately said to the same numister. (The minister having this year, without any compensation from the distriet, spent upwards of eighty days on the missionary field). "You have been spending considerable time preaching the gospel. I want to do my part of that work by bringing my team and doing a day's hanling for you. So you can the somer get through with your work and go again." God bless such workers as these who are not satisfied until they have, in some way, done their part in baving the gospel preached. and sinners brought to Christ. He who helps the minister to obey the great command of the Master to "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" by working in his place, or otherwise contributing means to enable him to go, is as truly a worker with God in the saving of souls, as though he did

FROM INDIAN TERRITORY.

AM now (Sept. 10th, 10; 30 A. M.) scated under a huge elm tree on Russell Creek, in the Indian Territory. My companions are Col. Cook of Chetopa, S. M. Burket of Parsons, and a Mr. Clark from Chester Co., Pa. We have just enjoyed a good melon, and feel real well in this invigorating air. This is a grand and beautiful country, and the millions of acres of unimproved prairie lands are very inviting to the farmer. Shall go down into the Territory among the civilized Indians before my return and distribute some papers and tracts. M. M. E.

THE NUMBER.

What number is meant in the following verse: "Let not a widow be taken into the number under three score years old, laiving been the wife of ore maic"—1 Tuo. 5. 3.

ANSWER.

Warn Warn only draw and a sions from what follows. That there was a class of widows enjoying certain rights and privileges upon certain conditious seems evident. Let us look at them.

First. She must be sixty years old.

Second. She must have been the wife of one man

Third. Well reported of for good works, Fourth. Have brought up children.

Fifth. Lodged or entertained strangers.

Sixth. Washed the same's lect.

Screwth. Relieved the afflicted,

Eighth, Dibgently followed every good work Upon these conditions she should be taken into the number, who are to instruct the younger women. Titus 2: 1.5. The qualifications urged by the spostle indicates that they had special work to perform, and this seems all the more probable when we remember that the instruction there was altogether oral. There were no books of the New Testament, from which each one could learn his duty to God, but teachers were set apart to direct and instruct; and what could be more fitting than for the aged widows, qualified or directed by Paul, to teach the younger winner? Pions, godly, and noted for having followed every good work, they might well tell the younger how to lead a similar life. To conclude that Paul would | that they might be too, clothed, and lodged by the church, and one of these conditions a cer-vide for them? Undoubtedly; if not, then there has been a change, a great change somewhere,

The terms widows indeed would seem to imply that it was the name of an office, which was so called from the fact that only widows were allowed to fill it. We believe Tertullian mentions something about the order of widows, and regards them as instructors of the younger. We therefore conclude that the number referto widows possessing certain qualifications to teach and direct the younger women, and were set apart by the church for this purpose and supported by the church. To insist that a widow should not be fed, clothed, and lodged, because she was not quite sixty years old, or that she failed to bring up children, or happened to have no report for good works, is not in harmony with the great law of love, which urges that we relieve the needy wherever M. M. E. found.

FROM PALESTINE.

NUMBER XXII.

Philip's Fountain, and the Pools of Jerusalem.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement.]

THE pool of Hezekiah, already mentioned, lies I about one hundred yards from the Joppa gate within the city. It is completely surround ded by blocks of houses, and it can be seen only from the roofs or back windows of these. Visitors usually see it from the roof of the Mediterranean Hotel, where you stand immediately over the edge of it, and can see its entire surface According to Dr Barday's measurement, it is 252 feet long by 156 wide. The bottom, which is the natural rock, slopes to the south, and consequently its northern end is the shallower. and the bottom is there expused when the water is low. Its water is drawn by buckets let down from the windows of the houses. A door in the rear of the Coptic Convent at the northern end, and a flight of steps, give the only other access to it. It is not probable that it was ever used as an immersing pool though it could have been at a low stage of its water.

I will next speak of the prod called Lower Gihon by Christmas, and Birketes Sultan pool of the Soltan, by the Arabs. A ravine begins to form near Upper Gibon, and thence runs eastward along the south side of the road to the Juppe gate, deepening as it goes. Near the gate it is about 50 feet deep, measuring from the city wall, and here starns at nearly a right angle to the south. It runs along parallel with the west wall of the city, and reaches a depth of more than 100 feet apposite, the southern end of that wall. At this point a massive wall runs across it and constitutes the southern end of the pool, while another wall, less massive, which crosses it 600 feet further back toward the Joppagate, forms the northern end. The pool, then, is 600 feet lung, and has an average width of 260 teet. Its sides and bottom are formed given. We can only draw our conclusion the natural rock of the valley. This rock hes in ledges, and it slopes from each side towords the muldle. The greatest depth of the pool at the upper end is 34 feet, and at the lower end 49 feet. Nearly all the cement at the wall as gone, and the pool now holds no water; but we saw some rement on the lower wall that was 34 inches thick. When this pool held water, it turnished an admirable place along as sides for immersing, and there was room for a hundred preachers to be numersing at one time. if heer shary,

On the east side of the city about Se yards morth of Stephen's Gate, is the Pool of Mox. It is ICC feet long, 80 feet wide and 27 feet deep. At the southeast corner it had a flight of steps descending into d, and it could have been used for a hapfistery, Juside of the city, on the same side, and lying just north of the temple enclosure, is Birket Israel, commonly known to Christmas as the Pool or Bethesda; but certainly not the pool so called in the fifth chapter of John.

His dimensions, according to Dr. Barclay, were as follows: The norm hody of at, 365 feet long and 130 feet wide, and a projecting arm of it, 142 feet long, and 45 feet wide. Its depth, according to Capt. Warren, who made excavations to the bottom of it, is 80 feet, and he found at the east end a draw pape. 25 feet above the bottom, which he thinks was intended to prevent the water from rising above that depth lay down eight conditions for women on or er. This pool was intended chiefly as a deep meat on that side of the temple wall, and it is not likely that there were facilities for immersing tain age, is to us a little too narrow to believe. in it. It is now nearly tilled up with dirt and pid anthorities would not give him permission | Eastern frade. to do sa.

Passing outside the city again, on the eastern side, descending the Kedron valley until w are about 300 yards past the city wall, we reach the Virgin's Pool, as it is now called, but the true Bethesda. This is a pool of living water, supplied by the stream of an intermitting spring. It is located in a cavera in the side of the hill Ophel, which is the southern projection of Mt. Moriah. You reach the valley by descending a flight of stone steps 8 feet wide to an arched chamber 84 feet wide and 13 feet long. whence another flight of steps 4½ feet wide leads down to the water by a descent of 13 feet perpendicular. The surface of the pool has nearly the shape of the section of a jug, the mick of the jug being next to the steps. Its measurement around its sides is 21 feet 9 inches: and the water stands in it about three leet deep. Men, women and children bathe in it, with a superstitious belief that its waters have healing properties. The intermitting flow of the water tends to keep up this superstition and it was doubtlesss this same characteristic which led to the belief, among the ancient Jews that the occasional agitation of the waters by the renewal of the flow, was caused by an angel. See Jno. v. 1-7; and remember that verse 4 is an interpolation.

Thave only to speak, in conclusion, of the well known Pool of Siloun. It lies near the south can end of the hill Ophel, and at its foot on the western side. It is supplied with water by the overflow of the Virgin's Pool, through an underground aqueduct which was partly explored by Dr. Barclay, and partly by Dr. Hobinson, but entirely by Capt. Warren. This pool is 50 feet long, and 17 feet wide at its upper end, and H) at its lower end. It has an opening at the bottom of the lower end, through which the water flows by an aqueduct to some gardens below. When this opening is stopped, the water stands about three feet deep and the overflow passes out through a higher opening. A flight of steps at the south-west corner leads down to the bottom. Here was an aduntable place for immersing, and it would be so yet but for an accumulation of dirt and rubbish, which makes it now a filthy place. Bro. El Karey, a Baptist Missionary in Nablus, whose acquaintance I formed, was immersed in this pool about twenty-four years ago.

From the above every reader can draw his own conclusion as to the facilities for immersing the three thousand on the day of Pente-J. W. McCarvey.

pear Brethren:of your permission I would like to say a few things through your worthy paper to my who read it. From the 23rd of July to 10th of August, I was in my home church. Salamony. I visited quite a number of ilies and found all well, except brother Elias dler, who has been poorly for nearly three ors, suffering much pain at times. May the ad Lard enable him still to be patient under be hand of allliction, and patiently wait the all of the Lord. We did a little preaching hile in the Salamony arm of the church. On ghrday, August 9th, we had our harvest

Rethren hummed their threshing machines ad whistled their engines in hearing distance the meeting-house. We think those things asht not so to be. The Savior said, "First ek the kingdom of God and his righteousness, withe rest shall be added unto you." I do of understand the Savior to mean that we hould not work at all. We believe it is the nty of every able-bodied person to work and myide for his household, but the first finits of at labors every day should be given to the lord. God in us—a service unto the Lord—a life of self-denial—a fight of faith—a preparation for the grand, glorious, saving realities of the world to come.

Brother Daniel Miller, a resident minister, followed in a testimony to the truth of the word spoken and exhortation to faithfulness and prayer. After some church business was transacted, we spent a few hours in the home of brother Daniel Miller, and returned home in the evening. One of our pleasant thoughts were that the brethren are maintaining good order, and that we are uniform in conducting church services. It does not show oneness when our ministering brothren are heard to make inquiry as to how the services of the occasion should be conducted. This we think should everywhere be the same, and consequently understood. Oneness of mind and action is more necessary in the Church of Christ than in any other organization. It is essential to love, happiness and success in our Christian cause.

OVER THE RIVER,

August 19th .- This morning we spent a sad hour at the house of bereavement. Sister Sarah Welty, a young disciple of our blessed Master, has crossed the dark river of death. Our hope is complete. She was the tenth of the -and family who died within thirteen years. The two youngest yet remain-sister Amelia and another, the youngest, whom we trust we can also call sister ere long. We trust she will feel the need of the pardoning love of Jesus and come into His service, and with sister Amelia, try to serve the Lord in the better days of life, so that heaven will be gamed, and we all saved with those who have gone on before. Come to Jesus. He says: "Those that seek Me early find Me."

OUR PLAYS HILL MEETING.

To-day brother Benedict spoke from Heb. 4 He spoke of the children of Israal in Egypt, and compared their bondage there to the suner's condition-the exodus from Egypt was compared to the sinner's repentance and acceptance in Christ-their rest in Canana to the saint's rest in Heaven-and how we must obey the commandments of our Lord to find that rest at last.

A Suggestion.

ME say, brethren, in regard to the tract enterprise, that since donors of small amounts will not personally draw tracts for distribution, and as there are hundreds of brethren and sisters who feel a consciousness and desire to help along the cause, and want their donations to do the most possible good, for the longest possible time, would it not be well for every congregation that is favor ddy disposed, to appoint one or more to gather the inner and freewill offerings of God-loving hearts, and put them together as a donation from that particular congregation, and let the congregations draw their quota of tracts yearly and distribute them as they see fit. The donation will arways stand to the credit of the congregation and may be measal year by year

Firstber, we would suggest that just prior to the move to collect for the purpose above mentioned, the ministers stir up the minds of their heavers in regard to their date in giving to the Lord's cause his due portion, and for a text take the 3rd chapter of Malacha from the 7th to the 12th verse inclusive. If we doly consider the Scopture we need not wonder way so often our langs, ful of abundant crops and our vineyards "east their food" before the prope er time. elder, assisted by three others. Also have several deacons. We have preaching every Sunday, but all in school-houses. The church is in is simply a transposition of John Baptist's prounion. Have had no additions for some timeexpect some soon.

Brother S. A. Fike from Preston Co., W. Va., preached two interesting sermons for us at Little Creek school-house last month, one a funeral sermon. He told us some good things. We should not only think about them, but should live them out in our every day life. He dwelt on family worship, asking blessing at our tables and bringing our children "up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." These are solemn truths which are much neglected, and that to the hurt of the spiritual welfare of the Church, Why any should neglect blessings at our daily meals there cannot be a good reason assigned. The Scriptures say, "pray without ceasing, and in everything give thauks." No matter how small a gift is presented us by a friend we thank bim for it. Now when it comes to sitting down to our daily meals we can eat without offering a single word in thankfulne , to the Giver of all good, and in whose bunds of a life and all we passess is vested. Often too I have been made to reflect when I see sisters uncovered at our tables, while a blessing is being asked. Sisters are commanded, while praying or prophecying, to have their heads covered Now if sisters do not pray or have a prayerful heart while a blessing is being lasked, they are certainly very excusable, but I am persuaded better things of them. What would we think of a brother sitting down at a table to ask a blessing with his bat on? Why we would all be astonished and mortified at the sight, because the Lord has commanded man to uncover his head on such occasions. It looks no worse, in the sight of God, to see a man ask a blessing with his hat on, than to see a sister uncovered on such occasions. I have seen sisters, as I thought with their heads uncovered, in time of | thanks because some strange person was there. No doubt he is an apposer to the truth. Dear sisters, why should you be ashamed to obey God before opposers of the word of God? The Savior says, "He that is ashamed of me and of. my words, him will I be ashamed of at the last day." A fearful sentence indeed. We are commanded to let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father who is in heaven.

The subject of not provoking our children to wrath, but to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, is something that should interest all parents and guardians profissing godliness with good works. Many children have gone to ruin by undue attention to them. A good example by parents has a wonderful influence on children. Children are often led to rain by going in bad company. They are and to learn, so they gather many bad things. Parents too often, brawl at their children instead of speaking kindly to them. The Scripture says we are not to be brawlers. We should always speak kindly to them; talk to them of such bad children as are in their knowlorgo; tell them what a terrible thing it is to be in had; that the Lord does not like bad children, hal good ones. Tell them we want them to be good so when they die he will take them to rest. Anything of this kind has a good eflect if commenced in fing. D. W. Grores.

N the 4th of May we were happy to visit the Lower Miami Church, Montgomery Co., Ohio, which is in care of Eld. George Holler. It was here that brother Ridenour and myself had a very pleasant meeting in January, and were now glad to meet so many of these brethren and sisters again, and especially those who then, and since then, have come into the church. Had two pleasant meetings on Sunday with large attendance and good feeling.

On the 5th, we received a request to go on Tuesday the 6th., to the house of friend B. Shock, and with brother George Garver, attend the funeral of his little daughter. They had, until in April, two bright children, a boy and girl, but now, in less than twenty days, both were taken by that drended disease, diptheria. The first, Ira Lee, aged 10 years, 7 months, died April 19th, 1879. His last words were, "Don't weep, mother, don't mind it." Funeral at Bro. Samuel Garber's Church, by brother George Garver and John J. Bowman. A few days after the little daughter. Amy, showed symptons of the same disease. Aid was called in time, it was thought, but all means availed nothing. Although not seven years of age, vet she seemed to regard death with a sense of pleasure rarely witnessed. She at one time said, "I do not want to get well, I want to go to my little brother." When she learned that death must come, she would sit and wipe the tears from her parent's eyes and tell them not to weep. She said, "I will get alive again in that good place." When the last moment had come and her father and mother were close at her side, she motioned for them to move away, and her last words were,

'Let them come in, let them come in,

Let the good angels come in." The funeral at 10 v. v. on the 6th, was largely attended, and all seemed to regard this stroke as no ordinary one, and seemed to share it in common. Her age was 6 years, 8 months and 5 days. When we returned to this home of sorrow the clubdren's playthings were yet in the place where they had left them, but the little workers were both gone to return no more. There is but one hope for these parents to again meet their little ones, and that is to prepare for that better world above. I trust they will seek it in time,

Dear Brethren: UR congregation, (Solomon's Creek,) is in a healthy condition, although we have not had many additions of late. We trust ere long we will have a refreshing shower from the Lord as we used to have. We have five ministers. Brother Daniel Shively is our elder, and he is putting forth every effort to enlarge our little Zion. We have two houses for worship. and a third one about ready to dedicate. There is preaching every Sunday in our church, and sometimes we have two meetings. We have four organized Sunday-schools, and they are doing well.

We had the largest wheat crop ever cut in Elkhart Co., therefore we ought to be thankful to God for these temporal blessings and be willing to give to the needy, and for all mission and church purposes, that the good work may be carried on without hindrance. Notwithstanding the abundance of the good things of earth, there are men and women that are not Yours fraternally. sutisfied.

From Limestone, Tenn.

Dear Brethrens-

THIE time of year is nearly here when we must say, "The harvest is past, the Summer is ended." The early portion of the season was dry, and crops in many parts were injured. but the season during the latter part of July and August was excellent. As a result, corn is looking well and will yield, in many localities, a bountiful crop. Winter outs was almost an entire failure, having frozen out last Winter,-Wheat generally good; fruit rather scarce. The general health of our country is very good, but some cases of lever have occurred.

Brother Solomon G. Arnold was taken with pneumonia and billions lever in May, and after lingering for more than three months, he departed this life Aug. 17th. His funeral services were conducted by brethren Jesse Crosswhite of Maryville, and C. Deale of Pleasant Valley, in the presence of a very large nudience of berenved relatives and friends. He left a widow and an interesting family of children to mourn their irreparable loss. The church has lost one of its most active and faithful members, one of its most zenious and persevering ministers, one of its most generous and self-sacrificing supporters, but we cherish the hope that our loss is his eternal gain, "For here we have no continumg city, but we seek one to come."

Our annual visit and thanksgiving or harvest meeting at Limestone was held. Aug. 23rd, and 24th. The brethren and sisters, with one or two exceptions, were found in peace, desirous to remain with the church and to labor for an increase of holiness. Eld, Geo. Bowman of knob Creek was with as and labored in the word and doctrine. A good interest prevailed and one was added to the church.

"Let luve be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good." "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another." — Romans 12: 6, 10,

Our Visit to Loudenville, Oino.

Their Brethren:—

Y wife and I arrived at the above place on Saturday the 2004 CV Saturday the 23rd of August, and spent a number of days visiting the large circle of relatives and friends that we have residing in that vicinity. It was in this congregation we moved in the Spring of 4868, and here also that we were called to the ministry. The feelings of attachment that have thus grown out of truse seasons of mutual association, are to us lasting, and we trust will thus to each continue, only to be renewed on the other bright shore.

This church, under the eldership of Morgan Workman, has for some years been moving at a pleasant sail, with her banner of peace largely unfurled, gathering on board in the meantime, precious souls from the sinking wreck. This peace was a little marred recently. by the introduction of new items of church government, by ministers stopping with them. I think evangelists should exercise care in this on their visits to the churches, so that "the spirit may be kept in the bonds of peace," We, Efizabeth Thompson, Falls City, Neb . 100 however were made happy to see the dark clouds breaking, separating and disappearing resulting in the warm, genial rays of our holy

> We met for their feast on the 26th. The weather was pleasant, attendance large, order S. T. Bosseiman. excellent, which rendered the meeting such as Christians enjoy. The doctrine was well delined and boldly delended by the minister: present from adjoining congregations of which there was an ample supply. The meeting was held under a large canvass tent, which they have used for a number of years successfully. The brethren at Londenville have three houses for worship in different parts of their territory, sized to meet the wants on all ordinary occasions of worship; on the occasion of their feasts. they erect their tent wherever the call is for the meeting. The building of such large, expensive houses, simply to accommodate occasions of feasts, we think, if properly considered, s not to be recommended. A tent has several advantages.

1. By the use of a tent feasts can conveniently be held in any part of the congregation, thus evading the monotonous effect of holding feasts in a single place.

2. By the use of a tent the congregation can be much better accommodated; seat those under the tent while the rest circle around the tent, and they can hear all that is said and see all that is going on, under which circumstances we can reasonably expect good order.

3. A tent with open sides renders it pleasant in warm weather.

4. The use of a tent cuts off all opportunity for crowding in doors or aisles.

I. J. Rosenbehgeb.

A Visit to the Far North.

Dear Brethren:-

AVING frequently, in years past, read the appeals of isolated members, in which they expressed a hungering for the gospel, and a desire that their neighbors should hear the truth as it is in Jesus, I felt that those calls should not be disregarded, for I have no reason to doubt the truthfulness of the expression regarding all faith religion, in James 2: 16, 17. As it tell to my lot last January to testify publicly "that Jesus is Christ," and having a knowledge of members living in Emmett Co., Michigan, far from the main body of the Church, I concluded to visit them in April. I spent (wo weeks with them and then returned home, but as the members plead for my returning to them again. I conceded to their wishes and returned in May and stayed fill the 20th of August, and had many meetings. The members being scattered, and as each desired meeting in their neighborhood, there was much traveling to be done, and frequently while I was on my journeys, (which were all on food). I sat down to rest and knelt down to wrestle, with self, to labor in Gethsemane as our Great Pattern showed us. I prayed that more of my brethren might be brought into the wilderness, away from their fine vehicles on which we are so apt to forget the Cross. Sometimes discouraging scenes would becloud my journey, but I remembered the prophets, and concluded that I ought not to complain. I thought of Pankand concluded that I had no such perils to pass, through as he had, although once on crossing the bay I had given up all hopes of getting to land, as we were caught in a small storm; we however got safely to land, after which I could be the more

Some of the meetings were well attended considering the circumstances. Some went away bke Felix. The greatest difficulty 1 had to meet was the misconception of the Gospel, n d that they wanted it all spirit, but they contended that the brothren whom they formerly heard preach, wanted it all external. Let us be carelol, brethreu, that we in setting forth the trath do not austake the combition for the means, and thus hunder the Gospel of Christ. O that our zeal was always "according to knowledge." Some of the members have lived there four years. There are fifteen living there and are under the control of brother George Long of Lowell, Michigan. At the communion on the 22nd of August 1 met with brethe in Long. Cossner, and others. Brother Cossner is from West Virginia and is looking for a location. Their land hes very high and rolling. some parts quite hilly. There are large portions that will make beautiful locations. Along the lake it is unoccupied, that is morth-west of Little Traverse, in the vicinity of Middle Villege. The soil is immestone and seems productive. Small froits abound and promises quite successful for fruit rusing; is not subject to frost along the lake. Climate is mild and very healthy; no ague there. Land sells from $3 to $5 per acre, some partly cleared. Some of the choice beations along the shore higher. Land along the lake is quite easy cleared, and industrious people can get chearchomes, but should remember that it is a new country. The Brethren there desire members to move in, especially an active unmister. Your young brother,

SCIENCE AND REVELATION

BY ALLES A. OBERLIN.

WHEN we observe what is embodied in the language of the subject, our mental capacities seem to undergo a shock of momentary paralyzation. The time, from the first of God's proclamations that vibrated across the mighty abyss of durkness, connected with preceding ages, down through the lallyrinth of time to this present now, with future successive ages pending, is what the subject implies. Does it not cover all immensity of time and space? We deem it a sacred privilege, as well as an imperative duty, for us to learn how God's mighty power is developed in the most tiny flower and plant, or in the minutest particle of the wondertol transc-work of man.

Will not every unbiased and generous mind admit that the more we know of God and les works, the more we love and reverence his name? And while we gaze upon the mighty wonderworkings of his hand, are we not made to fee. with intensity that we are continually walking so facting in divine presence? What is science? What we know of nature. What is revelation? What we know of God. Norther work is yet fully written. This is left for ages. We do not know all of nature, neither do we know all of praise. We will admit that some this world should be regarded as a stepping stone to the elernal world, that science in magnitude of extent, does not compare with revelation any more than does the smallest star of the universe | them, and warm hearts to welcome them, we are bright and sharing lights to those in the church, | Durght, with all the heavenly constellatious combined, yet notwithstanding its inferiority in a primitive sense, we cannot refrain from speaking of its still apparent greatness. Since it does not directly pertain to eternal glory, it cannot be disputed but that it has that tendency to elevate the human mind to that point of aspiring intelligence, where it is the better qualified to recognize the power of God in creation's work. Revelation, however, makes no pretentions to scientific explanation; yet they are inseperably connected. We will also observe that science properly assumes two forms of character. Natural science, pertaining to things natural. Ardifficial science, so termed from man's inventions.

We are not untrequent diservers, too, of what might be termed a religious science, in which form, it inevitably proves determental to its victaries. But let us notice that revelation dehes that kind of science. It speaks in long dignity and puts it to blush. Should we tremble then when science speaks or man threatens? Shall we Uzza-like put forth the hand to steady the ark of God, because it does not move smoothly over the rough places, or perhaps those scientific (2) kare have shaken it by their careless going? This would argue weak faith both m science and religion. We may descend the deep caverus of the earth, ascend the rocky. Alpure summit of Italy and Switzerland, or gaze upon the unmasked roins of Pompen, and there we find the science of past hidden ages both natural and artificial. The worst enemy of peace is the man who will rob it of a living faith in God. But should we turn our backs to the sacred light of his word, and follow after the dim, flickering of man's intelligence, or so-called science, we should wander a long, long way in the dark.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS AND THEIR RESULTS.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

OTH experience and obsevations are that they are disastrons to the prosperity of vital Christianity as understood by our Brotherhood, and calculated to lead our rising population from the time-honored usages of the church into the channels of popular or progressive Christianity, falsely so-called.

Some few years ago it was the pride and boast of the churches of Virginia, that they were in harmony, peace and love, prosperity crowned our labors. But, unfortunately for us, musical instruments began to be introduced, giving dissatisfaction to a large majority of the members; agitation, crimination, and recrimination followed, culminating in the calling of a committee from A. M., which by no means made the matter any better; other committees became necessary, -these, mark, were the first committees ever called to Va. In other clouches acting under the long cherished usages, and the councils of A. M., they proceed to try to adjust the troubles consequent upon liberties taken by some members, which culminated in expulsions, withdrawals and separate organizations, convilsing the churches to their center; and paralyzing their usefulness and prosperity. The new organization after a builtless stringgle of five or six year, is now dissolved. The memhers desire to return into the basom of the durch. Still, however, having in their possesgarded as hindrances to the advancement of the ctan has so much to do with us. Master's cause, and cannot be sanctioned or . met by the declaration that they are not willing to come back upon those terms, and urge as a reason that instruments of music are in use in other parts, and are a part of the teaching n our higher literary institutions, and thererore we ought not to interfere with them.

We were pained to see in the account of the commencement excercises that the performances were interspersed with the music of the instruments. Thus by degrees we are drifting away from the simplicity which once characterized our fraternity, and decision of conneils, which say, that they shall not be introduced where they are calculated to give trouble. Now it does not require the eye of a philosopher to see from the foregoing that there is no place when they could be introduced where it would wield a greater influence than to be connected with the training of youth. Thus the counsel of A Make is not only overridden and troubles mang urated, but the feelings and wishes of a large majority of God's faithful children are disrespecied and disregarded, and we are drifting in to the channels which the joinular church es have been for years, and from which they would now gladly relieve themselves, discovering the minous consequences, resulting, therefrom. For example, a Methodist church in this vicinity concluded that they must have an organ in their meeting-house. The effect was, that the young and tashionable members run the concern, while the old and pions portion, in a measure, withdrew and ruin was the consequence, as expressed to me by one of those last mentioned; that is, says he, "the organ has literally runned our church." Again, I revently noticed an account of a Presbyterian convention, voting the organ out of the church, by a majority of its members. It appears to me the facts in the case call loudly upon us to check this evil before it becomes more uncontrollable.

OUR DUTY.

BY S. A. STUME.

IF we are the followers of Jesus our Savior I we will show to the world that we love him. When we say we love him we will keep his commandments, and live a Christian life, and raise our children in the nurture and silmonition of the Lord, and then when we come to die we have done our duty, and if we come short of that the sin will rest upon ins We stay home from church and say it is too far or too middy, and our places are vacant in the church. Lam afraid our Savior is not well pleased with its, for it is setting a bad example before our children, and they will follow our footsters, and who is to blame for it?

A) brethren and sisters, let us be on our guard how we muse our children. Let us take them along to church, not leave them at home to run in bed company. It they grow up in that way they will not love the Savior.

EVIL SPEAKING.

BELIEVE that evil speaking is one of the greatest temptations among the Brotherhood. I think I am safe to say, that it all comes from Safan, for God has forbidden it. Faith without works is dead, that is St. James says it is. Prayers without corresponding deeds are warse than dead. Dear brother and sister, do you pray for the conversion of sinners? If you do not you are not the child of our Pather. If you do and yet neglect to accommany your prayers with corresponding acts, what does St. James say about it? "Be ye warmed and filled and yet do not give the things that they need," Let not that be said of any of the faithful. Send your prayers and your alms in behalf or the City Mission S rvice, and look to the Lord for the blessing.

That was a really happy meeting which was held on the filst of August with the good people of Haymaker town in Botetours Co., Vn. A goodly number of our brethren and sieers with whom we spent many joyous hours in worships ing the Father in former years were present, among whom was Brother Peter Naninger, the aged and senior elder of the Boretourt congregation, at whose hand I received the hely ordinance of haptism seventeen years ago, the twentieth of this month. Such meetings afford pleasure of the purest kind, and are kindred to those joys that the Father has in reservation for us. WELL-BUILT Christian is harmonious ω_1 all his parts. No one trait shames another. He does not keep the tourth commandment on the Sangay, and break the eighth commandment on the Monday. He does not shirk an honest debt to make a huge donation. He is not in favor or  as yerameg for other tolk, and a glass of toddy for himself. He does not exhort or pray at each of the few meetings he affeuds, to make age recorages for the more meetings which he neglects. WHAT IS TRUTH?

BY WW BORODALL

"What is truth?" John 18: 35. ITHIS question is one that vitally concerns us all. To know the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, is all we need. It is all that is required at our hands. This question was a ked of the Savior by Pilate. But let us notice the manner in which it was asked, Pilate asks the Savior, "Art thoo n king then"? "Thou savest," was the an swer' to this end was I horn?" but "my kingdom is not of this world, if my king dom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews " Then how elegaly did the Savier - I forth the destrine of may resist once in his let moments. THE COMMANDS OF GOD.

BY TETTER HALL

(1011'S commands are of a twofold nature. Some are commanded because they are right, others are right because they are communided. This is evident from the following passages of Script. mes. We find in the twentieth chapter of Exodus and thirteenth verse; "Thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not kill, then shalt not commit adultery". Thou shalt not kill," was commanded long since Cain killed Abel; and he knew it was wrong because he answered the Lord and said, "Why, am I my brother's keeper (* The Lord said, "Thou micenread." This curse would not have been just upon thin if it had not been wrong; being the neessing of a commeand. The other passages are similar.

The render will phase turn to Matt. the and aboy . It is that which will be 38, 39, "Ye have heard that it light thern said, An eve for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, That we resest not easily last, whoseever polarly annication on the right cheek, comto him the other also. What constituted an holy kiss; We say when we are born again, of the water and of the Spirit according to Je command to Nicodemus, then our bodies are God's redeemed property which is to glorify God as well as the spirit,-then we can salute each other with an boly kiss. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, spil of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to beerve all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and, lo, I am with you slway, even unto the end of the world." We see they are to go teach all nations, to disciple them; then they are to baptize them in the name of the Father, &c. This is the voice of the Son of God. But there are some people in the world that say it was nailed to the cross. Well, we he is risen." Also the ninth verse. "Jesus met them." (the women who went tolus grave.) It is evident that this com mand was given to his apostles after his resurrection. Then could it have been nailed to the cross? No; it stands as firm as the one who gave it. To obey this command we claim is right because it is commanded.

Dear reader, turn to the thirteenth chapter of John's Gospel where you will find the ordinance of feet-washing instituted. "After that he poureth water into a basin and began to wash the disciple's feet and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded." Sixth verse, "Then cometh he to Simon Peter, Peter saith unto him, thou shalt never wash my feet, Jesus answered him, if I wash thee not thou hast no part, with me." Here Peter was like Naaman, the leper, he refused to be washed, but when the Lord told him he would have no part with him, he was willing to submit to this command. "If I, then, your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet, for I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you,"

I have tried to set forth some of the commands of God and we hope you will be obedient to God's Word; for hear him in the fourteenth chapter and fifteenth verse; "If ye love me keep my commandments.

Man is morally free in view of a universal divine influence, producing a sense of right, and wrong to lead a life of Christian piety, or abandon himself to course of outbreaking Thus reads part of the verse quoted: "Be thou faithful." This already and clearly shows that there has been an act of submission to the author ity of Christ. That we have taken his will see. Notice the sixth verse. "For yoke upon us, and we must now show our loyalty by a course of obedience.

It has only been through the will of obedience that we were enabled to withstand the storms thus far. Let us not forget the Savior's words, "And behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." Thus if we keep in view his commands whatsoever he commands us, we through the act of older dience will be treated accordingly as he assures us in his language just quoted.

According to Christ's teachings, it will be better for us to appear before the judgment seat of God, clad in plain apparel with a testimony, that according to his word, is indisputable, wherein we can testify that we have observed and obeyed his commandments, whether they be trine immersion, feet washing, nonconformity to the would, eating the Lord's Supper as a meal, or whatever else he has commanded us to do than to appear before him in all the pump gride and vanity of the world, attempt ing to establish a flimsy testimony, composed of non essentials. LEISURE HOURS.

BY MARY J. STEES.

AHLDREN, how you improve your leisure hours is very important. The improvement of leisure hours shapes one's future destiny. If, when young, you idle away your traie and depead on others to assist and provide for you, in stead of looking forward with the object in view of becoming industrious and in dependent you will ever be idle and cast down. I shall try to give you a few ex amples of industry which I read one day while stopping with strangers to shelter from rain. The first paper I took up had a piece something like the follow ing: A loy who was employed in a law yer's office, improved his leisure hours by reading or studying French. He be-French language. This he accomplish ed by laying aside the trashy newspapers and taking up semething more profita-Dunkards? Brethren, let us be strong ble. Another boy who was employed to drive coach, thought to improve his time while his mistress made calls. He found a book containing selected pieces of Virgil the Roman Poet, but could not read it, so he purchased a Latin gram mar, and soon became a good reader. In after years he became a learned and use ful man.

> And another hoy who was hired to open and shut the gate to let the teams out of an iron mine, determined to im proved his deisure hours. He sat on a log all day by the side of the gate and sometimes an hour would passere a team came. These hours he employed so well that there were scarcely a fact in history that escaped his attention. He began by studying a little book on English history that he found in the road. Having learned that thoroughly he bor rowed of a minister an ancient history This good man became greatly interest ed in him, and loaned him books, and was often seen sitting by him on the log conversing with him about the people of ancient times.

Lattle renders, how many of you have do not improve or appreciate them. Stop and think children. Did you ever make an estimate of the time you waste?

"I AM STRONG IN HIM."

MHE other day I was requested by a brother minister, who was unwell. to go and visit a dying child. He told me some remarkable things of the boy, eleven years of age, who, during three years of sickness, had manifested the most patient submission to the will of God, with a singular enlightenment of the Spirit. I went to visit him. The ehild had suffered exernitating paint for years he had not known one day of rest. I gazed with wonder at the boy. After drawing near to him, and speaking some words of sympathy, he looked at me to could not move with his blue eye it was the night before he died and breather auto my cars these aw words; "i nin strong a hun." The words were few, and uttered feelily. They, were the words of a feeble child, in a not header their being offered; but we [poor home, where the only ornament, are not compelled to take them."

THE VALUE OF A FIXED HEAR (

TF any of you are so wise that you know all the objections to Christianity, all the dark places which faith must encounter, all the dark sayings and perplexing mysterics of the gospel, remember that it is nothing to your credit. A wrecker who lives from the goods of foundered vessels and shipwrecked crews knows where all the dangerous rocks are along the coast, and he is always hovering about them. But the shipmaster knows more about the channel than about the reefs. A calm, selfpossessed captain of a vessel was asked, Captain, I suppose you know where every rock and shoal is along this whole coast, do you not?" "I know where they are not," was his reply, which is the more imporant thing. Admirable answer. If your faith is fixed on God and your heart is wedded to his service, you will know the dangers and difficulties and mysteries and contradictions are not. Riding peacefully upon the great deeps of his love, your greatest joy will be that you no longer live by doubts, but by affirmation.—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

WHAT IS WANTED?

DEOPLE want in you a Christianity that is Christian across the counters, over the dinner tables, behind the neighbor's as in his face. They want in you a Christianity that they can find in the temperance of the meal, in moderation of dress, in respect for authority, in amiability at home, in veracity and simplicity in mixed society. Rowland Hill used to say he would give very little for the religion of a man whose very dog and cat were not the better for it. They want fewer gossiping, slandering, giuttonous, peevish, conceited, bigoted Christians. To make them effectual, all our public religious measures, institutions, benevolent agencies, missions, need to be managed on a high-toned, scrupulous and unquestionable sense of honor, without evasion or partisanship, or overmuch of the serpent's cunning. The hand that gives away the Bible must be unspotted from the world. The money that sends the missionary to the heathen must be honestly enrued.

What the country wants now is prace tical women. The girl whose skill Hes in thumping the time out of an old piano is not calculated to run the happiness mill in the average American horse, and if she is not disposed to retire to some out of the way place and live with a cross-eyed aunt, the next best thing for her to do is to go to Africa, marry a Zulu prince. It is only the sensible girl who can make a batch of bread. propel a broom handle, wash her own clothes, talk back to the milkman, and wear hair that harts her when you pull it, who will fill the bill in these hard times.

That's the kind that is rapidly taking the front seals.

JAPAN has made rapid progress in civilizathur. Gen. Grant says that country has as fine schools as those of the United States. that he could travel all over the country and was not at all molested. English is bring taught the children; and on every hand one sees the great change which has come over that people.-Surely they must have been quite free from superstition and prejudice when they laid hold of modern methods; for how could they get the new without abandoning the old. It is likely that they accepted things on their merits, and never inquired how their fathers did, or what their mothers would think if alive.

In a recent letter, Mr. Ellinger, one of the members of the Palestine Commission, says: "Cau Palestine be made habitable? Can those who flock there be taught to draw their subsistance from the soil? Can life there the made tolerable and devoid of disgrace to the Jews? We know that it will be necessary to educate those that are there in the needs of the modern citizens of the world, they must be redeemed from the illusion under which, they live, and if the present generation cannot be delivered from the bondage of superstition, we must direct, our labors to the future of coming generations.— Palesting should no longer by the great poor house of the Jewish race.

Geven y would we reduce the price of the B AT W, were we able to do so, but we are giving at to our readers as cheap as we can. Most reforty new subscribers at Parsons, Kansas. None | lignous papers | have an income from outside of them are members of the Brethren Church, advertisements, but we believe about all of the Brethren's periodicals have no income from this source. Taking this into consideration, our papers are quite cheap, and we do not believe our Brethren demand a paper jordished at a sacrifice to the publishers. Knowing the "thorny road" through which all religious papersonned pass, we can sympathize with such as are struggling to obtain a footbold. We want to see all good things succeed, and should be sorry were any of our words, and actions to deprive worthy papers all they merit. To our co-temporaries in the Brotherhood we extend the hund of fraternal greeting, and wish them abundant prosperity in divine grace and in temporal things. We do not think any of the periodicals are hardened with patronage, "Live and let live," is a maxim we wish to bear in mind, but shall not complain if every brother subscribes for the Bistings at Work.

BRETHREN AT WORK

IIIII gratitude to God for the many blessngs which we have, enjoyed in the jeist, we come before our readers encouraged to issue this our Prospectus for our Pilth Volume.

By untiring industry on the part of the pullishers, and the increasing efforts of its friends the R. at W. has obtained an extensive energlation in the Middle, Southern and Western States. The distinctive features of God's people, and the earnest pleas for practical piety have been held forth by our contributors in a or account of the Lodge. May the Lord's manner which reflects credit upon the great _ sit kindness and abundant grace turn all to cause of the Lord Jesus. The future in this respect is no less promising. From all parts of .

BROTHER James R. Gish writing from Fish- the Brotherhood come letters of sympathy and commendation. These fill us with zeal and energy for the prosecution of the work, and by the grace of Him who is abundantly rich, we hope to dissappoint none of our readers.

THE DEBATE.

Brother Stein now takes the negative in his discussion with Dr. Ray: and our renders. while they have been well entertained by brother Stein in his affirmative, will be treated with arguments in favor of our faith and practice, that are still more convincing and weighty. We do not believe that any of our readers can afford to lose the arguments of Bro. Stein, who has spent much time in his researches for truth.

INFIDELITY AGAINST ITSELF.

The widespread teachings of modern atheism and infidelity call forth our earnest determinution to combat it. To this end a series of articles will be given, making infidelity say for Christianity what it says against it-or in other words, all it says against the Bible are mere assertions, and these assertions will be turned in favor of the Bible. This work requires much stody and patience, and we trust our readerwill appreciate our efforts in behalf of pure principles.

FOREIGN COBRESPONDENCE.

This department of the paper will be more fully developed, and we shall aim to keep our readers informed in such Ecclesiastical matters as will enable them to read the signs of the times in the fear of the Lord. Prot. McGarvey's Letters have afforded much pleasure, and perlinps given more information concerning Jerusalem and surroundings than any other modern writer. These Letters will be continued until he reaches home.

EXEGETICAL.

We design to fill about one page with Bible notes and comments, bringing out for our readers some of the best thoughts of our best thinkers. Here the writing talents of experienced pens and beginners will find a field for their productions, the only conditions being. brevity and Bible principles. We want and will invite the choicest thoughts of old and young for our "Bible Class Department."

CHURCH NEWS.

The affections must be cultivated, the joyful part our being fed as well as all other parts; hence church news, and the increase of Zion. whether in number or justy will form an important feature the coming year. Only that which is of general interest will be published, and matters which relate to individuals will be relegated to the indispensable "waste basket." Neither the paper nor the church should be wasted by local matters.

FIRINCIPLES.

The Brethres at Work is for that peace which Jesus speaks in John 14: 27. It believes that "the Kingdom of God is joy and peace" (Rom. 14: 17) therefore desires to "follow" the things which make for peace," while at the same time it shall earnestly contend for "the faith once delivered to the saints." To expose the weaknesses of Brethren, singling them out as subjects for reproof, is not the mission of the B. AT W. We regard the paper as a preacher. Whatever is required of preachers, we grant to the paper. What gospel preachers should not do in the pulpit, should not be done by the paper. The New Testament is its only guide in matters of tath and practice. It maintains that the numerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of parsion, and that the meritorious works of Jesus and his sufferings are the price of our redemption. If further maintains that buth, repentance and haptism are conditions of pardon, and that obedience to all the commandments of the Gospel is essential to the "reward of the inheritance."

TO THE FRONT,

With the above in contemplation we invite all our readers to rally to their paper, and hear it onward in complete triumph. We not only invite you to associate with us during 1880, but request that you induce as many others as possible to eurall themselves in the army of Brethren at Work. We shall fry, by the grace of God, not to disappoint you in anything, but with the ability which God giveth, send you each week a paper that is worthy your patronage and heartfelt sympathies. Fellow soldiers, what have you to say?

Sexica donation to Brothren's Tract Society.

TO OUR AGENTS.

THIS week we send you Prospectus, and hope that the energy and perseverance which have beretofore characterized your labors in behalf of the BRETHREN AT WORK may again be manifested, and that the success which has already attended your work may be continued for the promotion of Christian principles, That the duties and responsibilities, the difficulties and obstacles are many we need not particularly notice, for God will supply sufficient grace to overcome...

You perform an important part in the work of disseminating good reading matter. To help our fellow-mun to become better, and ensble him to enjoy blessings, is attended with a great reward. A religious journal in a family not only benefits the parents, but the minds of the children are moulded and fashioned by the character of the paper. It then becomes important what kind of papers are put into the hands of the people.

It is desired that you commence to canvass early, and forward the names as soon as possible, so that those who renew may not miss any numbers. If about all names could be sent to ns by December first, it would aid us very much in beginning the work for next year. This we believe you will do; and if we can in any way aid you, we shall be pleased to do so. If any of you have not received a Prospectus, please let us know at once, and we will send you one. However do not wait for one, but begin to canvass at once. You can transfer names to Prospectus when you receive it

Do cash business; for the text, "Owe no man anything" impresses our mind. We believe this is the Christian way of living-to "pay as you go." Please consider our case, and lend a helping hand, so that all our efforts to do good may prove successful. We return our sincere thanks to those who have labored so faithfully in the past, and permit us to assure you that your kindness and perseverance will never be forgotten. Should you need sample copies, please send for them.

CASH BUSINESS.

IT is only when we do a cash busines that we know what we are doing. Our printers must all be be paid regularly for their work; paper, ink, postage, fuel &c., must all be naid for promptly, and how can that be done without subscribers pay 1:48h.

More than this; if we do a credit business one man's labor will be required to keep books. Here then is an extra expense without an equivalent increa e in the income. Then when we think how slight the accommodation to a brother to wait on him for one dollar and fifty cents, and how great the disadvantage to us, it seems unreasonable that we should do so. When one dollar and fifty cents from you accommodates us as much as several thousand from us would you, do you think we ought to discommode ourselves to the amount of the latter to accommodate you of the former? Is it not much easier for you to get one dollar and fifty cents to accommodate us than it is for us to get several thousand dollars to give you the same accommodation? When one or two dollars, accomedates us as much as thousands of dollars do you, does it not look reasonable that you should favor us?

We hope, now, that you will see this matter in its true light and will not fail to renew your subscription at once. Do not wait until you get the last number of the paper before you renew, for then you will be certain to lose some numbers; hesides, it will save us the trouble of distributing the type in your name, and then afterwards setting it up again.

THAT "TEST."

MINCE becoming a partner in the office we I have had to devote more time to business than we had anticipated, when we proposed to answer whatever criticisms there would be made on our article in No. 5, entitled, "Sprinkling and pouring put to the test." We now feel that we have delayed too long, hence reprint what we have since discovered is wriften on the subject. It is gratifying to us to know that others who have thought upon the quesfrom agree with us,

From Cospel Visitor, Vol. XIX No. 1, we have the following:

TESPEED BAPTIZE VOL. WITH WATER." Matt. 3:11 the above translation strictly logical? a the expression in luminous with a clear princ al and philolegical exposition of the English Let us see. Webster gives the etb baptize no specific definition; however, be is always positive, since it may be used in the passive In the above sentence, 'baptize' is trangive having 'I' for its nominative and 'you' for object. Now whatever action is indicated withe verb implies must be exerted upon the bject you; and the phrase 'with water' must apress the means by which, or the means in shich such action is performed. Should the erb haptize mean to sprinkle, as many contend t does, we may, according to the law of gramnatical equivalents, test the truth of it by subaduting sprinkle for 'baptize,' and read: 'l inleed sprinkle you with water.' Now we can grike a man with a club, because strike means alay o blow, and we can use a club as a means which to lay on blow. We can boil water with fire, because we can employ fire as the neans by which to perform act upon the water. But we can not sprinkle a man with water, beigner the word sprinkly means to scatter in and drops or particle, and we can not use wagens a means by which to scatter a man with outly particles were it even possible to do so. "Now substitute jour and it will read: "I inbed pour you with water.' We can pour milk with water if it first be mingled with it, as we ru four another liquid into water, because the gord pour means to flow in a continuous tream, and there liquids are susceptible of such action. But water can not be used as a means

"We will substitute immerse, and read: "I indeed immerse you with water.' We can immerse any thing in water, but we can not use sater as a means by which to immerse any thing because the word immurse means to put min a fluid. The word immerse, however. tunds the test as an equivalent for the word haptize,' since it will take the 'you' after it and make sense. We can immerse a mun, using water as a medium in which the action is performed. The element water is essentially pasave in the ordinance of baptism; hence the freek preposition ca, should be translated by m and not with. The word sprinkle and pour as used in the above connection not making sense with either of the phrases, 'with water' or mater, prove that they give a wrong meaning to the original word baptize.

which to pour anything. That a man may

From Alexander Campbell's works on Hapusm, pp. 172, 173, 178, 179, 180 we find the following:

"Water was never poured, in any instance, appn a human being in virtue of any statute. law, or regulation of divine authority, for the purpose of sanctifying, parifying, or cleansing han from any kand of legal, ceremonial, or mor at pollution-for the sake of healing him or deansing him from any malady, physical or mental. Water mingled with ashes is commanded to be sprinkled, as a water of separation, or of cleansing persons pullated by any contact with things forbidden or declared unclean. The only passages in the Bible, Old Testament or New, in which this subject is menhoned, are-Num. viii. 8 and 7th: 'Sprinkle water of purifying [sin-water in the margin] upon them, [the Levites,] and let them shave all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes and make themselves clean 'Again, Num. xix. 13, 15, 19, and 21st verses. The manufacture of this 'sin-water,' or water of purification-the law of the manner of them, are detailed in this chapter. These four passages are the only passages in the law of Moses that speak of sprinkbug water. Allusion to this 'clean' or 'cleansing water' is found once, and only once in the Crophets-Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you.' Ez-kiel xxxvi. 25.

"I have let, out one occurrence of the word printh because of its doubtful interpretation. It is found in Isaiah 42: 15. 'So shall be sprinkle many nations," Junius and Tremelius, for whose learning and general critical acumen in ther batin version, lying before me, London edihos, 1581, I have a high respect, thus render it: Itaperspecific stupers gentes multas-30 shall be astunish (sprinkle with astonishment) many natons.' The Septuagint uses theum isontai-equivalent terms are employed. Adam Chirke observes on this passage: 'I retain the common rendering, though I am by no means satisfied with it. Yazzeh, frequent in the law, means to sprinkle; but the water sprinkled is the accusative case, the thing on which has al or el. Thaumasontai makes the best apodosis.' So think I. The connection would be more consistent. 'So shall be astonish many nations.' The kings shall shut their mouth at him.' So far as my position is concerned, any translation

"In the New Testament, we find the term sprinkle' only seven times. Heb. 9: 19, 21, Moses sprinkled both the book and all the people with blood,' Heb. 10: 22, 'Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.' In Heb. 6; 12, we have an allusion to the red beifer: 'The ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean.' Heb. 11: 28 also affords another instance: 'Moses kept the sprinkling of blood.' And Heb. 12: 24 alludes to the 'blood sprinkling.' While Peter, in his 1st Epistle. 1:2, alludes to the sprinkling of Christ's blood. So that sprinkling of water receives no conntenance whatever from the New Testament.

"For the spcial benefit of the more uneducated, I shall deduce my twelfth argument for immersion from the first precept of the decalogue of philology. That precent, according to my copy, reads thus: The definition of a word itself are always convertible terms, example: -a law is a rule of action-is equivaleut to saying, a rule of action is a law, lanthropy is the love of man,—is equivalent to saying, the love of man is philanthropy. Now, if a definition, or translation, (which is the same thing) be correct, the definition, if substituted for the term defined, will always make good sense, and be congruous with all the words in costruction.

"In order, then, to test the correctness of any definition or translation, we have only to substitute it in place of the original word defined or translated. If, in all places, the definition makes good sense, that is, if it be convertible with the word delined, it is correct; if not, it is incorrect. Let any one unacquainted with Greek take the New Testament, beginning with the first occurrence of haptize, or any of its family, and always substitute for it the definition or translation given, and, if it be the correct one, it will make sense; good, intelligible sense, in every instance.

"We, then, read:—'In those days, the Jews of Jerusalem and Judea went out to John, and were sprinkled by him in the Jordan, confessing their sms.' To perceive the impossibilty of such an occurrence, it is only necessary to know that the word sprinkle is always followed by the substance sprinkled, and next by the object. We can sprinkle ashes, dust, water, or blood, &c., because the particles can be severed with ease; but can we sprinkle a man? We may sprinkle something upon him; but it is impossible for any man to sprinkle another in a river; and it is equally so to sprinkle the river upon him. The same reasoning will apply to pour. This verb is also to be followed by the substance poured. Was it not impossible to pour the Jews in the Jordan, or anywhercelse? And to pour the Jordan upon them would be as unacceptable to them as it would have been impossible for the Baptist. It remains, then, that we try the word immerse. That, too, is followed by the substance to be immersed Now, a man ger bein need in weter, in oal in sand, in grief, in debt, or in the Spirit; though it is impossible to pour him into any one of these. Having, then, subjected these three to the same law of trial, two are condemned and reprobate; on confy is passible, desirable, and reasonable.

"Trustest will hold to the end of the volume; eyou where the association may appear strange and amounth in style, it will always be not practicable in fact, but good in meaning. For example: Jesus was to hapter in the Hely Spirit. The influence of the Spirit perial out fills some place; into that debt, in affliction, in any special fromble; but a person cannot be poured or sprinkled into these. Such an operation is always impossible, under any view, liferal or figurative.

"Let it be carefully noted, in this most useful test, that the three words are all to be sub- ing from six to fen yards in width from right pated to the same laws. 1st. The material is to left. Along this space on your right hand So shall be astouish many nations.' And in always to follow the verb. 2d. The place, or is a wall about three feet high, which separates performed is to follow the material. In baptism. the material is a mao; the element, water. John cannot pour the material James, neither can he sprinkle him; but he can immerse him in 2 river, in debt, in grief, &c. It is highly improper and ungrammatical to use such a phrase, unless by special agreement by the parties pres-

"Some persons accustomed to a very loose style, see no impropriety in the phrase, "sprinkle him-pour him," because of the supplement in their own minds. They think of the material which is sprinkled or poured upon him, and for brevity's sake, say sprinkle him; that is, sprinkle dust or water upon him. But, in testing the propriety of such phrases, the ellipsis must be supplied. There is no ellipsis in "immersion;" but there is always in sprinkle or pour him.-The material is suppressed, because it is to be supposed to be understood, as in the casesprinkle clean water upoo him. Now, while the abbreviation may be tolerated, so far as time is concerned, it is tolerable in physicial and grammatical propriety; because it is physically impossible to scatter a man into particles like dust, or to pour him out like water; and it is grammatically improper to suppress the proper object of the verb, and to place after it a word uot governed by it.

"Before submitting my next argument on this proposition, I beg leave to introduce the special testimony of one of America's most eminent classic scholars. I believe I only accord with enlightened public opinion, when I introduce Profesor Charles Anthon, of Columbia College, New York, as one of the most distinguished Greek scholars in the Union. His long devotion to the study and teaching of this language is not the only reason of this superiority. His laborious researches in ancient literature, his critical collation of copies, various readings, marginal notes, general criticisms, as editor of so many of the classics already in our colleges, and his excellent classical dictionary, have obtained for him this high reputation." Jerusalem.

UNCE the turnpike from Joppa to Jerusalem was constructed, nearly all travelers approach Jerusalem by that road, and enter through the Jappa gate, which is the only gate on the western side of the city.

When you are within about a mile of that gate you obtain your first view of it, and of the city wall running south of it. You have already seen, a few minutes sooner, the hills of Moab, and the Mount of Olives, and you could see that part of the western wall of the city which lies north of the Joppa gate, but for houses outside of the walls which hide it. You are now on ground more than 100 feet higher than that at the gate, and the road descends by a regular slope. The road before you is really a street; for it is lined with buildings and the walls of gardens and yards all the way. This is part of a new city, which has sprung up outside of the old one within the last ten years, and which extends all along the western and northern sides of the old city, and about a mile out

Passing down the street before you, you reach the Juppa gate. This gate is not an opening directly through the wall into the city, but a doorway 12 feet wide and about 16 high, which admits you into a square tower, 36 feet square and as high as the wall. When you get within this, you turn square to the left, pass through a similar opening on that side, and thus enter the city. The outside opening into the tower is supplied with folding doors five or six inches thick, covered with iron, and thickly set with the heads of iron holts. A Turkish soldier is always posted there with musket in hand, but he seems to have no business except to prevent any of his tellow-soldiers from going out with out a pass. Turkish saddiers are famous for deserting at every opportunity.

When you are through the gate you see an open space of a regular shape, stretching about 70 yards before you towards the east, and varythe five other versions of Bagster's Hexapla, thing, or relation into which the action is to be the street from the deep mont-surrounding and Send for a lot and give them to your neighbors immense old castle called the tower of David. This castle was spared by Titus when he destroyed the city, to show posterity how strong were the fortifications of the city which he succeeded in taking. On your left along this space, are a garden wall and some small houses. Through this space pass more than half of the people who go in and out of Jerusalem, and it is continually thronged. Beggars of every imaginable description swarm here like flies, and they put llies to shame by the tenacity with which they cling to every foreigner who passes along. If you stop to give one, they all crowd around you and you are compelled almost to fight before you can move on.

l'assing through this open space, you next have on your right a similar space turning to the right between the eastern side of the tower of David and a row of buildings in which is the American Consulate and Episcopal Churchthe latter a handsome building. Further to the south this space contracts into a street which runs through the south-western part of the

On your left, at the point we have now reached, are two stores after the European style. and next to them the Mediterranean hotel. Passing these and still going eastward, you enter David street, which runs directly through the city to the principal gateway into the temple inclosure. This street is about 8 feet wide between the sidewalks, and the sidewalks are about two feet wide. It is paved with stones of every shape, whose rounded surfaces are as smooth as glass, and you are compelled to watch your steps to keep from falling. You must also watch to keep from colliding with some of the crowd which constantly throng it, and with loaded asses and camels to whom the entire street occasionly must be given up. We rode through it two or three times, but we found it better to walk. Another striking feature of the street, and one which characterizes all the streets of all the cities of Palestine is, that here and there it is entirely covered over by an arched roof, or by the upper stories of houses, and that at other places matting is stretched across on poles above to shut out the direct heat of the sun.

On David street are the shops occupied chiefly by Jews, and called the Jewish Bazaar. The street descends ropidly as you advance to the east. The surface on the right hand starts off at first nearly on a level with the street, hut as you descend, it rises; and the streets leading in that direction become steeper and steeper, sometimes having stair steps to ascend them. All of this is the surface of Mt. Zion, along the northern slope of which David street is constructed. The descending grade of the street was made necessary by the fact that Mt. Moriah, the temple Mount, is 100 feet lower than Mt. Zion. Mt. Zion is divided into two dis tricts, or quarters, as they are called-the Armenian quarter toward the west, and the Jewish toward the east. Only about half of this mount, however, is now within the city, the southern half lying outside of the present wall. Consequently, the Mt. Zion of Modern Jerusalem is not more than half the size of the Mt. Zion of ancient times.

On your left hand, as you start down. David street from the Joppa gate, the ground to the left, or north side, ascends all the way to the north-west corner of the city, where it is 100 feet higher than the top of Mt. Zion. When you have gone about half way down David street, however, the ground in this direction runs off on a level. The higher ground to the left which you have now passed is the hill Acra. As you go still further down David street, the ground to the left descends with a continually mercusing slope into a valley out of which it rises again as it approaches the northern side of the city. This is the upper part of the Tyropeen valley. It once passed from this point with a rapid descent all the way between Mt. Zion and Mt. Morish; but where David street crosses its original bed, and for a short distance to the right and left of this street, it has been entirely filled up. Further south at shows itself again, but even there, according to that. Warren's excavations, it has been filled up 60 feet perpendicular. J. W. M. Graver.

We learn from $oldsymbol{A}$, this binguage that the innuisters spoken of in the last part of the verse must be angels, also in the 14th verse of the same chapter the angels are called "ministering spirits, We conclude then that the angels are ministers, but why called a "flame of fire?" for God has sent them, to the earth at various, times to minister to man in the form of a fluore of fire. Exodies 3: 2, rends as follows: "And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him (Moses) in s flame of fire out of the midst of a bush, and he looked and behold the bush burned with fire and the bush was not consumed," and Elisha saw a chariot, and horses of fire receive Ehjah when he was translated. 2 Kings, 2:41, 1 could multiply these examples, but deem it R. ANSWER TO BROTHER YOUNCE.

I believe that it is generally chanced by us that we are strictly scriptural in our practice. Will some brother or sister please tell us where the command to example was given by Christ of the apostles for the practice of the silutation between the Bugger and communion? A scriptural answer is desired, and not the tradition of the edders (this D V (0.80 L) side of the apostless.

DMRST, we do not suppose that any one would Yentare to assert that there is any precept or example given by Christ or the squistles for the practice of the sabilitation ad the time referred to in the query, or at any other partieular time to place, but like many other christian exercises, such as songing, praying, fasting, ac-, to be observed by Rod's children when and where circumstances, would indicate its propaety, to be debeniumed in the minds of those who respect and desire to obey the command, in the feur of God and to aless of man.

I repeat that it appears to me that there could be no more suitable time to give each other a solemn pledge of our fidelity, our intention to be true to each other under all circumstances and to sent this pledge by a warm, Christian salutation. Therefore I can see no good reason for abandoning this practice, though we may not have a command nor example that it should be so done, if so, for the same reason we may abandon it alto-B. F. Dear Brethren:-

CCORDING to previous arrangements, our Hurvest Meeting was held last Sunday, had a very pleasant meeting and a large nudience. Our large meeting-house was filled to overflow and the very best of order prevailed during meeting. Services were opened at 10: 30 A. M.; lunch at 12; 30 P. M.; preaching at 2 P. M., and Sumlay-school at 4 P. M. Eld. Jesse Calvert preached, assisted by Davis Younce and others. Brother Calvert told us many good things, and some very hard things. Why don't you think he told us that it had better not rain tor three years and six months, if we only intended to buy as another farm, or buy some more railroad stock, or just fill our coffers, or our corpet sacks, or buy fine jewelry, ribbons and gewgaws for our daughters! But he and we had better give our surplus money to the Missionary cause. Why don't you think he said that each of us should pay fifty cents al least, to the Mission Fund, or even more if we could stand it. Just think of that! But then brother Calvert told as some very good things blunders without calling him to account, Come again, brother Calvert. The meeting closed with the very best of feeling.

hers now very dry, so dry that farmers can hardly do their plowing, and the weather is warra. Health g nerally good. Corn will be an average crop. Apples, will not be plentyenough for home use. Peaches are scarce. We cont splats healing our communion on the 24 as of October, commencing at 10 A, M. Counand be with us. Our Sunday-chool is doing finely and is well attended. Now we think the reader will see, at least one good unavoidable reason for the support of our dear brother Hope and family. When many others who have no charge, are seeking employment and can not obtain it, how can it be expected that one who must walk from ten to twenty miles to fill appointments on Saturday and return on Monday, can get it, and more especially when we remember that the custom of the country is to hire all, if possible, by the year or half year, so that small jobs, such as a missionary could work at what time he could be at home, are not to be had? While we were there we spared no effort to find out something he might get at to earn something, but we failed for reasons already paren. A+ he is a saddler, the thought of setting up business was suggested, but when we examined that matter we saw it would not justily him because of low prices, much competion and be avy fax. Even if he would devote all his time to the laisings, and under the circumstances he could only devote four days in a week to work to do anything like justice to the mission, and even in in his sermon, so that we can look over his devoting nearly all the time, he cannot fill all the calls for preaching, and it becames to be an important question in our minds whether we shall neglect a good work which is prospering, (eight souls been baptized since June last), for the sake of the small, ves, very small sum of two dollars to each congregation in the Brothechood; if two limited members would only be one cent enels, and whele many and strong appeaks are being made and many favorable responses follow the City Me non, (which we are glad to seel we hope however, the dear brethren and sisters will also remember, (especially the olders) their duty towards, the Danish Miscom as well as their duty to respect the Annual Meeting, for elders, cannot consist effy require the members to they the decisions of A. OUR LORD'S DAY DOINGS.

THE brethren, sisters and triends met Aug 31st, at 10:30 A. M. in Seminary Chapel for dedicatory services. Bro. J. C. Lehman of Franklin Grove being present opened the exerses with an exhortation and prayer. Bro. J. W. Stein then led in discourse by using Psalm 84: 10, 11.—

DAVID'S CHOICE.

(A. Synopsis.)

I. He called attention

TO THE BOUSE OF GOD.

That David was a man after the Divine Image ---"God's own beart." Therefore he desired close intimacy with Him, because it was most accordant with his inspired langings

11. THE PLACE HE WOULD BATHER OCCUPY, THAN DWEEL IN THE TENTS OF WICKEDNESS. That of the lumble position of a dourkeeper Just so it was in the "House of His God." -- A house consecrated to the service of Him whom His soul level, rather than dwell in the transign Inhernacles of ambition, vanity, and the attendant pleasures of a life discordant to the will of God.

III. THE REASON HE ASSUMED FOR THIS PREFERENCE. "For the Lord God is a run and shield, the Lord will give grace and glowy; no qual thing will He withhold from them O & walk aprightly." How explicit and grand his reasons. They are the experience of every truly regenerated heart, -the numerting influence governing their lives.

The entire discourse was delivered in an impressive manner, with argent appeals to believe ers that our deportment be actuated by the deep-toned picty of our profession: also with curnest appeals to the unconverted to accept a position in "God's spiritual House" if it be but an humble one. A few appropriate remarks by brother behman and services closed, we believe with a bettered condition of the ambitors. In the evening we met again for public devotion, when Bro. J. II. Moore was present and addressed an audience from Rom. 12; 2. Theme, TRANSFORMATION OF THE REART.

Sept. 7th, 10: 30 A. M. met again in the chapel for divine, service, at which hour. Eld. Stein addressed an attentive audience, composed largely of students and village friends. Theme, "THE CONSTRAINING INFLUENCE OF CHRIST'S LOVE. 9-2 Cor. 5:14. He showed in what ways Christ's love has a constraining and restraining influence upon the hearts and minds of individunls, especially those who profess to know Him as their Savior. Brother Stein strikes at popular sins without reserve, and shows the abso-Inte necessity of purity of purpose and chastity of life in all its phases. His remarks tend to incite all to feel they should be more devoted to the cause of right and truth, as revealed in the Gospel,-have in them less of earth and more of heaven.

At close of "chapel service" Sept. 14th, we were much delighted to learn that desconess Matter A. Lear had consented to address us. Met at usual hour in church expectly when sister Leur delivered an instructive, and affecting discourse based upon Eph. 9-4; after which one of the manishers present closed the meeting. OFR BIRLS SCHOOL

On each of the days, corresponding with the above dates, "Sem. B/S" met in regular session at 4000 p. w. and an especial interest was manifested on the part of all in attendance. The number present at our last meeting was 160, at which time there were 60 in 3d. Div., and the little folks seemed much pleased over the finted of publisher scenal price. In sending for books always Inditren at Work presented them. Thus

"Time is winging us away, To our eternal home,"

A SOLEMN DUTY, DANGEROUS TO NEGLECT.

RV C. C. ROOT.

THERE is, perhaps no Christian duty of more I importance to the success of the church and cause of Christ than that of diligence in assembling ourselves together at the time and place appointed for public worship. Few, indeed, of you, dear brethren and sisters, who are deprived of this blessed privilege, know to what extent your power in the church to do good is curtailed. Then, may we not with propriety ask of you, to be the more fervently engaged in prayer in behalf of the services of the sanctuary, though not yourselves present. Your power in the sauctuary, were you present, would consist in these; A word fittly spoken for desus, are like "apples of gold in pictures of silver," are not heard there. While the church goeth forth, "as a mighty army with banners, and shineth dear as the sun, fair as the moon; then, a soldier of the army is absent, and a star of the glorious constellation is not seen." Hence the arrow of conviction, by word or by a silent act, was not centered by you rate the heart of one who should have there and then died unto sin but went on in sin, losing, otherwise, its best apportunity - Or that light that did not shine late that heavenly place to be shed alread in some leneglited soul, which, let your indigence only, was destined to eternal day on evolusting whit. Then, also your presence might have Songarated the drooping spirit of the minister decouraged by the absence of negligent mem | what I, in my short experience, deserve to be the | heven to be true, and it will have its resurns shall be as Moord Z on that cause does not seed to be true.

bers, and from care of the safety of others absent, he was by ne means so well composed and qualified for the solemn task as if all had been present. Hence your absence with that of others may have hindered or curtifled the power of that word which there and then would have otherwise been made effectual in the pawer of God unto salvation; and saved poor numsters from the temptation of yielding in weakness to the discouragement.

The apostle, saw infinitely more in the Com-MAND, "not to forsake the assembling of yourselves together," than we, at once may comparehend. And for this reason this subject was thought worthy of this effort, so that those who are unavoidab'y deprived of this great means of occupying their talent, might be cucouraged to apply every other God-given means in their reach to supply what is lost there. And also to impress upon the minds of those who could attend and do not, the awful responsibility that rests upon and against them, to be answer ed at the great and coming day. And as it is a growing practice and threatens a formidable approaching danger, the watchman on the walls of Zion must feel it his duty to sound out might dy the alarm. While this is read, which I shall now add, no doubt a thousand and one hundred and ten witnesses will say, Amen. And that is this: That the longer we persistently or negagently absented ourselves from the loanse of the Lord, the less desire we had to be there, and the farther we found ourselves on the backs grounds of holy rectitude and godliness. Then, is it not an approaching danger as the practice becomes more prevalent?

Now when excuses are to be made for not attending, let such excuses always be made in our consciences to God. For when you make them to your brethron it only disgusts them. for they know if your excuses were laudable you would not need to make them, but would be self-evident. But if you can command a business of a capital of hundreds or thousands and tell your brethren the cause of your absence was on account of not owning a private conveyance, your brother will only lose confidence in your fidelity. You should look to your Maker and Master for an excuse; remember that a mechanic who is worth $2,000 can as easily buy a horse and carriage for $300 as a farmer can who is worth no more; and as to keeping a horse, whenever the farmer sells a bushel of grain at what he can afford to raise it, the mechanic can buy it at that; and the mechanic seldom adheres to a trade that does not hold its own with that of the farmer.

But the poor we have always with us, but they seldom make excuses to men, for they know God knows their circumstances without making excuses to men. But truly devoted, poor Christians will walk as far to church on the Lord's day, and expose themselves as much to the inclemency of the weather to do so, as they will on week days to attend to worldly matters; while some professing Christianity will scarcely ride out and expose themselves as much to attend worship as they would to attend to business affairs. Minister's duty require that all of their auditors should know full well that few things can lawfully hunder them. Hence for you to say, won't go to day because then will be but lew there," is in virtue to say, "the minister that's there and is wounded, may tor my part, be altogether slam; or it is simply more fully to bring about what had been without your aid so far already wrong to be suffered, to wit; a failure in the binase of God. FALSE WITNESSES.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness." Matt. 19;

O act falsely is a dishonor to any person, for there is always some one deceived by him. And when it comes to bearing false witness in any case concerning any matter, there is always. one party deceived, and at the same time the one against whom the witness goes is greatly injured, while both judge and jury are deceived: and by it men of innocency have been condemned to fine, yea, to imprisonment and death. Then we do not wonder why God made it a strict point of law, "Thou shalt not bear false griness against thy neighbor," and though evel so wrong and hariful to character, yet, the evil was practiced in all ages, so that even holy men of God, had to suffer by it. Rev. 35: 11. David said false witnesses did rise up, they laid to my charge things that I knew not, &c. Notwithstanding we are told that a false witness shall not go unpunished, and he that speaketh hes shill not escape. Deut. 19: 16, 20. We can see what God's law required to be done with him that bore false witness against his brother; He was to suffer all the evil, before all, that he had thought to bring on his brethren. So Israel was told to put the evil away from among them, and those which remain shall hear and fear, and thine eye shall not pity, but life shall go for life. Yet men would continue to bear false witness out of envy and malice, when they could not accombish their object in an honest way, as we see in Matt. 26: 59-60. Here they even sought false witnesses, and it seems they were not so very plenty in that day; but at last they found two that was willing to bear false witness. It seems that talse witnesses could be found when sought for, and that by a people professing godliness, to bear false witness against the best person on earth, (Jesus the Amounted Onel. Though men knew long since that falsehoods and hes were an evil, and the devil its author, and an abominable crime that will not pass the judgment of God unjumished, and will exclude the guilty one from the king- | right - The brethren will find that the hospidom of Christ and of God, yet we can trace this evil into the church in an early day. in all cases, unless positively proven to the contrary. We are aware that the same kind of characters are in the world and in families, yea, in churches that are represented in the above passages of Scripture named in this article. Some of us have learned to know such that spoke falsely for self-gain or to cheat the government out of a few dollars tax, they will say this is all we have. This is like Ananias, false truth to bear against his neighbor, while 2 friend from his due penalty. I say again, let us raise the alarm to our children, to our neighbors, yea, to the church, that this alarming sin may be rooted up and die. Oh, when will it die? I know when it will be buried, and its burying-ground in the bottomless pit where Satan the old serpent will be scaled up that bore the first false witness, yea, was the first deceiv-

RELIGION.

TE have seldom read a more finished description of this heavenly principle, in easy language, than the following, extracted from the English Monthly Review; -

"Religion- that messenger of Heavendwells not exclusively in cells or cloisters, but goes forth among men, not to frown upon their happiness, but to do them good; she is familiar and cheerful at the tables and fire-sides of the happy; she is equally intimate in the dwellings of poverty and sorrow, where she encourages the innocent smiles of youth, and kindles aglow of serenity on the venerable front of age; she is found, too, at the bed-side of the sick, when the attendants have ceased from their labors, and the heart is almost still; she is seen in the house of mourning, pointing upward to the house not made with hands; she will not retire so long as there is evil that can be prevented, or kindness that can be given, and it is not till the last duty is done that she hastens away and raises her altar in the wilderness, so that she may not be seen of men."

THE woman was old, and rugged, and gray, And bent with the chill of the winter's day The streets were white with a recent snow, And the woman's feet with age were slow.

At the crowded crossing she waited long, Jostled aside by the careless throng Of human beings who passed her by, Unheeded the glance of her anxious eye.

Down the street, with laughter and shout, Glad in the freedom of "school let cort," Come, happy boys, like a flock of sheep, Hailing the snow, julied white and deep, Passed the woman, so old and gray, Hastened the children on their way,

None offered a helping hand to her, So weak so timid, afraid to stir, Lest the carriage wheels or the horses' feet. Should trample her down in the slippery street,

At last came out of the merry troop The gayest boy of all the group; He pansed beside her, and whispered low, "I'll help you across if you wish to god"

Her aged hand on hos strong, young arm She placed, and so, without hart or farm, He guided the trembling feet along, Proud that his own were firm and strong; Then back again to his friends he went, His young heart happy and well content.

A DELUSIVE IDEA.

BY 8, W. 170Y.

"The gates of hell shall not prevail against it " Matt. 16; 48,

TMOM the above passage of Scripture very many get the idea that God's protection over his church is such that it cannot err, that no evil or delusive doctrine can prevail against it, or do it any essential harm. This idea is confirmed by another passage, viz: "Whatsoever ye bind on earth, shall be bound sition for the extension of Zion's borders. in heaven." (Versu 19.) Church infallibility is proven in the minds of many | compare favorably to the means extend-Church resorts to the same doctrine to as heretofore stated, we will first notice and are somewhat moved, "with joy re prove the infallibility of the Pope. In reference to the mineteenth verse, it is said the Jews made a man a doctor of the law, they used to put into his hands the key of the closet in the temple where the sacred writings were deposited, sygmfying that they gave him anthority to teach and to explain the Scriptures and law of God to the people, Likewise Christ gave to Peter this emblem of anthority, which he also freely used upon the day of Pentecost and in the house of Cornelius; and further we have no account of any successor, except in the line of Popes, and these we do not recognize.

"WHAT BECOMES OF THE SEED?

HV S. J. BUSSERWAN,

IT is a query in the minds of many why so little success attends the efforts that are being put forth in the conversion of the sinner. The minister who spends his time, talent and a large share of his means in his calling, is sometimes. made to mourn over his little success. In looking over his congregation he sees the approving smile, the falling tear and the penitent look. But ofttimes in other visits he sees works of indifference in those former mellowed hearts, and hopes of success not flattering. The members attend church regularly and seem to fill their places with credit to themselves and to the cause, yet their labors are seemingly fruitless. The unconverted even look with surprise at the little successes of the church, little thinking that the cause may lie within themselves, What then is the cause of all this fruitless labor? The reasons are obvious and not a few. It is admitted by all that great efforts are being made for the extension of Christ's kingdom. Time, talent and means, all me expended and eyearthing available brought into requi-But with all this the success does not ness as of the church and of the world. The line of demarcation is so faintly

It is a natural instinct in man to re before John, the revelator, left the main in his original position unless he eril, error, and false doctrine did pre-| manufacture are in disuse and give way of their superior advantages. The farm Now the delusion in that idea is this: ers or mechanics being convicted of the tive country with the utmost tenacity are willing to live and die there unless we can learn of a better country possess we. When those facts are established poor, wretched, blind and maked, and we change. The line between the church and the world must be very considenous, 11ts advantages must be exhibited; its

the world into the church will be the happy result. "I see no difference between the church and the world." "I am just as good as those in the church," are common expressions by some, and hence see no necessity of a change. "The church has her "festivals," so have we. She has her "fairs," so have we. She has her "public auctions," pretending to sell a thing of great value (?) when she has not, so have we. She has her "shows" and "grab bags" at ten cents a grip, all to raise money for the Lord (?) so have we. They do things just as we who are classed the "world," and we think there is such similarity that we would have but little change.

The fault may lie largely with individual members, who at home or abroad do not show that they have passed from death unto life by that fervent love godly walk, and holy conversation as they should. In assembling at public worship instead of being earnestly engaged in secret prayer for the cause and for the success of their ministers, will sit and talk about their secular affairs, crops. horses, merchandise, and in this way the seed that is sown by the carnesfly engaged saint, measurably, if not altogether loses its effects.

Again, it may be the ministers are at fault. He is a speculative in his delib erations, theorizes much; but the practical part is neglected. In the pulpit he may be effective, but when out he destroys it all by indifferent and thoughtless talk. This is the way the good seed is lost by many unthinking professors of the religion of Jesus. Why not bring shout a much needed reform! Cling to the add paths, get the world out of the heart, and more of Christ in, and live separate from the world, then can the line be conspicuously drawn, the church wield a greater influence and produce happier results. The sinner who looks surprisingly at the slow working of the church, let us look at him and see if he is not also at fault. There are too many superficial hearers among them, full of sentimentalism, having no depth. If they find a minister who will preach their pet theories, be full of sensationalism, wit and humor; he is "just the man." but upon a more mature, reflection will condemn him for it. They listen to a by these two passages. The Papal ed. In enumerating some of the reasons discourse of one more seriously disposed ceive the word," but on account of having no depth the plant withers and the seed is lost. Some are "compromising hencers." They hear the word, but when the thorn of persecution arises or of self denial will compromise their religion, sell their birthright for a "mess of puttage" and allow the seed to be chok ed. Again, some are "hardened hear. ers," when the pearls othe religion of rather a sorrowful one, showing that Implements of machinery of ancient Jesus) are east (preached) however plain and practical "because of the word, by and by they become offended and trainplo it under their feet and receive it not." Thus looking at the carelessness of many Christian professors and of the many agents that the enemy has employed we can readily see where the seed is going, and how lost.

We are still glad to know, there are some who are "practical hearers," the ground of whose hearts are ever mellow. and receive the truth of Jesus and praccredit of the cause, and by their holy lan-y in farnishing fashions to satisfy of the gospel and travel together on the npon him whatever. PRIDE

BY A BROCKER,

ND now abideth pride, fashion, ex. travagance, these three, but the greatest of these three is pride, simply because it is the root of the whole matter. Destroy the root and the tree will die. It is hardly worth while to waste amunition in shooting at fashion and ex. travagance as long as the root is alive. Most persons say that it does not mat. ter how people dress, pride is in the heart. Very true, dont straws show which way the wind blow; plain exteri. or may cover up a Idain heart. Some rules work two ways, but some will not. We are asked whether a person might not be foud of dress and ornaments with. out being proud; I reply, when you see the fox's tail peeping out of the hole you may be sure the fox is within. Jew. elry, costly and fashionable clothing may all be innocent things in their places, but when hing upon a human form they give most conclusive evidence of a proud heart. But is it possible that a man can be found at this advanced age of refine. ment that dares to write or speak a word against pride and its consequences?

The pulpits have nearly all shut down on that style of preaching. The fact is, we have passed that age and are living in better times. Our fathers and mothers were far behind the times; they were good enough in their way, but they would not do now; they wore plain clothes, and sung old fashioned hyuns; they talked and acted like some old pilgrims that were looking for a better country, and when they left the world they contended to the very last that they were going to a city where there is no night. But they are nearly all out of the way now, and the people have a mind to try a different name. We can be Christians now and do as we like. We can have fine churches, cushioned seats, costly carpets, a fashionable preacher, and all our singing done to order Now if this is not singing with the spirit and with the understanding also, then what is it! That is the question. I know it is a little risky to speak out against prode at this day and age, because the churches are full of it, and hundreds who occupy the pulpit whose duty it is to point out these evils plainly are like "dumb dogs, they don't even bark at it," and in proportion as pride gains in a church spirmal life dies out, they will not, cannot dwell tegether, for they are eternal opposites. It is a sin for men and women professing Christianity to spend money the way they do to gratify a proud heart, when ten out of every twelve of the human race are yet unsaved, and six out of twelve have not so much as heard the gospel of Christ. There are many evils in the land and in the church, but I doubt if any evil is doing more had in than pride. It has made its way into the church by degrees, and now rules with a rod of iron. tice it in honor to his name, and to the It seems that nearly all creation is kept plety constrain others to accept the terms | the critiqs of the deprayed heart. this Christ's soul was in the hell here seen and felt, then will conviction fall and undefiled; let us ever be of the ever he is managing it most successfully in spoken of Acts 2:31, "that his soul was, readily, and stepping over the line from are not of this world," that our light [destroying souls. A THOUSAND YEARS WITH CHRIST.

BY JANE ROBINSON.

eFor the Lord bimself shall descend from serven with a shout, with the voice of the archugel, and with the trump of Goo: and the dead Christ shall rise first, then we which are ways and remain shall be caught up together ath them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Thess. 1: 16, 17. "But the rest of the dead hed not again until the thousand years were Anished This is the first resurrection Blessd and holy is he that bath part in the first marrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be prests of God and of Christ, and shotl organ with him a thousand gars," Rev. 23; 5, 4;

BLESSED thought to be worthy if dead to come with Christ, and if living to remain with him a thousand cears. If a thousand years on earth with our blessed Redeemer were all that we would receive, is not worth striving ior! But this is not all, he still offers us more and that is eternal life. Oh, what a dreadful thought to think of lying in the grave till the end of the thousand years, then to come forth to be cast into the lake of fire. Rev. 20: 14.

Brethren and sisters, let us be careful that we do not set our hearts too much on the things of this world, and so en tangle ourselves as to be deprived of the say, stop in your downward course, and think what a dreadful thing it would be to be east out from all that is good and holy. Think, sinner, and thee to the Lord. for safety, for he stands with outstretch ed arms to receive you. I ask you in the name of Christ to take his yoke upon you, for he says, "my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Matt. 11: 30. The day will come when you will say, blessed day that I fled to Jesus for relief, for then you are safe from the storms. of this life, and when the monster death shall chaim you as his, you can say, "I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith." Oh, what a blessed thing to he able to say this, and to enter into the rest of the Father which art in heaven! Brethren and sisters, may God help each and all of us to say this. Let us be soher and temperate in all things, and not let the filth of this world spot our garments; let us love one another as Christ loved us, ever looking to him for strength, for without him we can do nothing.

GO, TEACH, BAPTIZE, WHO? WHERE? THE PROMISE?

BY W. J. H. BAUMAN.

MRST, the Savior's command is to go. This is imperative, and as long as we refuse we disobey one of the most positive commands of the great Law-giver. "If any man have not the Sparit of Christ he is none of his." When Christ was yet with the Father, the Spirit said, "Go." Yes, go and save a perishing world. Did not say wait till you are sent for; but go and be aggressive; force I miself upon them. The command to go there is given, not only by precept. but by example. No squirming, brethrem it will not do.

The second command of the great commission is just as imperative as the first. It says, "Teach." Let them strike.

but make them hear. "Cry aloud, spare not." "Tell my people their sins and the house of Jacob its transgression." All This is applied in the command, "Teach." Teaching the world the ways of the Lord requires the same aggressive spirit that we find inherent in the command, "Go." The carnal mind being enmity against God, not subject to his will, &c. Men are not going to urge us to come and teach them a doctrine so contrary to their natural disposition. The world did not want Christ to teach the doctrine he did. but still he taught it, having their good in view. - Children, when sick, don't generally want to take medicine, and nurses must often use force.

In teaching the gospel we are not to use physical but spiritual force. Pierce the hearts of men with "the sharper than any two edged sword! —the word of God. Baptize comes in number 3. This is also imperative like the rest. No promise given without it, and if men like thieves and robbers want to climb into the fold some other way and claim the promises of God, aggressiveness on our part is also required in keeping them out. It may bring upon us frowns; but if these things were done in the green tree, what else need we expect in the dry. But who is to go? We answer, men full of the Holy Ghost-full of power—men who are apt (qualified) to teach. Men sound in the faith "once delivered to the saints." It short, men who have a saving knowledge of Christ. But who ! are they to teach? Answer, those who in any hearer or looker on. are susceptible of being taught, old or young, rich or poor, king or peasant, first resurrection. To the sinner I would | black or white. The dwellers in cities, towns, or country, whether found in Asia, Africa, Europe, America, or Australia. But what is to be taught? Answer, the everlasting gospel of Christ.

> The object of going, teaching, and haptizing is to liberate men from the thralldom of sin, and as the gospel of Jesus is a perfect law of liberty nothing else is necessary to be taught for that gospel. Yes, that gospel alone can save men. Paul says it is the not a power of God unto salvation, &c. Teaching the gospel is what Jesus meant when he said, "teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Going to law with a neighbor is not only unpleasant, and often mischievous but dangerous. The cost, taking time into the account, often amounts to more than the principal. It might be well to take a lesson from a certain judge, who, when calling cases for trial, came to one of debt. He asked the attorney the amount in dispute and was answered pay that" and handed it over.

MY PUPILS.

BY MARY J. STEES.

THIS morning as I started to school I felt both happy and sad. Happy because I am anxious to begin my new "wreath," sad because I must soou say good-by to the dear boys and girls with whom I have spent so many happy hours. Happy hours did I say? Yes, happy hours, for I assure you I have very good boys and girls. I have not heard a bad word on the play-ground, nor any reported as having used bad words. I have had no quarrels, or disputes to settle during the term. All seemed to be per fect harmony.

It is lovable to watch them at play, for they play with all their might and strength and when they hear the bell ring to call them to work, they are all prompt in getting to their scats with their faces all aglow; and as the gentle breezes sweep through the room they seem to kiss each red cheek and wake the urchin's mind to study. O! to see these beautiful little faces, and, too, the sweet sound of each voice as it joins in singing, lights and awakes the admiration

But with these, as with everything else I love on earth, I must sooner or later part, only to remember. Oh, could every parent and teacher only know that each child would attain to wisdom's ways, what a happy consolation it would be! But this is impossible; we must part, wondering, for the future alone can tell. The good and industrions will find his friends among the wise, the honorable and learned. While the indolent will find his among the careless, the ig norant, and the unconth. Reader, will you be industrious, or idle?

THE RIGHTEOUS DEAD.

CINCE the transgression of our first parents death has passed upon all unto the end of the world. Glorious mankind. Who has not stood by the death bed of a relative or friend and watched the sinking form as death stole a march upon his victim?

> The mother's tears of affection moisten the infant brow of death. Her farewell kiss is planted upon the lips that so often have been pressed to hers for the good-night kiss, and then the little one is laid away in its dusty bed to rest. The mother weeps for the child, the child weeps for the mother, the brother for the sister and the sister for the brother. All weep at the portals of the grave.

But why weep for the righteous dead for they have gone "Where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." Beautiful thought! no feelings of animosity can pierce their way through that lonely mound. No cruel darts of sorrow, no keen arrows of false friendship can penetrate that pulseless heart. We often retire to the graves of our loved ones and the thirsty dust that covers their affectionate forms drinks the scalding tears of sorrow. But mourner, look up through that blinding mist of tears "two dollars." The judge said, "I will and see the eye of pity that looks down from above. Hear the comforting words of God enters the heart of man, and inthat so many long years ago fell from Wisdom is the olive that springeth | those lips that once were silent in that mighty sleep; "I am the resurrection and the life he that believeth on me though and perform without fail your resolve.

he were dead, yet shall he live." The car that his so long been deaf, will catch the sound of the Life Giver's voice as it reverberates throughthe chambers of the dead, and those moldy eyelids that have been so long pressed down by the fiager of death will open to behold their glorious reward. "The aged Christian who has plodded his way along the mazy thoroughfare of life natil way worn and weary be fell asleep, will hear that voice that bids the righteous deal from their dusty heds arise. The youthful voyager whose bark sank beneath the waters while sailing in the Master's service, will respond to its welcome tones, and chang ing his shroud for the glistening robes of white, will meet in mid air, him who unlocked his prison cell."" Then will be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"—Sel.

GOOD CONDUCT.

Y J G SSYICER.

MOOD conduct is one of the most important things in life. It matters not how beautiful persons may be, how well they may do ss, or now much wealth they may have in store, if their conduct is not good, their place in society is scarcely over as they would desire. Knowing that this is true, we should ever strive to control our conduct, and thereby gain the respect and esteem of all surrounding persons. In order to do this we have many things to notice, a few of which we shall mention. We must attend to our own business, and it we do this aright, we will have enough to do without attending to other people's business. Avoid talking about ourselves. and praising our own works, or proclaiming our own deeds. If they are good, they will proclaim themselves; if had, the less we say about them the better. Never tell falsehoods. There is no higher virtue than the love of truth. Avoid manifestations of ill temper; reason is given for our guide, and passion is the tempest by which reason is overthrown. A moment's passion has frequently cut off life's friendship, destroy ed a life's hope, embittered a life's peace, and brought on unending sorrow and disgrace. We must be honest, for this is a duty to God and man. Avoid idleness, for it is the root of many evils. Be kind, polite, and sociable; remember that thought illumines thought, and smiles win smiles. Be punctual. One moment too late has lost many a golden apportunity. Behave in the presence of all company with a feeling of high respect to all. In conclusion, we must ever strive and hope for the best, think only of the worst, and kindly bear whatever happens.

Dicatur, Mahama.

The course of a drunkard is like a great stone started from the top of a hill. It first moves slowly, and a slight obstruction will often stay its course, but after it is fairly in motion it rolls, plunges and tears its way down, down, crushing and destroying whatever may be in the course of its flight, until the forces which draw it downward are exhausted, and it lies motionless and dead at the foot of the plain. There is but one exception to this rule, and that is when the grace terposes its mighty power to save him.

WHEN a man takes more pains to separate himself from saints than from sinners, and yet claims allegiance to the "one body," we suspect that there is something wrong with him. He is then a subject of pity, prayer and Christian sympathy.

THE New Testament Revision Company, meeting at Westminster, the Athenaum states. have made such progress in their work that the New Testament is likely to be published by the University presses early in 1880. It is intended to issue in the first instance two editionsa large, handsome oclavo; and a small, cheaper volume, for more general use. The English and American companies are now busy with the final revision of passages in which the same Greek words are found, so as to bring the translation into greater harmony,

OUR PURPOSE

Gentle Renders :-

IN accepting a position upon the Editorial stuff of the Brethnen at Work, it is my purpose, by the help of the Lord, to cling to the primitive tenets of our holy religion, and "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints." We need to "stand in the ways and enquire for the old paths, where is the good way, and we shall find rest unto our souls." In our Christian principles we need steadlistness In maintaining those principles we need kind ness, courage and fidelity. In all our co-operative efforts to advance our Master's cause we should "abound in the work of the Lord." Here we need not only integrity of purpose, but bomble minds, gentle and forgiving spirits, loving hearts, holy and consecrated lives, ever emulating the lovely character and life of our adorable Redeemer.

It is proper to state here that other pressing engagements and labors will likely prevent other editorial contributions, from me, than the since Jan. last. Somebody is at work there, and | debate until its close. In the meantime I ask an interest in your prayers that grace and strength may be given me for every day and

PITY THE POOR PREACHER.

THE time for beginning an active and ener getic campaign against the enemy of souls is near at hand. True we should at all I mes be hand lighting the good light of faith, and we trust each in his particular way is, but the season of the year is approaching in which about all have retired from the more active physical labors and are living upon the fruits of their summer work. During this period ministers will go forth in the name of Jesus and declare his grace, sinners will believe and turn to God and live. Perhaps not a few will feel from the depths of their souls that at a certain place they might awake some to righteousness, but circumstances forbid their going there. Some will be invited to "come over and help," but being "straitened" cannot. One thing we must plead for, and that is the poor immater. Do not ask him to spend his daily wages, for your benefit. Do not ask him to give you the bread which belongs to his children. Assist him Help bear los burdens. Rúlroads as a rule do not work for nothing. I'ay the fare of your monister; put bread into the months of his children and clothes on their backs. This will hardly putt him up, nor entarge his stock of pride and vanity. If it does, send him home to stay. I would a thousand times rather put a dollar into the poor ministers hand to help feed and clothe his family, than to consume it upon the lasts of my children. Poor preacher! It is expected that he bear all the load while others go tree. Let there be at least a shade or sem-Idançe of equality in this matter. I should be sorry indeed, to hear that a poor minister, was compelled to spend his substance for the church while his family suffered for the necessaries of the I do not know that a minister is obliged to do this, but if he answers not the calls he is regarded as disobedient, and if he answers, the calls and loses all he has, he will be tried for mismi augement. I know it is very unpopular to take your part, or to bespeak for you the sympathics of all who cry "Lord, Lord," aut whether men will hear or not we must speak. I do not look for perfect equality in this life. Sin abounds; and this fact prevents perfect equality. But we may approximate to it; and only by meekness and piety, by unceasing devotion to principle can any one succeed with God Do not loast of your preaching nor speak evil of you co-laborers. Do the work d an evangelist, and leave the result with Gor one Father. I wish you all abundant success.

THERE WILL BE WEEDS.

THE wheat and the tares grow in the same field. Take the impurites out of the water, and it is refreshing to mau. The good and the had are seen by the same eye, felt by the same heart, heard by the same ear, and spoken hy the same tongue. The soil that will produce good wheat will also produce weeds,

Said a dear brother, "I will try your paper a few months." The manuer in which he said it. told me that he was expecting more in the B. AT. W. than he would find. I concluded that he was looking for a paper in which no "weeds" might be found. We therefore conversed on the subject about thus:

Are you are a larmer?

"I am."

You then know how to raise corn, do you not? "I do.' You are careful to keep down the weeds so hat you may have a good crop?

"I do my best in that direction," Well, after doing your best, and you think the weeds are all destroyed, do you not find some there when you go to gather your corn?

"Yes, I do." Now since you find weeds in your cornfield after doing all you could to keep them down, you will not reject the curn because a few weeds are found among it?

"O no, of course not; I shall be sure to gath. er the corn. I do not think the few weeds have injured the corn any."

Very true, dear brother, the corn is not injured, the land is only a little impoverished by the weeds, and it would have been desirable that some good plant be nourished instead, but the weeds are there. So it is in a religious paper, The editors perhaps try to keep out all "weeds," and do their hest to cultivate pure grain, but a weed will spring up now and then. The brother immediately extended his subscription, and saw that even editors ought to be borne with sometimes.

SIGNIFICANT.

NFIDELS have sounded the call for a union of their forces, and propose to step into the arena of politics for the advancement of their work. On the 13th and 14th of Sept., a convention was held in Cincinnati, in order to take political action. A similar meeting was held in the Astor House, New York, Aug. 8th, at which one of their leaders urged that "the liberals of the United States should organize, and become as far as possible, a political power." They propose sending ant 1,000,000 copies of thier paper called Main to lossiness men, ministers, lawyers and teachers. They do not lack means to do this, but with "liberal hearts" liberally contribute, while thousands of professors of Christianity ield their hunds and look ou. These movements are significant, and we can view it in no other light flian we are entering the time when Revolution 13(5) shall be fulfilled. Many of as are included to look upon the cap d increase of slapticism, with indifferace Its rise has been significant, and its marvelous growth no less so. There is a cause for this as well as for all other things. What is it? Nothing less than hyporticy. Men profess to love God with veheroence on the Lord's day in the house d God, at the prayer meeting, and wherever people meet to worship, and the balance of the ome is generally spent in driving sharp bargables, in devoluting neighbors, or pulling down hose who really walk according to the commandments of God. Such unholy living proluces large crops of infidels; and God above knows what the end will be. We warm our readers against the permeious evil. We plead with all the "born of God" to match-not for black spots in others, but that no spots come you you. Live right; follow the Master; be weatted from the world, and you will be ready when Jesus comes. He will come soon.

LABETTE COUNTY, KANSAS.

S giving an account of this portion of Kan-L sas, I shall confine myself to facts, and not attempt to color these nor exaggerate. have not been all over Kansas, nor will I say that Konsus is so and so simply because I have been in a few counties. We should be careful how we represent a country. To go into a few ounties in a State, and then regard the whole gate from that standpoint is like reading the words to Christ, and then condemning Bible. There are, no doubt, disadvantages good; careless farmers as well as thrifty ones; sof the whole should not be condemned because ill is not gold and sunshme. Men sometimes no into Kansas at a few points, stay a comple weeks, then go away and write naughty things concerning the whole State. That man fests poor judgment, and thinking people have her thoughts about such men. On the other hand, some will visit a county or two become a fille excited and say all manuer of nice thingfor Kansas. These have set themselves down the other side of the fence, and, like those she condemn all from a single standpoint, are got sufe counsellors,

Many of our readers are contemplating a bange of location, believing that such a course would result in advantage to their familes and to the cause of Christianity. It is a serionthing to leave old associations and the ties of kindred and go out to a new country to endure the hardships that usually attend those who arile the first blow. To aid those who desire to come west, and to build up the cause of Philist the writer came to Kansas, and now of ter considerable observation, and much intersiewing, he is ready to lay before the read ors something which may benefit.

Labelle county is in the south-eastern port of the State. It is bounded on the east to therokee county; on the north by Neusha gamity; on the west by Montgomery county; and south by the Indian Territory. The popglidion in 1870 was 9,973; in 1878 it was 49,me being an increase of 9,779 to eight years There must be a cause for this raidd increase of population. Certainly people will not move igto, remain, and improve a country unless there be inducements. The fact that so many have come here and remain is proof that it is a desirable part of the State.

Last year 32,135 acres of wheat were sowie: 55.785 acres planted in corn; 1,312 acres in potatoes; 1,900 acres in custor beam. There were 209 neres in clover meadow and 1 739 acres in finishly. There were 255,707 apple trees; 10,975 pear trees; 228,640 peach trees; 31,986 cherry trees; and $21,286 rods, or nearly 2,600 miles of fence, the principal part of which is hedge. There are 95 school districts organized and 92 school houses, and about 7000 persons of chool age. The average wages of male teachers is $35,000; of femiles, $30,00. This county in 1878 stood second in the State in acreage of all kinds of crops. These are facts gleaned from the second Bienutal report of the State Board of Agriculture.

FALF OF THE COUNTRY.

Eighty-eight per cent, of the county is upland prairie; two per cent, bottom Laids, and ten per cent tumber. The bottom lands he along streams and are from one half to a mile wide. fimber consists of Idael, wa'nut, bickery back berry, sycamore, red and white elm, linrr cak, oftonwood, naple and willow The Neccho over is the principal stream, clear with rock hottom. Abounds with tish. Libette river, Turkey reck, Deer creek, Snow, Big Hill, and Pampkin creeks with many other smaller streams may be found.

BUILDING STONE AND COM.

Coal is found in alumdance in the south and erst park of the county. Time and sundstone are from Lin abundance - Weinever saw pret ter building stone. They are smooth, large and of superior quality. They are found in wyers from one to five inches in thickness.

TOWNS ASSECTIONS

The people are bright, intelli gent, obliging and business-like. They have settled down here to stay; and have built fine husiness structures, commodious dwellings, and seem to enjoy themselves remarkably well.

HEALTH.

The faces tell that. I was pleased, on step ping from the cars, to see such fair and healthy True, here as in all new countenances. countries, there are some chills and fevers, espeially along the rivers, but I have not seen nor heard of any yet, and we all know that this is the season for chills. From what I can glean from physicians and others, I conclude that chills and fever are the exception instead of the rule. In fact people who have chills do not have rosy cheeks, fair countenances and hardy constitutions. Several have tidd me of their being cured of lung and throat diseases by coming here; and I confess that I have been considerably henchitted by my short stay in Labette county.

SOIL AND COUNTRY.

There is the black limestone, the red limestone and white or ashen soil. The black soil is most abundant. Each kind has its friends. and I presume when compared with some of the "barrens" in other parts of America, it will be found remarkably fertile. The best corn is on the black soil. We were informed that wheat does well on the white soil. average yield of wheat this year was about 16 bushels; oats about 40; corn estimated at 45. Castor beans 15 bushels.

WATER AND OUTER.

Water in places very good; in others not very fresh, though not as hard as in some parts of the west. People say they like it, and by appearances it must be healthy. But in this there is much in usage. When we have become accustomed to the water in our "home places," water elsewhere does not taste so sweet. Coal from three and a half to ten cents per husbel. It is found in large quantities in the eastern and southern portions of the county.-Good bickory wood delivered for $3.00 per cord. Posts seven cents.

MARKETS.

Freight rates are less from here to Chicago than from western points to Illinois in Chicago. Dry goods, groceries and the stude articles of life are about the same as in Illinois. Nearly all grain that shipped goes to Texas. Stockraising is a leading busines, and this generally pays. Mild climate, abundance of feed and other material advantages combine to make this branch of business remunerative.

TARRESTAND LARMERS.

The first settlers, or rather most of them are stall here. Alout nine-teaths of them mortgaged their land thinking they could not get through safely otherwise, but alast that was their short-sightedness. The mortgages are now coming due, and the land must be said. Farms, hedged and ready for the plow, drill and planter may now be purchased for $10.00 $155on per acre. Dwellings not very good; but most farms have good orchards which are just beginning to bear. No truit this year. Here and there you will find a prudent farmer who would not mortgage his tarm nor make delifs hence he is contented, and happy. Such do not want to sell their tarms. Aml then, too, in this as in all countries you will find those who seem to have been "born tired" and are not rest ed. These are the ones who work two days on the farm and spend four loading in flown. These will sell closure. Any one having from one to two thousand dollars may do well here. But hear in mind that you can not reap bore unless you plow, and plant. The better way for those who think of moving there is first to go there and spend a few weeks. J. B. Cook, of Chetopa, will show you the country in the south part of the county, and S. M. Burket and the Brethren and others will take pleasure in showing you the country in the north part. These persons will take you out free of expense, and when you co, observe soil, water, crops, fruit trees, stock, improvements, grain &c. Talk with some of the old and most experienced farmers, and ask for the truth without any coloring. Avoid braggarts. Brethren should select a good vicinity and settle there in order to build up a church. Houses to worship in are needed, and there are plenty of places where sound doctrine and holy lives can be made to blossom as the rose. There is also a church about eight or ten miles west of Chetopa. Brother Andrew Culp, near Montana, lives in a good country, and would rejoice to have Brethren visit him. Should any one wish more information relative to this county and south-eastern Kan., send for Settlers Guide, Chetopa, Kan. To Col. J. B. Cook, A. Wilson. J. Grimes, S. M. Burket, Jos. Garber and J. J. Solomon I am indebted for favors while in Kansas, and to the Kansas & Texas Railroad for favors in getting there. We found the officers of this rond gentlemanly and kind, and as a through line to Texas and Kansas is worthy of our patronage. The company has about 200,000 acres of land for sale, and their agent A. M. Sommers of Emporia, Kansas, will take pleasure in giving information concerning their lands. This roud passes through some very fine country, especially south of Missouri River. Usually Radroads pass through the roughest portions of the country, but I cannot say thus of the M. K. & T. R. R.

Bible for the Blind.-Volumes issued, 356; making an aggregate of 11,592 volumes in thirty-seven years.

The issues of the society doring 63 years amount to 36,052,169 copies.

The Bible Society Record, with the monthly receipts from all sources, and its extracts from the domestic and foreign correspondence of the Society, is sent to each Life Director and Life Member who requests it, and to the pastor of every church taking an annual collection for the Society, upon his application. Copies circulated during the year, 200,270, or an average of 16,689 each month.

The Gratuitous Work for the year amounted to $263,786.73 Of this amount $109,815,77 was in cash appropriations to foreign lands, besides 34,520 copies of Scripture sent from this country.

Number of Auxiliaries Reported as engaged in snuplying their fields during the year, 211.

The Parent Society has employed 117 colporteurs, chiefly in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Missouri, Michigan, Nebraska, Iowa, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and West Virginia. The combined results of these agencies for seeking out and supplying the destitute are as follows:

Number of families visited......45,034 6 found without Scriptures....77,314 destitute families supplied....52,862 Individuals supplied in addition......27,029

Operations in other Lands.—The preparation and distribution of the Scriptures in foreign lands are every year becoming more systematic and satisfactory in connection with the agents employed to devote their time and energies to the work. Dr. Isaac G. Bliss remains in charge of the Turkish agency, assisted by the Mr. Edwin M. Bliss, who during the year has made several long journeys, visiting Egypt, Syria. Persia, and the Cancasus. In Greece, Egypt, and Syria Dr. Bliss has had special aid from M. D. Kalopothakes, S. C. Ewing, and E. R. Lewis. G. H. Prince, Esq., of St. Petersburg, bas rendered valuable service in superintending the publication and distribution of the Reval-Esthonian Scriptures. Mr. Andrew M. Milne has had oversight of colportage work in the Rio Plato agency, and A. L. Blackford has been carrying on a similar work in the empire of Brazil. Dr. L. H. Golick resides in Yokohama, but divides his time between Japan and China, having visited the latter country twice during 1878. The Board have established an agency in the city of Mexico, through which they hope for a largely increased distribution of Scriptures, H. P. Hamilton having been appointed to that field. The cordial co-operation of missionaries in foreign lands in promoting the object of the Bible Society is highly appreciated. One hundred and thirty-nine colporteurs have been engaged in distributing the Scriptures.

A million of Bibles and Testaments circulated through the agency of the Society in a single year, means more than words can tell. Every one of those copies hears the impress of its Divine Author. Every one of those volumes rejeats and proclames the record, the commandment, the warning, the proxise, given to men. ages ago, by inspiration of God. Through those printed pages the law of the Lord has been published. Through those instrumentals ities, which have no articulate voice, it has pleased the Most High to have the gospel preached. They are more potent than the stars of the firmament to declare the glory of God. They have gone into all lands, converting the soul, making wise the simple, rejoicing the heart and enlightening the mind-

The Board of Minigers in dispensing the charities of their constituents, have been doing a service for the King of kings. And in closing the record of another year's stewardship, they give thanks to God for the trust committed to their charge, and for the manifold good consequent upon this large circulation of his book.

" The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering questions, drawn from the Bible. In order to promote the Truth, all questions should be brief, and clothed in simple language. We shall assign questions to our contributors to answer, but this does not exclude any others writing upon the same topic.

Will some one please explain the 5th and 6th verses of the 6th chapter of Revelations? It reads as follows: "And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. -And I beheld, and lo, a ldack horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand, And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see then hurt not the oll and the wine."

As the numbers seventy, forty, and three are very often in Scripture, can any brother or sister tell me through the BERTHERN AT WORK how often these numbers are in the Holy Bible? And have they any particular sacred meaning?

QUERIES ANSWERED.

Will some one please explain Matt. 11: 11. In particular we would like to know who is the least, and why called the least in the kingdom of heav-JUSTINA MILLER.

WILL offer my opinion in regard to Matt. 11: 11. As Christ said "I no the resur. rection," and as Paul says in 1 Cor. 15: 20 "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and became the first fruits of them that slept," if seems by these pursages that no man had gone to heaven before Christ's resurrection. And as Christ was teaching, a multitude of Jews prior to his resurrection, therefore the least that was in heaven was greater than he, notwithstanding he was considered the greatest man of earth. But as Christ does not any where teach who was the least and why the least, I thus judge it is not for us to know.

Will some brother or sister please, explain what things were done in Bethubara. That which is spoken of in St. John 1:28.

Samerl W. Yost.

The Jews sent priests and Levites to Bethabara, where John was baptizing, asking him, "Who art thou," etc. Also John's preaching was done in Bethabara.

Will some one explain Heb. 1:77 " And of the angels he salth. Who maketh his angels spirits, and his mludsters a flame of fire." R. T. Своок.

Angel in Hebrewand in Greek means messenger. We read in Revelation 1:4 that John wrote to the seven churches, and in the 20th verse, that the seven stars which he saw are the seven angels, and the seven spirits which are before his throne, (verse 4) are the seven angels, to each church an augel. These angels signified unto John what he should write unto the churches. Therefore he maketh his angels spirits.

A minister is one who attends or waits upon another; therefore who attends to the preaching the word of God are his ministers. As God is a consuming fire, (Heb. 12: 29) his gospel is the burning which consumes the wicked, and his minister which spreads the gospel is compared to a flame of fire.

WATER BAPTISM AND THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

Please explain Arts 2: 3s. If this means water baptism, what power was the Idood of Christ in W. H. Roose. the salvation of manc?

"IF we say we have fellowship with him I (God) and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth; but it we walk in the light as he (God) is in the light, we have fellowship his Son, cleanseth us from all sins."—1 John 1:

It is expressly stated by the Holy Spirit that if we say we have fellowship with God, and walk in darkness we lie, and when we lie we do not the truth, do not okey the truth, do not accept the truth. But on the other hand if we walk in the light, do the the truth, as God is in . the light or truth, then we have fellowship. And more, the blood of Jesus Christ, cleanseth. as from all sin. One thing is here required if ns, viz: To walk in the light just as God is in the light; and the result will be fellowship one sins is promised on conditions that we do somewe obey the command to be baptized, do we not. walk in the light?

The Light, the Truth, the Word of God conin order to salvation; it contains every com- opposite direction is the one that would be rance.

mand that we should obey; every promise, that we need to enjoy. The blood of Christ cleanses us from sin whenever we comply with the conditions. Would the blood avail us if we did not believe in Christ? Would the blood cleanse us if we refused to repent? Certainly not: then the cleansing by blood is on condition that we believe, repent, and are baptized. Salvation is not reached by blond alone, nor by faith and blood, nor yet by faith, blood, and repentance, but by the blood of Christ, as his work, and by faith, repentance, and baptism as our part of the work. We cannot shed blood for ourselves, but Christ could and did. He did his part; and more, he tells us what we can do and may do to obtain the benefit of what he did for us. The things which we could not do he willingly did for us; and the things that we can do, he requires us to willingly perform

Of Christ it is written, "He by the grace of God tasted death for every man - Heb. 2: 9. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood * * be glory and deminion forever and ever. Rev. 1: 5, 6 He tasted death, died for us, that the way of life might be opened to us. This is the first salva tion. The second salvation is from our own evil acts, and from these we are cleansed to the bland of Christ whenever we comply with the conditions. The blood cleanses only when we do as we are hidden. In Acts 2: 28 Peter commanded the people to repent and be losptized. They already believed, and desiring to know what to do, the Holy Spirit by the mouth of Peter directed them to repent for the resoi sion of sins; yes more, to be baptized for the remission of sins. Mark, it says sins, more than one sm. If they obeyed, then they conplied with the condition of cleansing, and were approved of God. All are willing to admit that the blood of Christ is essential to salvation and while this is a fact, it is no less a troth baptism "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy (thost," (Matt. 28: 10) is at least essential to cleaning in the blood -If what Jesus did for us is absolutely necessary is it not equally necessary, that we do correctly in order to obtain the benefit of his work?

Without faith, repentance, and baptism w cannot reach the blood, and without blood we reach not Christ, the life. м. м. Е.

NUMBER XXIV.

Jerusalem.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement]

I F you enter the city from the eastern side

↓ you enter through Stephen's gate, so called from the tradition that the proto-martyr Stephen was stoned a short distance outside of it This tradition is probably true; for this is the nearest gate to the temple; and if Stephen's tral took place in the temple court, they would naturally drag him to the nearest gate when tney hurried him away to be stoned. This gate, and indeed, all the others entering into Jerusalem, are so near like the Joppa gate, that I need attempt no further description of them. It stands about 200 feet north of the temple nten. When you are inside of it with your face westward, there is a narrow street to your left running close to the wall and passing a small gate into the northern end of the temple inclosure. Before you is the street called Via Dolorosa, leading from Stephen's gate through the city parallel with David Street. As you go forward you first pass, on your left the miscalled pool of Bethesda. A wall three or four feet high guards against the danger of falling into it. Next after the good come the military barracks and the residence of the Coyernor. This immense structure occupies the one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, remainder of the space along the northern wall of the temple court, and two narrow streets pass through its lower story, under urches two other small gates through that wall. This structure stands on the site of the ancient tower of Antonia, and tradition has it, not without strong probability, that a portion of the latter was the residence of Pontious Pilate. The Via Delorosa is spanned at the upper corner of the building, by an arch; and this marks the spot, according to tradition, where Pilate brought Jesus forth, and delivered him and to be crucified. The tradition then very absurdly assumes, that from this point he was led westward along with another; and the blood of Christ will the Via Polorosa to near its west end, where cleanse us from all sins. Here remission of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher now stands, and that he was both crucified and buried withthing—that we walk in the light; and when I in the space now occupied by that church. In contradiction of all this, the Scriptures clearly | Delayan, Wis , was destroyed by fire Sept 16th. show that he was crucified outside the city, [All the formiture and property of the pupils was though near to it. (Juo. six. 20; Heb. vlii. 12) | saved. The loss to the State will be about two naturally taken, so as to get out of the city by the shortest distance; and outside of Stephen's gate, as I saw by a careful examination of the space with reference to this very question, is a most suitable place for all the jucidents of the cracifixion

On the right of the Via Dolorosa, as far as the arch mentioned above, and for a short discance further, is the hill called Bezetha, the north-eastern part of the city. It is the Turkish quarter, while the north-western part. through which the remainder of the Via Dolorosa runs, is the Christian quarter, occupied by Rom or and Greek Catholics, with their churches and convents.

Across from Via Dolorosa to David Street tre swo streets running at right angles to these. The more western one, into which you turn from David Street, about fifty yards below the Mediterranean Hotel, is Christian Street. Its ships are occupied by the so-called Christonis, and they constitute the Christian Bazaar.

The other is Damasons street. It commences at the Damascus gate, the only gate on the north side of the city, runs southward between the Jobs Acra and Bezstha; crosses the Via Dolorosa in the Tyropallen valley described above; ascends thence to David street, which it crosses, and then it continues upward and southward until it reaches Zoon gate, the larger of the two gotes in the southern wall of the cuty. That part of it between David Street and Zion gate, is called Zion Street. That portion of Thumsens street which is near Bayld street, and on look sales of the latter, is occupied by the Tarkish Biziar.

These are all the streets in Jerusalem which cave a name, and which run to a considerable distance with any directness. Even they have above grooks in them which I have not thought it well to mention, lest I should confuse the reader by introducing too many details. Besples these, there are many narrow and crooked pass-ways, in which the stranger who attempts totravecse them without a guide will almost certainly he lest.

We had a little experience of this kind one day, and although we were not completely lost, we walked three times the distance necessary to reach the point at which we were aiming.

Hopping that I have now imparted to the attentive render a general idea of the interior of tins singular city, I will next devote a few lines to its walls, and draw this letter to a close. I walked around more than half the city on the top of the wall, with compass and tape-line in bond, and by the assistance of my three faithful companious, I supplied some mensurements and bearings which are omitted from all the books that I have read. But this is not the place for eliborate details. The wall is about forty feet in height on the average, but at the south-eastern corner of the Temple court it is seventyeight feet high. Its thickness at the bottom is nine feet. Within about eight feet of the top, on the miside, it drops off, leaving a standingplace for siddlers two and one half feet wide. and four feet loglar it doops off again, leaving DEDA -In the same church, Curtis, son of another standing-place four feet wide, while above this rises the parapet, four feet high, over which the soldiers hurled their weapons, and by which they were protected from the weapons of the enemy. Of course such a wall would be worthless us a protection against modern artiltery, and it now serves the city no good purpose that I can see. The course of the wall is not straight except on the eastern side, where the steep slope of the valley of the Kedron renders it almost unassailable. Elsewhere its course is varied at short intervals by langles and square towers, which both strengthen the wall and chalded the defenders to fire upon the flanks of an approaching enemy. The entire circuit of the walls is two and three-quarter miles, and within this space is crowded a population of 20,000 souls. This is about the estimated population in the latest books which I have read, but our consul, Col. Wilson, and some other intelligent persons with whom I conversed, estimate the present population, including that outside the walls, at from 40,000 to 45,000. No correct census has ever been taken; such a thing is unknown in the Tarkish Empire.

In my next letter I will give some account of the Temple mount, and, if space allows, of some of the valleys and hills about Jernsalem, and then bid the Holy City farewell. This letter is written in Damascus, June 23.

Topics of the May.

THERE are two thousand, eight hundred and ghty-six students in the University at Berlin. Sixty-one More.

N Tuesday thirty-eight cadet mid-shipmen and twenty-three cadet engineers were raduated at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, ad turned over to the people to support for the mainder of their natural lives. Sixty-one coung men of exceptional physical soundness of vitality, who ought to be especially well ble to earn their own living, after having been santained by the people for four years, during be period of their education, paid by them at herate of $500 year each, and trained at the ablic cost, with a corps of officers and professto instruct them, doctors to physic them, and pay masters to pay them, all drawing large glaries from the Treasury, and numbering bout one hundred in total, are sent forth with and huzzas to continue a charge on the people d an increasing scale of expense.

All of these sixty-one young men, with the sceldion of four only, who at once go to laney aty, are now at their homes awaiting ordershal Is, waiting for the Ancient Mariner to scare p the semblance of something for them to do. While they are loading away their vacation, they will each draw from the treasury the handsome salary of $600 a year, more money than they could make in these days if they morked from morning until night at a trade or refession It will thus cost the people to keep hem the pretty sum of $36,600 a year, though they do nothing more in return for the money than show their paces at the watering place hops. When the Ancient Mariner is able to make room for them on ships, even now loaded lown with officers, the pay of these boys will ig rayed to $1,000 a year, each or $61,000 in

What do the people think about this? Do they feel themselves, able to undertake such a darge in addition to the millions laid on them for the support of the crowd of officers already g the navy, who are treading on each other's toes in the few wardrooms affoat, or jostling one mother in the uscless navy yards?

They must bear in mind, too, that these sixty-one paintered boys are only the graduates of i single year. Next June we shall have anaber lot turned out at Annapolis, and the apensive mill will keep on grinding. Let it work long enough, and instead of one navy officer to three or four scaman, we shall have three officers to a seamen, making our maritime stablishment something unparalelled in history. With a serie or so of ships fit to go to sea, we dready inive officers enough to fill nearly all the space they afford for the stowing away of a immu cargo, and if the Annapolis mill keeps gunding, we shall be called on before long to huld vessels to held the steadily increasing surplus. When the executive officer bawls out his orders they will be repeated along a solid epanated line which will stretch from the poop to the law, while the engine room will need to be specious to hold the nuclimery doctors.

But, good for had, we do not need the Navai Academy. We want no more may officers, for we already have too many of them. If we supped this costly business of turning them out d Annapodis for a quarter of a century, we dil should have a full supply. But the sound of drums, the glitter of epanlettes, the flushing d swords, and the looming of canons are very spt to turn the heads of silly Congressmen, and the military people know it.—New York Sun.

Dear Brethren:—

UR Sunday-school was reorganized in April with eleven teachers, nearly all members of the Church. They are generally punctual in attendace and seem to take an interest in the work. Our average attendance has been 26. I think we have a good school, and one of its attractive features is, the interest that is manifested by our older members. It is very encouraging for us who are young in years and young in the Church to see our old fathers and mothers come and assist us in gaining knowledge from the Bible. I think much good has been accomplished through the influence of the Sunday school. We should remember the words of our Savior, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." Success to the Brethren's Sunday-schools everywhere.

Dear Brethwen:—

OUR Love-feast is among the things of the past, and we can truly say we had a season that will be long remembered. We are a young church but our brethren and sisters of Ohio sympathize with us and came over to help to encourage us. Several ministers were with us. Four were made willing to accept Christ as their captain, hope they may be bright and shining lights in the church. On Sunday tollowing brother G. F. Yount preached on the subject of haptism, and made it plain to those who want to see. He is still among us; buptized one last Sunday, and we have hopes of more coming to the fold before he leaves us Brethren, pray for us that we be faithful

WAS thinking this evening of the many precious souls that are starving for the Bread of Life, and of the numbers that are dying without Christ, or even hearing the Gespel preached in its purity. We would be so glad to have some brother come here to preach. It would not cost as much as to send a missionary to a foreign land, and much good might be done. I stand alone here, and I sometimes feet like one cast on an island to live and die alone. If any of the congregations in lowa or Illinois will please drop me a card and inform me when they will have their Love feasts I would be glad. I cannot take the paper and therefore do not know, and I would like to attend some of them. If any of the brothren tunk of coming to this part, come to Alexandria, inquire for R. W. Rose. We will be glad to see any one come. M. E. Rose.

Notes of T avel.

for a trip to Missouri to preach the Gospel and visit some relatives. Thus far we have had six meetings, mostly well attended. Am now near Lacom, Warren Co., Iowa, at the house of Bru-Nathan Miller. There is a small group of members living here as shorp without a shepherd, having no minister to preach for them only as one passes through. This is a good country, plenty of coad and tumber and rich land, though some of it is somewhat broken. A large field and plenty of material for ministers. who preach the pure Go-pel to work on, and I would advise such as contemplate moving West to come here as they are needed as much as any place they can go. John C. Mindale

The Debate.

WE have been watching Messrs Stein and Ray for some time as they have been discussing the Tunker question and have exammed their arguments from an independent standpoint. We thought we would be inquarted and pass our judgment according to the morals of the nigonaents, and we think we have. Mr Bay has acknowledged his deteat by his style of language. No man will resort to such expressions as he has when they are on the right side and has solid proofs and unsurmountable facts at their disposal. No man can or should expect to win in a contest by using maligning epithets and slanderous phrases. Reliende has never brought any one out of a conflict victors "mething has happened him. We are very | honorably. "Let everything be done decently and in order." I am glad to see Mr. Stein go. great patience and forbearance. He seems to sacrifice.

realize that he has a Captain who will, by the assistance of the army of God, bring him out more than conquerer. May he go on in the noble work he has assigned to him, ever trusting in him who is able and willing to help for God's word must prosper in the things whereto he sent it. W. H. Roose.

Dear Brethren:—

N my letter to you, written some two months since, I wrongly expressed thoughts in one of my sentences. I said that I desired the companionship of a sister in Christ "who would not leave me when I was sick and my husband absent to visit the ball-room." I should have said, who would not leave me to visit the ballroom when I was sick and my husband absent. My bushand has been a minister of the Brethren Church for eleven years and his absence from home since that time has been to respond to the calls of the church. I desire to say to sister Lydia J. Allen that I am as well as I could expect. I am yet without a suitable girl who will stay with me.

On the 13th the communion meeting of Berrien Congregation was held at brother Jacob Weaver's barn, five miles west of this place. 1 listened, with much interest, to brother Thurston Miller speak of the duties incombent upon the faithful followers of the Lamb of God, of the hops we have in Christ, and of the rest that awaits the children of God. Brethren Moon and Brocons were advanced to the offices of minister and descon.

LILLA C. INGLERIGHT,

From Farragut, Iowa,

Deac Brethren:-

TOU will please send some pamplilets that will explain the Brethren's doctrine. I and a conversation with a man from Missouri. and I discovered that he had very bright ideas about the dealings of God with man. I asked him it he belonged to a church, and he said he did not nor he did not think he ever would that he could not find a people or church that obeyed the principles of the Gospel as taught by the Savior and the apostles. I asked him to state what he understood these principles to be, and I do not think any of our brethren could have drawn a better picture of the Brethren's doctrine than he did. I then told him he could find such a people, and we would like to have him go with us. He said he was raised in the State of New York and traveled so far West and I was the first one of our faith be had ever met, said he had heard that there was such a people but did not know their doctrine.

Dear brothren, can it be possible that we claim to be the Church of Christ, the pillar and ground of the truth and do not beed the great and last commission of the blessed Savior when he said "Go, preach my Gospelz" I fear that this is a matter that we as a Church, when put-LEFT my home near Toddville, Linn Co., in the balances, will be found wanting, and would it not be a lamentable thought if in the eternal world it would be said to us that we grasped the dollars and cents too hard and would not let them go to help the poor ministers preach the Gospel? May God help us to awake from our lethargy and do our duty towards perishing souls pround us.

Juny Beethrens-

ANY times have I thought of the trials and sufferings of our dear brother Hope. who is laboring for the Master in a foreign land, and as thinking and praying alone will not meet the approduction of God, can we not do something for him? That it may be said of us. "Come ve blessed of my Father, enter the Kingdone, for I was a hungered and ye gave meat; l was thursty and ye gave me drink; I was naked and ye clothed me." I have a proposition to make. On the first Salarday afternoon of each month let us meet at some suitable place for prayer and bisting. Let no supper be eaten that night, and at said place collect from each member the value of one meal and send the money to Bro C. P. Rowland, Lanark, Blinois, for the lenefit of brother Hope and family, and what remains over let him use for the Lord's cause. Brethren and sisters, this is for you who love the ford enough to sacrifice one meal. We should rejoice for the blessed opportunity when we thank of the joy and fruition of eleraty in which we hope to participate. I offer this to the prayerful consideration of the Brotherhood hoping to hear from such as are like-minded on in his work so faithfully. Surely he has another willing to bear the cross and make the Lymy A. Krist.

She Hath Done What She Could.

To a lone Sister in Missouri.

HIGH encomium. Coming from the Om-A niscient Mind, and the Heart of Essential Truth, it is worthy a record as part of the Everlasting Gospel for the study of all tha christian centuries. Although you are fifty miles from christian fellowship, you need not go that distance to find the feet of Jesus, nor expend three hundred pence to fill "your alabaster box with ointment of spikenard very precious," The Mission of Jesus in His vicarious ministry was local-"to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." His feet never trod any part of the United States of America. But the ministry of the Holy Ghost is ecumenical. Missouri is His no less than Palestine. He has a temple there if you live in the import of your haptism. Let it be your ambition, your unceasing effort, your peace and glory, to keep the 'earthly house of your tabernacle" for the unhindered occupancy of the Pure and August Representative of Jehovah-Jesus. Ever dwell on the sublime and astounding truth that God was and is manifest in the flesh, and "as He is so are we in this world." I Tim. 3: 16.1 John 4: 17. This is lost sight of by many who name the 'name of Christ," and "for this cause numbers are weak and sickly among us, and many sleep." 2 Tim. 5: 19, 1 Cor. 11: 30. Let the soil of Missouri be holy ground because God is there munifest in your tlesh. Let this great, central. saving thought take hold of you as a violent, all-dominating Divine apprehension.

You can do much for Jesus, if you allow God to work in you both to will and to do." Let the Holy Ghost be sentinel at every avenue of the soul, and then you will not forget Matt. 12: 36, and Mark 9: 43-48, and Prov. 4: 23, and Ps. 139; 23, 24. Ever keep your alabaster box ready, and be on the lookont for the feet of desus. If your eyes are anointed you will see them everywhere. Often recur to Mark 14: 8, and solemnly ask yourself: Does this commendution belong to me? It is a "high calling," but not higher than "God manifest in the flesh." The Divinely only-begotten, and the humanely first-begutten, is the first-born among many brethren." A marvelous generation takes place, an uncreated life is infused, before we can claim filiation with the Everlasting Father, and kinship with the Elder Brother. A christian is one whose celestial Paternity and citizenship can no more be hid than a city set upon a hill. To be "partaker of the Divine Nature," is to have "the mind of Christ," the "life hid with Christ in God," "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." "Your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost." "If any man defile the temple of God. Inm shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." 1 Cor. 3: 17, and 6: 19. "Be ye holy, for I am holy." "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." I Peter 1: 16, Heb. 12: 14. The conditions are stringent and inexorable, but God Hunself is our l'attern in the flesh, and our power in the Holy Spirit. "God is love," and "behold what manuer of love." I John 3: O the height, the depth, the length, the breadth! A perfect cube. As long as broad, and as high as long! Eph. 3: 18, 19, John 3; [16] Matt. 18; 23-55, 1 Cor. 13; 4-7, 1 John 4; 16, Rev. 21: 16.

With such a Basis, such a hope, such an inspiration who would not glory in tribulations and trials and crosses, just because we may be sure of the manifestation of Jesus in them. Work on silently, hepefully, and above all, trie the winning beauty of a daughter of Jehovah, and a sister of Jesus. The beauty of holiness is fasemating, and a fair evidence of the Divine unlivelling will inspire some of those around you with hunger and thirst after righteonsness," and bind them to you in christian bonds. There is no argument so mighty as a life radiant with the meckness, and beauty and attraction of a Cross magnifying religion. Throw all the powers of your soul into the sublimest work of laing the Invine Incarnation. "To me to largis Christ" Philip, 1:21 Glorious words. It is only another way of saying, "SHE HATH DONE WHAT SHE COLDIC" All this of course seems dreamy mysticism to those whose religion is ritual, and those who pretend to no sort of religion. But to those who have tound Christ, the wisdom and power and love of God, it is "meat and drink, " joy unspeakable and full of glory," the "substance" of all the ravishing reservations of the Heaven of Heavens. This may be yours in your Missouri sahara, although you hear no sermon and see no saint all the year round. The Holy Ghest can create a most Paradisiac Oasis in the wildest, C. H. Busicust. darkest desert.

AND they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firm-ment; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever,—Dan. 12; 4.

Mt. Vernon, Va .- I'we were baptized on the 24th of August, the old brother 83 and the sister 80 years old. Sept. 2nd., baptized two more, young man and wife living in the same house. On the 14th haptized an old lady of 70 years. May the Lord bless them all.

Oakland Church, Ohio. - We, too, had a season of rejoicing and encouragement. Bro. S. H. Bashor met with us on the evening of the 30th of August, preached 21 sermons. There were twenty-one baptized. We hope this will encourage others to do likewise. MARY HARDMAN.

Burr Oak, KaB -Onr Love-feast is past and I hope will be long remembered. Brother Switzer from White Rock, and brothren Deeter and Montgomery from Dimestone, were present.-Two were received into the church, one by letler and one by baptism, H. E. Fadely.

From Brother Bashor.-Our meetings closed at Oakland Church last week with over a score of additions, and others who promised to come, but promises are easily broken. We can depend on what men do; what they promise is uncer-

We came here on Tuesday night and have labored only in the evening since. Yesterday we went out to the water where several believers were buried in haptism. Our meetings close bere to ight just as a good interest is being awakened. I am sorry, as it would be wiser to stay, but appointments ahead call us on. Accept our Christian regards for all the workers with you.

Dear Brethren:—

O'R Love-teast is past. Brother Hillery was with use came to us on the 4th and preached two telling sermons, heades officiating at our Love feast. The church has been built up and many good impressions made upon those out of the fold. The meeting closed when a good interest prevniled, and could be have staved longer we believe there would have been an ingathering. Yours in the hope of eternal D. Bowman.

Dear Brethren:-

FACLOSED find $1, subscription to the B. Not having seen the paper for more than twelve months I do not now know the present price. I think it is the duty of all lovers of Christ to read all papers in their church, whether for or against them, that they may see and know for themselves, and thus "prove all things."

The Progressive Christian has been shamefully served; and some of the progressionists have fared unmercifully --too unjust to contemplate! God will defend the right,-- He can "save by many or by fiew." I neither jump at conclusions nor guess at things. Calmly, zealously, prayerfully, perseveringly and most tenaciously I stand at my post of Christian duty to "spend or be spent" for "judgment, mercy, faith." Three weightier matters of the law" have been sadly and glaringly neglected in some sections. and that too by those who rank as patterns! I operate upon facts, providentially opened up for me. I know that much unhappiness in this church was begin by evil speaking, evil imagination, speculation, &c., &c., and this was too often agitated by stealthy means, and for subtlepolicy. Such corrupt doings in any church is so offensive to a just God that He will execute judgment through or by whom He choses to send. God is Judge.

When I have great reason to feel that I am doing God's will, I can endure anything even if it be martyrdom. I know whereof I speak. Naturally I am timid; but for truth, justice and mercy, I am as hold as a lion; but feel as harmless as a dove. May God bless all lawful efforts. for good is devoutly prayed by your well-wishing sister in Christ. JULIA A. WOOD.

SHADOW AND SUNLIGHT.

BY WALLY LOUISE HOPWOOLG

(HADOWS dark and gloomy often gather around life's pathway, and bright visions of happiness are not always realized. Our taith is sometimes sorely tried, and all that we josess is requisite to sustain and keep us from fallug by the wayside; but our shield and comforler in every hour of darkness and gloom, is evernear, to support and strengthen, it we out lean confidingly on his all-sustaining arm.

In every age of the world's history, and in every life, there are, and have been shadows unugled with sunlight. The first great shadow gathered over the fair garden of Eden, enselogong in its gloom our first parents, and since that hour, every day of sunlight has had its corresponding shadow ..

The greatest benefactors of our race have had their hours of anguish and bitter trial, when foully cherished visions for the future seemed ready to be blasted, and the day star of hope had grown dim; but they toiled on, contending with almost superhuman strength, against the dash-tide of adversity, and finally surmounted every obstacle. The sunlight which to them had long been Indden, they were at length permitted to behold,-its splendor appearing greatly enhaned, since it had just emerged from behind a dark cloud. Shadows always become darker Jist before dawn.

There are many joys mingled with the euron grow that it will be ours to druh while jourbeying through this vale of tears. There are enpoyments within the reach of all, which but by experience, because they are not ardently and perseveringly sought for. That which we greatly desire, we will make strenuous efforts to obtain, and seeking earnestly for happiness, we will experience much, even in this world. Here and there, along life's pathway roses bloom, but we must diligently search, if we would find them assid the thorns.

Did not our existence extend beyond this life, it would not be worth our while to patiently endure the trials to which we are subject. There would be no incentive to good and noble deeds, for with life all would be ended. But we have the blessed assurance that there is something beyond all the strife and turnial of this life that is worth striving for. A fadeless crown, and a spotless robe await those who in the end prove worthy. Beyond the fleeting shadows and sunlight of earth, there is a land where flowers never wither, but where all is unfading sunlight. Then there will be sweet rest for the weary feet that have walked in the narrow way. Earth's sunlight we know is not unfading; but that which radiates from the great white throne and the Lamb, skines with undying luster, illumining Jelovah's boundless empire with a light that will dazzle the eyes of earth-horn spants; while the clear crystal stream that flows from undermeath the throne shall quench all thirst. and the white robed throng of redequed ones, shall forever enjoy his sunlight.

GOD IS LOVE

BY D. S. T. BUTTERBAUGH.

ET us read and think on the mysteries rel-A stave to our eternal welfare. The exercise of the mind is one great blessing God has given to his creature, and when brought into action by reflecting upon heavenly things, it is employed on jormary purposes. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 4; 33. Let us call on God, the disposer of all blessings that he will have mercy on us, and teach as the proper mode of worshiping him that is most pleasing in his sight, and ask, himto point out to us that which is right, and to teach as that holy wisdom that discovers our traest interest, and imparis his heavenly grace to strengthen our resolutions to perform his will, and walk in his ways with sincerity, then

"It I am right, thy grace impact. Still in the right to stay:

If I am wrong, oh, teach my heart To find a better way."

Yes, our first thoughts should be the care of the soul, and our first treasures laid up in heaven. Our sonls never die, but our bodies danly hasten to the grave. However, we know that if "our earthly house of this tabernacle were disalved, we have a building of God, a house, not made with bands, eternal in the heavens. 2 Cor. 5: 1. PLAIN VS. FASHIONABLE DRESSING.

MTE are pleased to learn that plainness in dress is beginning to be considered good taste in some fashionable circles. It always has been admired by intelligent, thinking people; and the reason there has been so little said against it is, because the masses of the people refuse to think fairly on the subject, and thinkrug people refuse to condemn it because it is popular. It must be very encouraging to that class of Christian professors, who labor so zealously against the sin of foolish, fashionable dressing, to see the prominence that plainness is beginning to occupy in the minds of the people; and the ontspoken way in which they assail this fascinating, soul-destroying evil-fashionable dressing. Below we give a remark in reference to the marriage of a certain couple which we copy from a secular paper of Virginia:

"The bride was attired in the plainest possible style, a handsome dress of white tarleton. and some pure sweet flowers in her hair being the only ornaments of her person. The beautiful simplicity and modesty of her plain wedding trousseau was in striking contrast with the absurd and reliculous exhibitions of costly dresses whose elaborate description has sometimes occupied the columns of some of the city and rural press to the disgust of all sensible, well-meaning persons. If we could have our way, we would abolish the 'fuss and feathers' of fasionable, costly weddings, in which silly descriptions of ladies' wardrobes occupy so much space in the rural press, some of whose editors display the weakness of their brains in their miserable fawning at the shrine of fashion. -Set.

THE DOCTOR AND HIS PATIENT.

BY W. Q. CALVERT.

YOT long since we heard a Dr. relating that he had told one of his patients' that he must die; yet, the patient persisted in cursing at a great rate, saying that he knew they were scared about him, but at the same time swearing that he was not afraid. A Universalist who was listening to the doctor's talk, remarked that the patient must have been beside himself. The Dr. said that he was not beside himself, but that he had the right use of his mind.

The Universalist thought it impossible that one in his right mind would cuise and swear while death was staring him in the face. The doctor said, "that was nothing," "If it would do to live by, it would do to die by,"

This last remark seemed to contain quite a good moral. Would to God, we could induce all persons to turn their attention to the manner of living, rather than the manner of dying. Life is that which we have to do. The care of death is not in our hands, any facther than it is governed by the way we live. The management of death is in wiser hands than ours. Then it is ours to mold our lives, and let God determine what death shall be.

It is to be feared that we are too often promided to right acts through fear of death. True, it is enough to frighten us when we think of dying unprepared, but the promptings of the Christian should be of a higher character. The love of God should constrain as We should live, not to see how we can die, but to see how well we can live, Reader, did you ever think what your life is worth? Ask yourself this question: Who. I am gone, will the world be any the better that I have lived? Will my life leave a mark on the sands of time, or will it be said that I lived and died, and that is all of my record? Did you ever think that any thing that will do to live by, will do to die by? Or in other words, that which will not do to die by, will not do to lose by. No one expects a tree that has grown crooked to be straight when it falls. We have er think of a man who has always had some disease, dving hale and sound; yet these are no more absured than to make calculations, to live wrong and die right. Let us devote our attention to making life what it should be, and death is sure to be what it should be.

A single word may destroy a smil. It is not impossible that a single afterance may be the means of destroying a soul. Such may not be the intention of him who speaks, but the words may, nevertheless, go forth to save or destroy. They fall on the ear and reach the heart - A child is, perhaps, the hearer and the speech from the father's lips. They are words full of sin, but, nevertheless, are the words of father. and, as such, sink deep and poison, the charater of the child. The germ is sown and it springs up, bringing forth much fruit, but, das! evil fruit—the fruit of death, eternal death When the final exposition of human deeds is made—when all things come vividly back to memory, what must be the agody of that parent, who was thus instrumental on the eternal rnin of his child. The possibility of such sales sult is a fearful warming.

ALWAYS LOOK ON THE SUNNY SIDE.

LWAYS look on the sunny side. And though life checkered be, A lightsome heart bids care depart, And time fly pleasantly. Why sit and mourn o'er fancied ills, When danger is not near? Care is a self-consuming thing, That hardest nerves can wear.

Always look on the sunny side, And though you do not find, All things according to your wish, Be not disturbed in your mind. The greatest evils that can come, Are lighter for to bear When met by fortitude and strength, Instead of doubt and fear.

Atways look on the sunny side-There's health in harmless jest, And much to soothe our worldly eares In hoping for the best. The gloomy path is far too dark For happy feet to tread, And tells of pain and solitode, Of friends estronged and dead.

Always look on the sunny side, And never yield to doubt, The ways of Providence are wise, And faith will bear you out, If you but make this maxim yours, And in its strength dade: Believing all is far the lest, Look on the storny side. Selected by Mary M. Brows.

IS SIN HEREDITARY?

BY LPWIS O. HUMMER.

[T will no doubt seem strange that: man that was schooled to the affir mative side of this question should cone forward and face all the theologica learning of this advanced age by takin; the negative. And while I am engaged in tearing down what I formerly helped to build up, I am acting from convictionof years of hard mental labor, and a thorough analysis of all the facts; and not from hasty conclusions. To my read er who perhaps never thought that there is a negative side to this question, and who may not fully understand my posithen will consider my efforts very weak. But unless there is something at the bottom of this matter that I have overlooked, I am sure I am right. I do not clain perfection, and I know that it is an easmatter to be mistaken - yet there is such a thing as reducing argument into ax-

I will now state my position so all can understand me. Adam was a poor, would creature just as we are, and fell at the recy first temptation that presented itself. The Serpent implanted fulse hood which formed the false impression and the false impression produced sinthus sin marred the conscience of Adam and this stain was not transmitted to his offspring. Organic hybridization is inpossible; so that if Adam was born be ly, his effering must also be hely. While the fruit of a tree may be hybridized, the tree itself remains unaffected; and the kind may be perpetuated by using second instead of the said of the spiple. If God intended Adam to multiply, the and in carboya was in Adam at his creation, and not put there by the Serpent. We are not leglarids, but scious, We. are not from a seed produced by the Ser-It is after all the seed of the woman that a perfect human sacrifice to redeem a s isospitible to sin ent power to conduct either good or evil influence, and therefore succumbs to its environments, hence the necessity of cor rect training-"bringing our children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and keeping them from evil influences. The child is born susceptible of impressions, but not impressed; susceptible of cducation, but not educated. At our birth there is no predisposition to either good or evil, so that our enri rimments really form our nature. The child adapts itself to its environments and not the environments to the child.

And as we are surrounded by the atmosphere of evil as well as of good, we inhale both—which really composes our individualities. If there were no law there could be no almormal relation. "I had not known lust except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." Rom, 7:

I admit that Christ meets us with salvation at the same point where Adam meets us with corruption, for there is no such a point in existence. I say Christ meets us with salvation at the same point where the Devil meets us with corrup tion, and that point is in the school room, and not in the loins of Adam and Christ. Do we revert through the loins of Christ as we come through the loins of Adam? Can you run sin through the loins of Adam, without running salva tion through the lons of Christ? If sin is inherited, what becomes of our free egency? I would like to know how Adam's organization was affected, so as a make the transmission of sin possible? What kind of a body had he? Was he composed of flesh and blood just as we are, or what kind of a being do my Christian brethren who believe in this hereditary sin imagine that he was? If sin changed the organism from incorruption to corruption then salvation must alsochunge the organism from corruption to incorruption, and obliterate death. Did Christ die to redeem a derayed human nature, or did he die to give efficacy to a law whereby a comput soul may redeem itself from the polluion of sin, and transform itself into the afethat new is, and is to come, or a glocious immortality? Herein lieth the nystery of godliness. Herein lieth the justice of God in executing judgment.

It certainly ought to be apparent to all, that Adam's intellectual faculties were corrupted, and not the organic man. What we learn we receive through the organs of sense, and the soul is the governor of the immuterial attributes. as the stomach is of the material. I can see no way to make sin hereditary, and salvation optional. Had Christ not fulfilled the law, he never could have abole ished it and instituted a new and living and partake of the water of life Jesus, and if there is any other, where is it to be found? It infants need a Satheir case while unconscious of sin. The tions.

transmissible? Consistency, fellow Christians. Our nature is not the soil from which springs sin in its relation to instituted law, but the soil is susceptible of germinating and manifesting fruits of the seed that is sown on the soil. Incorrupt seed is not in the child at birth, but the Devil sows it, and when it has once been germinated and its roots fully developed, God alone can save us, and that by grace that it might be by faith.

When we arive at the period of capability of choosing and refusing, individual responsibility sets in, and not beforc. 'God holds the parents responsible for the manner in which they bring up their children, and not the children. It there is any way to run sin and death through the loins of Adam, without running life and immortality through the loins of Christ, I will thank any one for the lesson. If one is a natural result of Adam's transgression then the other is a natural result of Christ's obediencewhich is universal salvation. If sin is inherited, how can a man repent? You might as well try to repent of the finger nail or hair on your head, as of sin. I understand that all law on the Deitic side is the same, and that they are opposites to us on account of our almormal relation; but the relation does not exist in an unconscious child. We are by nature the children of wrath, and yet this nature is not inherited, but is a secand nature formed by our environments. In sin are we conceived, not because the mother had inherited sin, but because she arived at that period when we were born, as to constitute her a sinner. There is no one that lives to be 18 or 20 years old but what is a constitutional sinnerbut this constitutional sin is not caused by being born of sinful parents, but by heing surrounded by sin and our adaptation to these surroundings. If any one can point out a sinful sin that is not produced by our environments let them do it, and I am ready to be converted. "As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive." We die in Adam by discheying like $\Lambda ext{dam}$, and we are made alive in Christ by obeying like Christ. I know of nothing that looks like hereditary sin, yet I have no desire to be colicus, for it is nothing to me more than to all others that desire to know the muth. Get this idea of hereditary sin out of the minds of the people, and infant baptism is at an end, as well a host of other errors that are husks for skepties to feed upon.

stead of being the originators they were themselves the outgrowth of revolutions having their origin in the wants and wrongs of the people. The theory that the world was stationary and that the sun revolved around it, was found to be inconsistent with known facts before Galileo startled the nations and called down on himself the anathemas of the church by proclaiming that the world

Columbus had doubtless heard the traditions of the Northmen in reference to a strange land lying to the west across the seas before he launched his bark on the stormy Atlantic. And Luther but echoed the voice of generations of priest. ridden people when he started a rolling the ball of the Reformation. He but touched the spark to the train that had been laid, little by little, through ages of silence and suffering.

Lying just beneath the surface of the water in New York Harbor, rocky shoals had existed for ages. They had long been the dread of seamen, and a source of great loss to merchant princes whose vessels were dashed upon the hidden rocks. It was determined to remove them. For weeks and months science gave her best resources, and labor her sweat to undermine them. At last when tons of giant powder were enclosed within the reeks and wires from all the blast. ing holes were connected with a power. ful battery on shore—it was the tiny finger of a little child that loosed the electric spark and sent it along the trembling wires on its work of destruction. Instantly an explosion occurred. The sea was tossed like mountains high, and for a moment all was dismay and confusion and dread. But when the fumult subsided it was found that the largest ship could ride in safety through the hitherto dangerous passage. The shoals were

As the little child loosed the electric spark that blew up the shoals of Hell Gate after the mines had been laid deep beneath the placid surface of the water; so these Luthers and Galileos but lit with the fire of their own genius and enthusiasm, the hearts and minds of millions who indistinctly felt the truth, and waited only for a leader to free themselves from the laundage of ignorance and superstition. There must be a long accumulation of grievances before the sluggish nature of man will arouse and throw off abuses. Eruptions of Vesuvious occur last once in centuries; last when they do occur the face of nature is changed, the bowels of the earth are purged of its noxious gases; and though min marks the course of its rivers of fire, and louried cities tell to future ages its destructive power, yet who shall say that greater peace and security and happiness shall not thenceforth dwell around its base and within its influence!

Reformations are moral volcanoes. Reforms are the craters, through which the seething, boiling fires of the popular mind find vent. We hear the rumbling and feel the trembling long before the uphenval comes. Long almses require u long time for their correction; that is, it takes a long time to get ready to correct them. But when the time of action comes, it comes like the burst of occan in the earthquake, like the belthings of Vesuvins, like the functing of a thousand tons of giant powder. And if ve do not read amiss the signs of the times, the time is not far distant when very much of our present system of popular education will be relegated to merded obscurity along with the false and carbarous of fast ages.

The winds of truth begin to blow. already we hear the low swash of the reskers as they beat upon the rocks of The best of our modern thinkers re taking up the cudgel against a sys which they claim is false in theory harmful in practice. And when be times are fully ripe for action, when be undercurrent of thought becomes officiently strong, it will bear to the urface some man, who, embodying imself the best thought of the age, will head a successful revolution and lead be people up and out of the present nto a true, a more natural and a ration d life.

CHOOSING MINISTERS.

THE office of a minister is a laborious I but a good work; they who desire as such from proper motives, do well, and if duly qualified they should be en miraged, assisted in obtaining their obpet; but to desire authority in the church by intruding into the sacred office with at qualifications suited to its important duties is a vile prostitution, and merits the deepest condemnation. Let none who desire this office or have entered into it, or who have any concern in admiting others, forget that nothing can compensate for the want of proper motives, n a blameless conduct. The ministers of the Lord's flock should be vigilant, wher, of good lichavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach, and remote from viplent passions, and every kind of covetousness. No man can be a fit person for this office in the most obscure situation, who is unwatchful, frivolous, licentious, given to wine, greedy of filthy lucre, disposed to furious anger, selfish, averse to hospitality, and unable to teach.

It however behooves us to look to ourselves and those with whom we are con erned. It is incumbent upon ministers to rule well their own houses, and to have thour children in subjection with all gravity. If they find this too diffi cult for them, how shall they take care of the church of God! The folly of os tentation, conformity to the world, or augodliness will surely lessen his influence. It is also very wrong for novices, however, eminent for abilities and gifts, to be pushed forward prematurely into this sacred work. This has ruined many promising men, by putting them up with pride, and easting them into the condemnation of the wicked one. Auother great concern that ministers have a good report amongst those that are withbut. Professed Christians should therefore be proved, and found blameless be fore they are admitted to any office of The wives of ministers the church. should be grave and sober, no slander, but faithful in all things. They who have acted faithfully and diligently in inferior matters are best qualified for more important duties, especially when by enduring hardships and facing danger, they have attained to great holdbess in the faith. The importance of these things is therefore unspeakable; and our watchfulness ought to corresfond with it. If so, they may be instruments in the hands of God that they may hold forth and adorn the doctrine of truth as pillars and supporters of it. Let us remember that Goor was manifest in the flesh to take away our sins, to destroy the works of the evil one; to redeem us from all iniquity, and to purih us unto himself, a "peculiar people. Zealous of good works."

Knowledge is power.

EXPECTATION IN GOD.

BY PHEBE A FRANTZ.

THE less we expect from this world the better for us. The less we expect from our fellow-men whether of spiritual help or of inspiring example, the smaller will be our disappointment. How often do we feel that our dearest friends forsake us in time of real need! Those whom we think are true and best of all, will sometime forsake us in time of adversity; therefore we should not expect so much from earthly friends. He that leans on his own strength, leans on a broken reed. We are always going to something stronger, purer, and holier; somewhere in the future there always hangs in the air a golden ideal of a higher life that we are going to reach, but as we move on, the dream of better things move on before as also. It is like a child running over a hill to catch the rainbow; when he gets on the hill top the rainbow is as far off as ever. When our day-dream of a higher Christian life keep floating away from us, we are left to realize what frail unreliable creatures, we are. We rest on expectation of growth and victory over evil in ourselves. "My soul wait thou only upon God!" My expectation is only from him. God never deceives us. When we pray to him aright, that is, with faith, with perseverance, with submission and with an eye single to his will. Our heavenly Father makes no mistake in his dealings with supplicants. He is a Sovereign, but not a despot. If it pleases him to keep is waiting for the trial of faith then we must wait.

POSITION AND ABILITY.

HE who would have position should first such asfirst seek fitness for it. Many persons forget this, and hence we see incompetent men depending upon their subordinates for skill and wisdom to exercise their proper functions. Such men are generally despised by those beneath them. He who would control and di rect matters needs to have, not perhaps all the special knowledge which the whole of his subordinates combined possess, but a general understanding of the management of affairs, more extensive than that of any one of those beneath him. In that case, instead of looking upon him with disguised contempt, as an intruder and interloper, they turn to him with confidence for direction and for aid in time of emergency. He who fills any place of responsibility should have such acquaintance with its affairs as to be able to respond to any call which shall be made upon him by adverse or dangerous circumstances. He should be a man to whom men can cling, and in whom they can trust in time of trial and calamity; unshaken in his integrity, unblemished in his life; with a mind quick and ready for any special need. Such a man will command the respect and win the love of his associates, for they will see that he has ability as well as position, that he occupies a place of honor because he is fit to hear its responsibil

CHILDREN OR DOGS.

MODERN fashionable society by some tacit noreement limits the some tacit agreement, limits the household to one or more, and shrugs its shoulders at families as large as its fathers had, as if there were some shadow of the unbecoming thrown over the past by its great households. And so it becomes apparent, in the numerous ex amples before us, that there must be an agreement in this direction; and thus society is in conspiracy against God's creative flat, substituting childless house holds, or next to these, as the proper or der of a well bred family. But akin to this, and proceeding from this conspiracy in public sentiment, is the substitu tion of dogs in the chrildren's place. The Savior said to the Syro Phonician woman, "It is not meet to take the children's bread and east it unto the dogs;" and, and what seemed to have only a local application, has come, through the mutatious of custom, to be a command which ought to be accompanied with the thunder of Sinai. It is a wrong against childhood to bring the dog into the place in the family circle that God has, ever since creation, given as the home of infancy and childhood life.

To see a dog on the lap of a man or woman who has the ability to support a child is a crime that the judgment will avenge. Children are as accessible and abundant as pups, and as good-looking, and require no more care than multitudes give their dogs. Nor do they cost any more to support; and in the possibilities of their natures for good, why, an angel would be outraged if required to make the comparison. In the one case it is to preserve and hand down the course of time the image of God; in the other it is to bestow the time and pains which ought to be devoted to his glory and the good of the race on worth-and women become foster-mothers and fathers to rat terriers! And these worthless beasts have driven the children into the houses of refuge or orphanages. We are confounded and disgusted, in public conveyances, in being compelled to see a woman, who ought to be leading or caressing a child of her own, or one of hers by adoption, carrying a long-haired, brindle looking dog in her bosom, sometimes kissing the despicable thing, or lifting it on the seat where some child ought to be; or to see a great, stalwart man, who ought to have brains to be absorbed in human affairs, holding to a chain, at the end of which is a dirtyfooted, soulless Spitz, while hundreds of children are homeless, who are putting out their little hands for some one to do for them a mother's or father's part. Or what is, if possible, more pitable, is to see an unmarried woman of health and cultivation, at that age when she ought to be interested in her kind, walking behind a dog with a chain in her hand, worrying herself in keeping the dog on the sidewalk, or in extricating the limbs of her fellow travellers on the wayside from the chain by which she attempts to guide the beast according to the latest style. Is there no orphan, with tears lying on its cheeks, motherless and neglected, that could take that dog's place redeemed by the love of that woman's heart from its wretchedness, and led to Jesus Christ to ever bless the queenly person and noble heart that re-enacted the generous impulses of Pharaoh's daughter? No! If the Queen of the Pharaohs had lived in this age, the baby Moses might have shricked until his face was as red as a cherry; and if he had been offered to her favor she would have said, "Servants, pitch him back to the alligators. I would rather have a tailless poodle, with a blue ribbon round his ears."

Sometimes we are compelled to see these wretched dogs carried out on their airing expeditions. A grand turn out whirls by and gay and dashing steeds prance along the highway. Two stalwart men guard it in front and back. Inside a richly-robed beauty, with dainty fingers and immaculate gloves. The richest silk covers this splendid makeup of dust and ashes, and in her lap lies an exhausted dog, so overcome that it can scarcely raise its languid eyes to the loving face that is pouring her motherly instincts upon it. And how many babes there are, the very beauties of creation, God's divinest work, pining in asylmus or wretched homes, to whom a breath of fresh air would be as the balmy breath of Paradise, who could smile even though the face were marked by pain if chirped by a loving woman. But no. she prefers to chirp to her inanimate dog. One half the children might be taken from the dremy hospitals and have homes where hove reigns did the dog-catchers do their duty. It costs no more to feed and clothe a child than a dog. Why, then, is the children's bread cast to the dogs! $-Se^{7}$.

nothing but a little effort for the sake of the good it may do to one of Christ's little ones, you may induce them to subscribe. And we shall hope by God's grace to strengthen the Christains among them, and bring the careless ones to a knowledge of saving power. Let us make one or two suggestions. Better by far get them to subscribe for themselves than to send the paper to them, for it is universally true that men prize those things that cost them something far more than what does not. And if you can only by skill and perseverance get them to pay $1.50 for the B. At. W. you will have created in them an interest in the paper at once. Where a man's treasure goes, there goes his heart. Another thing, get them to subscribe for a year, if possible. Better get them to send 40 cents and take the paper for three months than not at all, but this sum is so small and the time is so short that we can probably do them much more good under a yearly subscription. A silent little tract often works a conversion. We believe that the B. AT W. is doing just that kind of work; and we propose making it more and more useful under God to this end; but while we labor to make the paper good, our friends must see that its circulation is extended. You can secure the congregations, and we will preach to them.

KANSAS KERNELS.

PY the blessing of Providence, the writer D and companion arrived in Parsons. Sept. 26th, and by Bro. Garber was conveyed to place of meeting four miles north. Here a large canvas tent had been crected for meeting purposes. Not arriving at the time appointed, Bro Mar tm Neher, of Crawlord county entertained the congregation on Wednesday, evening, and on Thursday evening Bro. David Bare, of Ind., preached an acceptable discourse. On Friday evening the writer had the pleasure of talking to an attentive audience. On Saturday at 11 A M. we met again for public worship. Hy this time quite a number of enruest, active ministers had arrived. We remember the following: A. J. Hixson, of Ohio, David Bare and Bro. Plummer, of Ind., Moses Bare, of Bourbon county, Martin and John Neber, Robert and Samuel Edgecomb, of Crawford county, Bro. Ikenberry and D. Kingery, of Labette county, John Hess, of Wilson county, Jacob Buck, of Lyon county, Kunsas. At the conclusion of the foremoon exercises one came forward and was received by baptism. In the evening met to attend to the ordinances of God's house. Bro. David Bare officiated, and the meeting was truly an enjoyable one. We were informed that two hundred and thirty members, were sented at the tables. Reader, do not say that there are no brethren and sisters in Kansas. Here were members who had come forty, titty, sixty, yes ninety miles to partake of the Feast. Some came long distances in private conveyinces, and they gave unmistakable, evidence of being refreshed and strengthened. O if does one good to meet these hungry, zealous, and lumble brethren and sisters! Hard pressed as they are sometimes, by the world, and away from the main body of the church, they cling to the good old slap, Zion, with a tenacity which demonstrates true conversion and loyal-

On Sunday at 9: 30 A. M. met in children's meeting. The tent which was about 60 feet long and 25 wide, was completely filled with people. One hundred little loys and garls were there, eager to hear what the children's friend had to say. See their smiling, faces, their ready ears and willing minds! Fathers and mothers were there to hear something to comfort, their hearts. Brothers and sisters were there to learn something that would do them good. Old and young longingly and attentively listened for that which would edity and strengthen. half hour was spent with the children and then Bro. Edgecomb closed the exercises in an impressive manner | Bro. A. J. Hasson also did good service in the opening exercises. Af ter prayer we distributed a lot of little tolks paper, the Children at Work, and had not near enough. May these meetings in behalf of the dear youth prove beneficial to old and going. and kind admonition but rather scolded or reproved them. If you want a child to love you. first show it how to love. Do not ask it to love you, to come to Jesus while anger and coldness and peevishness heaves in your bosom. So long as God spares me and bestows grace up in me for the work, so long shall I urge children to love their parents, to be kind to each other, to read the Bible, and early seek the Lord. God forbid that any of us should follow the latter clause of Mark 10; 13. If you are inclined to rebuke those who bring children to Jesus, go and read that Scripture. It will cure your diseased heart.

At the conclusion of the children's meeting. preaching to the older ones commenced. Some excellent discourses were delivered at the close of which two aged persons came forward and requested to be baptized. This was a season of rejoicing. Now came the time of parting. All seem to have enjoyed the hallowed occasion, and it was a trying time to leave for the old hattle grounds again. A number remained for meeting in the evening which was held in a school-house near by, the tent having been taken down and conveyed to Bourbon county where it will be used for Love-feast purposes Sept. 30th. We like this tent arrangement. They are convenient in more ways than one.

ANGER.

What a glo-D rious time the people of earth might have did they obey this admonition. Paul knowing man's nature and the influence of cir. cumstances—understanding that there can be no cause without an effect—well knew that cer tain things would of necessity displease man and cause him to become angry, cause his soul to writhe and revolt; and therefore he provides a way that he may escape the dreadful evils of anger. To be angry and sin not is what every hild born of God and guided by the Holy Spirit will do. Although his feelings may be wrought up, and his spirit burning in agony, yet he need not sin—he need not violate God's law—he need not injure his fellow-man; but his anger simply indicates his displeasure with sin and wickedness. Lot's rightenus spirit was vexed from day to day by the filthy. Sodomites. yet we do not learn that he ever did them any harm; that he ever sinned—transgressed God's law. To be augry and hate our brother is to put ourselves "in danger of hell fire;" and close observation would teach as that many. both in and out of organized charches, are exposed to this great danger. Few, indeed, are those who get angry and sin not.

I have felt many times that this admonition has not been so carefully obeyed and entorced by the church as its importance demands. Brethrescand sisters are not always required to conform to it. They are allowed when they get angry to see, transgress God's law, to hate their brother. I say we deal too lightly with this; we are too indifferent about it. Things of much less importance consume our time and stalent. A great deal more time is often speut to see that externals according to decisions of general councils are enforced than to see that brethren who get angry sin not. This is not a demand of man nor church-creed, but of God. Were we more careful with the fundamental principles of our holy religion we would have much less trouble with some much things which are the ontgrowth of character. To be angry and sin not is according to divine nature We spend time in adjusting business transactions between brethren and when the work is done neither one is any better than he was before. His character is not one what better. In such cases instéad of taking into consideration the transaction itself, it should be the brethren. If we would direct our efforts in such a way as to loll sin we ought to strike at the root. long as the root is not destroyed exil frint will continue to be produced.

When anger grows into hatred of our fellow-none, I debases the soul, engulfs in misers and wretchedoes, home, society church, and government. Its setting foam and fury burns before it all that is lovely, sweet, and tender A mad man? What is signi! Nothing on earth hereid and awar casaigh to like him

SHANNON LOVE-FEAST

N the first instant a very large audience as.

sembled at Shannon to participate in the service of the Communion and those attending upon such occasions. In examination service, Bro. D. Fry said we should examine ourselves to see if we were in order. Do sisters wear the covering at the table as commanded? Do brethren wear the hair as Jesus did? Jesus were his hair as the Nazarenes, and they wore it long and parted in the middle. Bro. D. B. Eby spoke, saying that we give too much attention to externals and not enough to that which regulates them. He said he heard about a man that had been stealing, who, one day, while in a machine shop, placed his hands in a pair of shears which, when they closed, cut them off. These hands have stolen many things, but they will steal no more. He now thought he would be much better. He did not seem to realize that he would not be any better unless his motives were changed; that cutting off his hands only deprived him of the means used in stealing without changing his desires. He had no better heart after his hands were cut off than before. We have no regard for anything we do, if it be not done from the heart. We only make ourselves hypocrites-wolves in sheep's clothing. To become better we must begin at the heart. Then what we do will be done from the heart, and we will be better by the observance. Brother Henry Martin then said we should fullow no one farther than he follows Christ. Do you all pray? If you do not you disobey one of the commandments of God Ministers should have family worship. We must pray at home. Christ was a pattern of prayer. Brethren do not always conduct themselves at funerals as they are directed by the word of God. They sometimes worship with their hats on and do not, even in prayer, kneel, This we consider very wrong. Before going to prayer. Brother M. said that it was the custom of the church always to give the liberty on such occasions to any brother or sister who had anything on his mind that he wished to take to God in prayer. Indeed I should be very glad to hear some sister lead in prayer. Thelieve it would have a better effect than prayer from a brother, because it is a common thing to hear a brother pray. From notes taken by S. J. H.

MORE PREACHING.

WITH every issue of the BRETHREN AT Work there goes out the cry for preaching. Never in the history of the Church has there been such a demand of our brethron to preach their interpretation of the Bible as now. The call comes from the high and low; from the learned and unlearned; from the rich and the poor. The cry goes up from the inhabitants of the learen mountain, the desert plain, from lowland and highland, from the smallest canntry town to the metropolis of the world. From everyage, sex, c. dor, rank, an 1 state, comes the wailing cry, "Come over and help as."

It has ever been the boast of our numsters that to the poor the Gospel is preached. But have we any just cause to be elated? Do our ministers preach to the poor? We are afraid not many do. To whom do they preach? Generally to their brothren and sisters and their lamilies. Are they poor? They are not. The Brethren Church, in proportion to its sive, is estimated to be one of the wealthiest churches in the world. Inst think, in Chicago there are 215 churches besides about twenty missions and eleven Adventist and Spiritualist societies, but not one of them the Brethren's Churches. Now if the people of that great city know nothing of the Brethren, whose fault is it? It they are all Roman Catholics, Lutherans, Methodists. Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Congregacionalists &c., who is to be blamed? Can they believe a doctrine which they have never read nor heard? We hearfily endorse the sentiments of a letter from Farragut, Iowa. neither lack food nor raiment. To go to the waste places, was ever the Master's procept and example. "Ho to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." How many counties are there in the United States over all of which the Brethren travel and preach?

"Ho reapers of life's harvest, Why stand with ms ed blade, Until the night draws round thee And day Legins to lade?

Why stand ye idle waiting. For respers more to come, The golden morn is passing, Why sit ye idle, dumb?"

Arouse! awake! "Go and teach all nations. See that "to the poor the gospel is preached."

"Thrust in the sharpened sickle And gather in the grain, The night is fast approaching, And soon will come again.

The Master calls for reapers, And shall be call in vain? Shall sheaves lie there ungatherd And waste upon the plain?

If you cannot cross she ocean, And the heathen lands explore, You can find the beather nearer, You can help them at your door.

If you cannot give your thousands, You can give the widows mite. If you cannot be the watchman, Standing high on Zion's wall.

g de 4 de 4 4 de 2 e e

You can do what Heav'n demands, You can be like forthful Ascon Holding up the prophets hands."

A man who has become a victim to cancer would spond the world, if he had it, to be cared of his disease, that his life neight be prolonged ast a few years; but he would not give a cent to have his neighbor cured of the cancer of in, when he knows the wages of sin is death, when he knows that a cure would not insure life for only a few years, but for a never ending, cyclessless etermly.

To be consistent, one of two things we must do: either we must cease our profession, or we must my to win others to it. If we do not we show an in sincerity, an abscence of faith in our teachings, and are the vilest and most debased hypocrites at which it is possible for the most estravagant imagination to conceive. If we would see our fellow man go down to eternal mia without making any effort to save him we are no more charitable, no more benevolent, no more merciful, no more humane, no more Christ like than the devil himself. Is this plain? It takes plain speech to cut through the heavy ernst of selfishness out of which grow pride, arrogance, covetousness, envy. jealonsy, and hypoerisy.

If God, the Bible, Christianity mean maything at all, they mean as many times more than anything in this life as there are sands on the sea shore, drops in the ocean, or atoms in the Universe. If eternal life was bought at the expense of a sacrifice of every earthly comfort, solace, or joy and the most dreadful tortures to mind and body were each endured mght and day-if our holies were receptables of the most exeruciating pain and our minds of the greatest grief and gloom of which one amute could not be endured, even then we would obtain salvation on easier terms-would make a better bargain, than though we should buy the "earth and the follows thereof" with our shadow.

THE COMING MAN

HE is coming. You may all know him; in tact you will have no trouble in learning to know him if you are not now well acquainted with him. He is humble, unprotentions, kind, sociable, tender-hearted, long-suffering. charitable, lovely, truthful, punctual, and contented. He takes advantage of no one. He is losing no sleep, losing no physical strength on account of station in life. He is not freeting and worrying because he is not a minister or an editor. Perhaps he is thinking of starting a paper, but then he is not telling it around and adding "It will be the lost paper in the Brotherhood," He is not saying, "My paper will be the cheapest, my paper will be the chanist and brightest," No, he is not using adjectives of such high degree, but modest-like says nothing of the kind. He does not say, "I'll make things jingle if I ever freach ". you hear him say, "I was to the District Meet ing last week. I made a speech there and n made things ring." No such boastful language He is not all the proceeds out of his month time trying to hoist himself to the top of the panuacle at the expense of his fellow-man. The vanity of self-exaltat on is not in him. are not always annoyed by his allusions to his own work. You are not made ashamed at his pretensions to learning, when you know that he is even below the medium. When you present an idea, you are not mortified by any such remarks, "O that is old to me." "I guess you borrowed that somewhere," He is glad when you speak, and patient in hearing. He is not arrogaut, self-willed, ambitious to be foremost, but believes that his work must determine the estimation in which he is to be held by his brethren. In fact, he is just so modest and unassuming that he cannot fail to occupy a very eminent position in the church. He has the qualities that make men worthy of our confidence. He takes delight in making others useful and happy. He does not say much, but when he speaks you are made glad. Such is the coming man. For aught I know there may be many just like him on the way. I pray God that their number may be legion. The name of the coming man I do not know. The qualities of the successful man have been named. Shallowness, arrogance and self-exaltation may flourish for a season, but the end will come. No such work can remain, for God will overthrow it. Ignorance and self-must boast a great deal in order to hold a position, but soon er or later their hollowness will be apparent to M. M. E.

LITTLE TRICKS.

) Fall the things which dishonor the cause of God and disgrace the name of Christ, perhaps we should assign the first place to little meannesses practiced by men professing godliness; and especially by ministers of the Gospel. There are some things which are hardly hig enough to be called sins, and which, if a man were proved guilty of them, would in single instances hardly afford ground for disfellowshipping him, yet which, if allowed to go on unchecked, work rain to his reputation, and dishonor to the name and cause of Christ.

It is scarcely necessary and perhaps hardly possible to define the things of which we speak, but unfortunately most persons know what they are. There are few neighborhoods where the name of Christ is not 'dishonored by some petty example of meanness and littleness on the part of some church member, or deacon, or pretended minister, which really causes more reproach than would be occasioned by some solitary act of outlocaking sin. When Moses speaks unadvisedly with his lips, we consider the provocation and pity his weakness, but when Achan brings reproach and defeat upon the armies of Israel for the sake of a Babylonish garment or a wedge of gold, we acquiesce in the justice that blots him out of existence. When David commits a crime we wait to witness his repentance and hear his penetential ery; but when Gehazi lies through covetonsness and hides his talents of silver and his changes of raiment, we see with just indignation the leprosy smiting him as with the curse of God There were many of Israel's kings that sinuell and repented, or who, even in their iniquities had something of nobleness about them, but when Ahab and Jezebel conspired by trand and talsehood to rob a poor man of his little heritage, we feel a satisfaction when we see the dogs licking his Idood upon the very ground which he had so wickedly appropriated. Puter denies his hard and curses and swears, and at one glance from the eye of his Master goes out to weep in hitterness over his fall; but Julias who carried the lag, who handled the funds, who stole the money, who pleaded the coase of the poor that he might pilfer his percentage of the gifts bestowed upon them, and who finally belrayed his hard for thirty pieces of siver went to a suicide's grave with few to pity him or lament his end.

The petty meannesses of covetous men, ipen the way to the worst of crimes. Their littleness does not measure their importance. A fallen tree may be gashed and cut and shattered. and still have soundness and strength in it but if we see emerging from it little fungus growths. if the evidences of decay are manifest, we know then that though the trunk may seem fan, and the bark entire, and every branch he boken. yet the whole tree is far gone in decay, and is fit for nothing but the tire, and hardly til for the These minute tokens (ell of inward decomposi tion, and are a thousand fold more omnion than any cut or cleavage which violence may caus An oaken post may be shuttered or river, and yet every fibre of it may be sound and titfor no age of service, but it we see another in whose presents a good appearance.

smooth surface we detect only here and there a little worm hole which it would seem could not affect its character or strength, we know that through all its fibres from top to bottom worms have wrought their way, until the interior is but mass of worthless powder, and is destined to be crushed by the first pressure that rests upon it. So there are men who in appearance and reputation seem sound and strong; they stand high in the Church and in the world, and will stand so until some sudden revelation smites them and crushes them to the dust; but in spite of all their pride of appearance, their little petty tricks show that borers are at work; that there is present the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy, and which once lodged into a man's heart and life, does not cease to operate until it has thoroughly permeated his moral constitution. and atterly caten out everything within him that was manly and noble and godlike.

Christian minister, beware of little tricks You may save a penny and lose a friend. While you pride yourself upon your keenness, others may be talking about your meanness; and one thing remember, these little wrongs are likely to be unrebuked; the man who observes them despises them, but he says they are not worth speaking of, and so he says nothing about them, and they remain until, like a fungus growth, they indicate the decay of moral vigor, and the atter and hopeless ruin of all true manhood.

There are men and ministers of the Gospel in good and regular standing, about whom almost every man that knows them knows some little mean contemptible trick of which they have been guilty, which in itself is a small matter, -and so a grain of sand is a small matter,-but when the grains of saud become numerous enough the ocean litself cannot break through them. So no excellencies of character can make amends for these petty exhibitons of human frailty and depravity. It is not that the things themselves are of such importance. but they are the straws which show which way the wind is blowing; they are the things which make every man doubt the integrity of those who are guilty of them, and which prepare every man who knows them to believe that a man who could do such things could do other things which are far meaner and far worse.

We recall with satisfaction an instance where a near relative when brought before a court on some trainped up charge of wrong-doing, summoned an old gray-haired minister who had fived more than forty years within half a mile of him. "How long have you known this man?" said the lawyer. "I have known him ever since he was born." What do you know about him?" "I never knew a mean thing of him in my life." Such a testimony as that stands out in marked contrast with many petty tricks and discreditable transactions which so often need to be explained and apologized for; the explanation frequently being more harmful than the accusation, and the apology more discreditable than the fault.

Quan of God, if you would be honored of God and man, put away from you once and forever all graftiness, decritfulness and guile, and stand in the name and strength of the Lord, sparning everything which partakes of littleness and trickery, and living so blamelessly and uprightly that you shall ever enjoy the sumbaht of the Maker's smile, and the favor of those who love righteousness and nate iniquity. Then you can say with the apostle. We have "renonneed the hidden things of dishonesty not walking in craffiness, nor handling the Word of God decentfully."-2 Cor. iv. 2. Bereive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have defraided no man." 2 Cor. vii. 2 -The Armory.

Will some one please explain the 5th and 5th verses of the 6th chapter of Revelations? It reads as follows: "And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see, -And I beheld, and lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand. And I beard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of fairley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine."

QUERY ANSWERED.

Will some one please explain Matt. 11: 11. In particular we would like to know who is the least, and why called the least in the kingdom of heav-JESTINA MILLER.

The verse reads as follows: "Verily 1 say unto you, among them that are born of women there half not risen a greater than John the Baptist: not with standing, he that is least in the kingdom ot beaven is greater than be.

THOUGH John was the greatest of prophets having advantages superior to any who had preceded him, inasmuch as it was his great privilege to stand at the very threshold of the gospel dispensation, yet his advantages were far inferior to these which are accessible to the humble trusting obedient disciple of Christ. Who is the least? The most bumble, those that are the least in their own estimation. The Savior says: "Blesed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Again, "For be that is least among you all, the same shall be great." Again it is written, "But to this man will I look, saith the Lord, even to him that is poer and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word." Or it may mean those who have the least advantages, the least opportunities for acquiring knowledge in the kingdom of Christ, has apportunities far superior to those who prosessed the greatest advantages under the law. Either, or both ideas would hold true, for the humble disciple, the poor in spirit, those who live by faith on the Son of God have advantages superior to John, and then the most lowly have, for to them also are the blessings of faith made accessible.

SOW THE SEED.

NOW ye beside all waters, Where the dew of heaven may fail; Ye shall reap if ye be not weary, For the Spirit breathes o'er all. Sow, though the thorns may wound thee,

One were the thorns for thee; And though the cold world scorn thee, Patient and hopeful be.

Sow ye beside all waters, With a blessing and a prayer; Name Him whose hand upholdeth thee, And sow thou everywhere.

Sow when the morning breaketh In beauty o'er the land; And when the evening falleth, Withhold not thou thine hand. Sow, though the rock repel thee In its cold and sterile pride; Some cleft there may be riven, Where the little seed may hide. Fear not, for some will flourish,

And, though the tures abound, Like the willows by the witers Will the scattered grain he found. Work in the wild waste places, Though none thy love may own; God guides the down of the thistle The wand'ring wind bath sown.

Sow by the wayside gladly, In the dark, damp caverns low, Where simlight seldom reacheth, Nor healthful streamdets flow. Watch and the clouds above thee;

Let the whirlwind round thee sweep; God may the seed-time give thee, But mother's hand may resp. Have faith, though ne'er behalding The seed burst from its tomb;

Thou know'st not which may perish, Or what he spared to bloom. Room on the narrowed ridges The ripened grain will find. That the Lord of the harvest coming

In the burvest sheaves may bind. Work while the daylight lasteth, Ere the shades of night come on-Ere the Lord of the vineyard cometh, And the laborer's work is done.

RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE.

BY WLAITBY A. CLARKE.

E, as individuals, are not satisfied with our present attumments; we are daily striving to acquire more knowledge, and thus store our minds with that which will prove of great benefit to as. The stadent who longs to become proficient in the sciences toils incessmitly, and often burns the modnight oil that he may gain knowledge and reach the summit of greatness to which his aspiring mind desires to uttain. Worldly people labor long and cheerfully that they may increase their knowledge and thus prepare them to appear as members of society, but often that knowledge is not of the proper kind. A knowledge of some things does not better our condition any whatever, but rather the reverse. It is the kind of knowledge that we seek that is id real benefit to us. A knowledge of the world and its maxims and fashions will not afford us any real, true enjoyment, for the world and all that is therein will pass away, but there is a knowledge that enriches its possessor, and which will, white life lasts, prove to be a continual feast, and finally lead the mind to higher enjoyments—those that will be realized at God's right hand.

"Knowledge is power," is an old adage, but a true one, and especially is it true of religious knowledge. We may possess a knowledge of the arts and sciences; we may study the heavens and learn to call the stars by name, and through that knowledge look up with reverence to Him who created them, and whose works so often impress our minds with His omniscience and power, but at the same time our hearts may be entirely destitute of the knowledge which is intended to cause as turned the near and endearing relation, we can sust on to Him-We want a religious knowledge in order that we may be better prepared for the work that is devolving upon us, and equip us for life's battles. Heligion is intended to make us better: it will soften and subdue our cold and indifferent hearts it we will submit to its gentle influences, and this added to our knowledge, gives as power in the world—a power that cannot fail to be fest, a though it may work at a way silently, ~ There is power in reagion and it will be real ized in all the walks of life, and we need it that we may more successfully meet the many conflats that idetroct our pathway.

gives us hours of enjoyment, but nothing can be compared to religious knowledge. It alone is sufficient to soothe the distressed mind and comfort when earthly knowledge no longer satisfies.

The Bible is a casket of rare jewels and we can possess them if we are willing to search for them. Let us delve down deep after the rich treasures and apply them to the shaping of our lives. And while we study the blessed volume we should not only do it with a view of storing our heads with knowledge, but our hearts should feel the influence of its sacred teachings Jesus says, "Search the Scriptures, for they are they that testify of me, and therein ye think ye have eternal life."

Those who have never felt the sweet peace that a religious knowledge affords, delay not to procure the "pearl of great price." While you are inhoring to attain to worldly greatness and to store your minds with such knowledge as will hetter emble you to live and act in this world, do not target that in order to be truly happy, and useful to yourselves and others, and that the object for which you were created be answered, you must passess a knowledge of heavenly wisdom, which is "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated. July of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrise." This knowledge will enable you to be more useful while in this world, and when your life-work is ended, will prove a pass-port into the beautiful world on high.

Jerusalem.

PErson the "Carbetian Standard" by apostal Armingotherit 1

MOUNT MORIAIL. N my last letter I endeavored to give the render a general idea of the present city of Jernsalem, apart from the temple mount. In the days of David, and at the beginning of Solomon's reign, the city was limited to Mt. Zion. Its northern walls ran close upon the present David street, and the other walls encircled the remainder of the mountain top. It was so completely surrounded by valleys, that only at the north-west corner, where the Joppa gate now stands, was it approachable on level ground; and at this point stands the strong castle now called the tower of David. I suppose that this is the fortification mentioned in H Sam, and L kings, under the name Millo. At that time Mt. Moriah was outside of the city, and separated from it by a narrow ravine about 100 feet deep, with precipitous sides. On its top was the threshing floor of Arannah, a Jubesite, who was still allowed to live at Jerusalem; and perhaps its terraced sides produced the grain which was threshed in its smannt. The threshingfloor was purchased by David in order to offer his sacrifice there at the time of the plague, and perhaps the entire mount on was included in the parchase. It was there that Abraham had offered Isnac, and there Solomon determined to build the temple. But the mountain top, as it was, formshed insufficient, space, for the courts of the temple, and a temple built there willout a wall surrounding it, would be exposed to the attack of his enemies. To supply these two defects was the principal work of the seven years during which he was building the temple. He first dag down to the solid rock, all around the base of the mountain, except at the northwest corner, where a narrow ridge connected this mount with the one next north of it. On the rock thus laid bare, he built his inclosing wall, laying the foundation stones in a led cut into the solid rock. This wall was built up perpendicular, until its top was higher than the top of the mountain inclosed within it. He then filled in the open space lying between tos wall and the slopes of the mountain, and thus oldanied on the top of the monutain a level surtace for the temple and its courts, or equal extent with the mountain's base. The space this tilled in, according to Capt. Warren's estimate amounted to 70,000,000 of erbic feet. To avoid part of the labor of transporting earth, for the purpose, a large part of the space was occupied building very lofty paers, on which was furned an arched roof, and upon this was laid a comparatively thin surface of earth. This is thou was adopted chiefly at the south-east corner, where was the largest space to be filled. I went down among these peers, and explored, by the light of candles, the space which they occu-

-there are many things that a knowledge of have allowed earth to fall in, from time to time. and fill up much of the space.

> On the solid rock of the mountain's natural summit. Solomon built his temple; and in order that this fortified hill might be accessible to the city, he ran the city walls across the intervening chasm, and huilt a vast bridge from near the southern end of the temple courts, across to the side of Mt Zion. The spring of the arch of this bridge, is still seen in the ancient wall on the west side of Mt. Moriah, and Capt. Warren, whose excavations have fully established all of the above mentioned facts, discovered the foundations of one or two of the piers of the bridge. It was probably this bridge which the Queen of Sheha so much admired, as the ascent by which Solomon went up to the house of the Lord. (II. Ch. ix. 4.)-

In order to supply the temple and its court with water, and to secure an adequate supply in case of a siege, Solomon constructed the pools and the aqueduct which I made the subject of one of my former letters. There are now within the temple inclosure thirty-three cisterns, for the purpose of holding water. One of these, first explored and measured by Dr. Barclay, is 42 feet deep, and 726 feet in circuit. It is dog in the mutural rock, and pillars of the same are left at intervals to support its roof. Its water is reached by a Hight of stone steps, and the water was about four feet deep when we saw it. Another, first explored by Capt. Warren, is 42 feet deep, 63 feet long, and 57 wide. It was dog in the earth, walled, and plastered, and covered with arches. How many at these cisterns were dug by Salomon is not known; but he certainly provided as many as he thought nseful.

The reader is aware that everything above ground on Mt. Morish was frequently torn down and rebuilt, after Solomon's day. When the city was taken—by the Mohammedans, in the 7th century, this mountain entered upon a new phase of its history. It was a sacred spot to the Mohammedans as well as to the dews, both on account of its earlier history, and because Mohammed had started from its soundit when he made has celebrated flight to heaven and back. He had stood upon a certain rock there, which began to follow him as he started up, but the angel Gabriel laid his hands on it and stopped it. The prints of Mohammed's teet and of Gabriel's hands were left in the rock, and there they are seen to the present day. I saw them myself, but I never would have known they were hand-prints and footprints if the Sheik who showed them to me had not told me so. They reminded me of a place which the priest showed me in Rome. where l'eber, when in prison there, happened to strike the side of his head against the stone wall, and left a deep dent in it. I afterward saw, in a little chapel in the Mount of Olives, a depression in the solid rock made by the feet of Jesus when he took his last step before the ascension. People's feet and hands and heads were very hard in these early days

COSTLY CHURCHES.

WE give two stems of news which show something of the cost of religion to some classes in a great city.

"Plymouth Unurch, Chicago, through the personal solicitation of its pastor. Rev. C. H. Everest, and a few leading members, undertook to secure pledges for the payment of $60,000 debt. The subscriptions, ranging from $100 to $10000, were all made on condition that, the whole amount should be raised. Lately the money was in the bank, and the checks were made out for every dollar of the indebtedness.

"Grace Episcopal Church, Chicago, recently relebrated the close of the twentieth year of the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Chuton Lucke During these twenty years there have been 1,002 haptisms, 105 confirmations, 463 funerals, 370 marriages; and there have been contributed for objects, inter and extra parochial, in round num $bers_i $42000000$

These stems were written for another jurpose, but show the fact we mention nevertheless, and what is said of these two churches, is true of many others in Chicago and in other large cities.

Here the annual expense of one church is shows to average $21,000 for twenty years go to the extent of 200 feet morth and south, The 8420 000 would have bout and suported and 270 feet east and west. They are about 50 , a full halt deven plant for commoditors church feet high above the present conth floor, but and do les same expacity as Grace church, or they reach down many feet below this, to the better-till, had the excess over the reason die Worldly knowledge often afford inspleasure; [solid rock, Broken places in the arches above cost aid support of one fair throck for themselves been judiciously put out in small suma, a hundred struggling congregations mgh have been helped to erect churches of the same size where the masses in Chicago could be induced to attend upon the Gospel. It is a fact that the churches of Chicago cannot accommodate one-half of the population, and there is need not only of more room, but some change in the present conduct of the churches which will induce the masses of the people to attend; and probably if Christian people would content themselves with plain houses and simple modes of worship it would go far to bring about this desirable end.

A CHRISTIAN VIEW OF THE JEWS

THE Christian Union says: It is wonderful to contemplate that while 10,000 Jews hover about captive at Jerusslem, and millions look wishfully Zionward, the Rothscnilds-Jews—can count up their $35,000,000,000, and to-day the two prime ministers of Great Britain and France, Benjamin Disraeli and Jules Simon are both dews. Jews are the bankers of Europe's kings; Jews the premiers of 70,000,000 of eivilized people. All this, too, where a century ago the poor Jews were hunted from nation to nation like wild beasts. The North-west Passage Found NOFESSOR Nordenskjold, of Sweden, has made the voyage so long dreamed of thro' the Northeeast passage. Voyaging along the shires of Europe and Asia, and passing from the North Sea to the Arctic Ocean, and through Behring Stratt into the North Pacific, he reached Yokuhama in safety Sept. 2-having sailed from Gothenburg on hes expedition July l, 1878. He says:

"I fully accomplished the object for which the expedition was sent out by Dr. Dickson, namely, a practical proof of the existence of a northeast cassage. Then the Asiatic coast was followed, and St. Lawrence Bay was crossed to Port Clarence, Alaska. Thence we crossed the Konivan, dredering carefully in order to determine he formation of the bottom of the sea, many specimens of the fanna and flora being obtained. The location, brendth, velocity and approximate volume of the currents of the Arcthe and Pacific Polar currents were chartered and calculated.

He claims that he has found a practical Summer route between America and Siberia, batit is yet problematical whether any solid advantrue to commerce will result. Scientifically, this successful expedition, will be found to possess unusual interest — Christian Standard.

The Western Churches

) | BING the just Summer we traveled over acteurion of Kansas and Nebraska, Jockng at the country, and have been among quite anumber of the Brethren, have attended some of their meetings, councils and loveleasts, as well as been with them, and somethers ereitsday walk and conduct of life. We found them realous, and earnestly contending for the (ath once delivered to the saints. The churches which we visited are in a healthy, thriving condition, peace and harmony generally prevalue, and in some things we thought members of our old churches might yet learn useful lessons from them. They are more sociable and hospindde thim in the Eastern chirches; straingers coming among them are received with true, brotherly kindness, and that coldness, almost amounting to selfishness, which we so often see at home, is unknown there. They also keep in mind that in all things we should give thanks. Few among them sit down to a meal, simple though it be, without returning thanks to the Giver of all good, and asking His blessing upon the same.

On "the first day of the week" they do not begiect the assembling of themselves together. as the manner of some is." but generally meet at some brother's house, for in many places they have no meeting-houses. Though there be no minister with them, they sing and pray, and exhort one another to hold out faithful.-These meetings have a great tendency to keep them warm in the faith and in full love and harmony with each other.

They do not have many ministers, but among them are some able, energetic laborers, though they are mostly young men. The churches, as a rule, have a great desire for able ministers in the East to come and preach for them, but their circumstances are generally such that they cannot possibly bear the expense of so long a journey, and therefore feel reluctant to ask them to come. But all brethren, and ministers in particular, will find a hearty welcome in the West.

Brethren, you who are blessed with this this world's store, remember the injunction, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Bro. Eshelman is taking a step in the right direction by going to preach the Gospel in the wilds of the West, and we hope others will follow his example, for we believe much good may be done. In the East where there is preaching every Sunday people become so accustomed to it that they do not realize the blessings they enjoy and almost become tired of hearing the word, but in the West the people hear little preaching, as few of the other denominations are yet organized there, and the prople hunger and thirst after righteousness. Not only would the believers be built up in that most holy fight, but many might be turned from the error of their ways to seek the true and living God.

To Many Inquirers.

D. E. CRIPE.

VOU see by my chirography that writing is a task at present. I just draw my pen along, leaving an almost illegible scrawt. I have scores of times essayed to resign my pen-ministry, but cannot. So long as my soul is flouded with thought, it is a relief to give it utterance: and so long as voices of gratitude and encouragement roll in from Dan to Beer-sheba, I am stimulated to effort in promulgating the Gospel of the Cross. Here and those a soul who has entered deeply into the blessednes; of sacrifice, contributes its mite to my voiceless ministry and so I continue to "occupy" till "the silver cond is loosed, and the golden howl be broken.

I will here repeat, perhaps for the twentieth time, that I neither ask nor accept anything on the ground of poverty. He that has learned the meaning of the Cross as God means it, minst become woefully reduced before he can conscientiously place himself on the poor list; and on the other side, the same knowledge will constrain Christ-possessing souls to glory in the opportunity of sharing the beatitude of Jesus in 2 Cor. S: 9. We do not think much of Emmanuel until we are ready to the stripped and emptied and eracified for the attenment of His great and rapturous ends. If the "stall voices" from my chamber of saffering and sorrow are meat and drink to God-loving hearts, let them sustain my dragging pen for Jesus soke, till head and neart, and hand, succeeds to the serve of the "last enemy."

dom. It is a griet to the Holy Trinity and the elect angels that the Bride of the Lamb is so apathetic in the proclamation of the glad fiblood of the Godman-do we really know what it signifies, do we joize it at all corresponding to its import? Have we the "mind of Christ" in relation to it? Is "the zeal of His house comsuming us?" Are we keeping our hands unstained with the blood of immortals, for whomthe Cross was stanged with Divine-human blood? veracity and love. To go on trustingly and hopefully in the way of self-sacrifice for the good of our fellows and the honor of God, is the unfailing method of laying up treasure in Heaven and becoming millionaires in the Kingdom of glory. Why are we so averse to bear the repreach of the Cross, and keep company with the humiliation and poverty and self-immulation of Emmanuel? Are we too insensible to form a conception of the feeling of God on account of the supineness of the people in relation to the object in which all His attributes and purposes centre? O for another Pentecost, for a fresh inbreathing of the life of Jesus. Let us come with one accord to the Altar of Gol-C. H. Balsbaugh. gotha.

Echoes from the East.

NUMBER XXIII.

UR meeting to-day, Aug. 31st., at the Am sterdam Meeting-house was introduced by singing a beautiful song of invitation to sinners and saints. The 4th chapter of John was read, and brother Good took his text from the 41st and 42nd verses.

"This is indeed the Christ," was the confession of the Samaritans when they heard the despised minister from Nazareth. The Jews in and about Nazareth were so blind at heart that they knew not their spiritual King from heav en. They rejected Him, and thus exposed their want of true religion. So it is now. When professed Christians reject the teachings of Christ, they exhibit their need of the Savior's love and life. But "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews," is not discouraged. He leaves this God-forsaken people, He journeys over into Samuria's land. Methinks I see the lonely company of Jesus and his apostles going up through the little valleys of Gahlee and Samaria. He comes to:the famous city of Sychar. He enters not, but seats Himself at the well of historic tame—Jacob's well. He rests. while His disciples go for something to eat What a consolation here for our poor brethren and sisters! Issus was poor and his disciples were poor. He knows how to be your friend. He experienced your want and your feelings. Though rich is heaven, he became poor for our sakes, that we by Hum might become rich in grace. O, yes, it is grace! Only if we are taithful to Illin and patient in Him, we shall have His help and This fullness. So shall we know for ourselves that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of our souls. Let us all hear Hun in all things, and we shall not only know. Him, but He will soon come and gather us into His bome alloye, and we shall be ever with Him. Bro. Baker followed with appropriate remarks.

SPEKING AND SAVING THE LUST.

September 17th, A goodly congregation was at the Welty Meeting-house this morning, many of whom were young people.

> Happy is he whose early years, Beceive instruction well, were the words of sucred song that opened the A word in behalf of missions. Nothing is regular service. Nothing can be more beautiful dearer to Jesus than the extension of His king- than early mety. No benefit in this life so great and good as the benefits of true and practical religion in the lives of the young. The strong tendency in young members is to go afdings of the Cross. Salvation by block, the ter the world in its fashion of dress, and amusement of the mind. But we know of some very taithful, praying young members. How beautiful such lives! They are the beautiful ornaments of the Lord's house—the Church.

> Brother Baker chose a text that is full of Good News: "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost."

I. The Son of Man-Jesus,

How desus seeks the lost.

HI. The means of salvation.

We all heard many good things—words for our fature good, if we last give ourselves to the Lord's service as we ought. It is possible that all can be saved, but some may be lost forever. What will it be? It must be their who will not believe and come to Jesus. No one then should neglect it. The spirit strives with the hearts of many, but the enemy is losy too. There is war around the human heart. O may the good Spirit win the victory and bring every soul a trophy of the cross! Will the reader say Amen?

September 14th.- Sport the day in reading and m meditation. Who does not now and then love to spend a quiet day at home? Well, some of us do. We cannot be faithful Christions and neglect to assemble with our brethrenand sisters frequently if it is in our power to do so, but a day of rest from physical toil, spout at home in Christian conversation, religious reading, devoit meditation, and all this seasoned with fervent prayer for one's own benefit, and for the Church of God, this is very profitable and well-pleasing in the sight of our Father in Father guide and protect you. is too little confidence in the pledge of hiver e heaven.

Brethren and sisters, let us never be idle. As long as we are litted for labor let us labor for our souls and the souls of others. We may not be able to do as much as we desire to do, but this is better than we should think we do too much. But in all our doing let us keep on the Lord's side. The Scriptures give us examples of persons who thought they were doing God's service and it proved the reverse-they were opposing God. Just think then how careful we ought to be that we do the will of our Father in heaven, for if we should oppose Him, it will do us evil, and it may reach so far among others that we may never be able to correct the mistake. When we do something that divides the sympathies and destroys brotherly love among brethren, we ought to be very cautious and tremble at the results. May the Lord help us to watch and pray, September 21st.—This morning we had services in our town church-house. The tolling bells indicated that the people could attend religious services at various places, and of course would hear different doctrines. If all were ONE all would "speak the same thing." Why should we pretend to be une, and then hold fast to conflicting creeds? Brethren and sisters, can you all deny yourselves, and "come out from among them and be separate?" How else can you follow the truth and proclaim it? Let us stand fast. We have a good doctrine; let us make the preaching of it good also. Let us also see to it that we are grounded and established in the primitive doctrine of the Church. The greatest struggle the Church has to-day is to keep on the old foundation-to prevent departures from the faith.

LOOK AHEAD. Our meeting began service with the singing of those benutiful words;

"Sweet hour of prayer, sweet hour of prayer."

A descou brother read the seventeenth chapter of St. Luke, as is our order generally, a feature unknown in the so-called churches, where one minister does all and gets paid for it. We hope the day will never come when our ministers will "umke merchandise" of us, and turn the free service of preaching into an ease-toving, men-pleasing, hirding ministry.

Brother Snyder then announced his text: 'Romember Lot's wife." He spoke of Abraham, bot's uncle, and how he labored for peace. Abraham's method of peace-making is commendable: he planned and gave Lot the first choice of ferritory. He was unselfish. But after a good while hot hved in a city where instead of his godly life becoming corrupted with enty life, he held his integrity, and so conducted his family also. The wickedness of that city became so great that God permitted it to be entirely destroyed, but preparatory to this. God removed Lot and family through the ministry of men whom Lot alterward found were angels. He took their advice and with his family left the city, and was allowed to go where he prayed he might be place of safety. While on the way we think we see them going. Noah leads the way, the two daughters follow, and the mother is last. They hasten, and have been commanded by the angels to refrain from looking back. But Lot's wife has a vain desire to book back, and she looks. Immediately she is visited by the judgements of God.

This Bible circumstance was compared to the journey of the Christian through this world, He lives in the city of sin at first. He is warmed to flee for his life. The Holy Spirit convinces him of danger and leads him out of the city, and starts him on the journey to Heaven. He is now a believer in Jesus, and must not have the vain desire to be where he started from or take along maything that might limder on the journey. The former hie must be forsaken. If not then hardness of heart and dullness of conscience will come upon us. What a pity that any should come short of the city of safety at last! Brethren and sisters, let us not look back, for this is dishonoring our Savior, and sad consequences will follow. Let us deny ourselves for Christ's sake.

Dear Brother Eshelman:-

AMIROUGH the goodness of God we arrived 1 m lyansas on the evening of the 23d., after a two week's journey. We all like it so far, having had fine weather. We are all well and hope you are the same. We shall be glad to have the Brethren visit this part of God's mord vineyard. Love to all. May the Good

From Roanoake, Ill.—Meetings still in progress,-four accessions to-day and prospects good for more. Meetings well attended. A man and his wife, aged seventy years, and two young girls were haptized to-day. Brother D. B. Gibson is conducting the exercises.

From Dunkirk, Ohio.-The saints at Engle Creek rejoice once more in the addition of another soul to the church by holy baptism. How calmly and hopefully the dear sister trusted her Master in yielding obelience to his commands May the Holy Spirit continue to strive that others may also trust their Savior in hopeful S. T. Sept. 26.

From Union Center, Ind .- Yesterday evening we held our Love-feast and truly a feast of love it was, and to-day we held an election for two deacons. John R. Miller and Daniel Whitehead were chosen. Daniel Neff was advanced to the office of bishop, and Alexander Miller to the second degree in the ministry. Within this week four were received by haptism in this district. May the Lord uphold us all in every good work. Blessed be his bely name.

F. Anglesiyer.

From Panora, Iowa,-At Dallas Center, Lovefeast two little girls just emerging from the morning of childhood, were baptized. A wise move. How easy, comparatively, to return to the Father's house before they have gone far in the ways of sin. The weather was fine and there was a very full attendance. About two hundred and forty communed. E. Eby, D. Price, and about twenty-five other ministers were present. Less than fifteen years ago we had our first feast, with only ten members, and no speaker within fifty miles. Only those who have jussed through the trial know the joy we feel. It is a foretaste of heaven.

J. D. Hai ghteddr.

From Elk Lick, Pa.-Cur Love-fenst pussed off pleasantly on the 20th, with four more added through haptism, making fourteen for this month. Brother Jonathan Kelso and I leave home Monday Oct. 6th, for Mountain Purk Home, Wernersville, Berks, Co., Pa., at which place all communications to as should be addressed white we remain there. Bro. Kelso's health has been much impured, and mine not fully restored, we go there assured that it is the place to have the vital powers restored. Wife and I just returned from our minual visit to our friends in W. Va. S. C. Krin. Sept 30.

From Ceylon, Ind.—Bro. Yount closed his series of meetings yesterday, and at the close of the services baptized eight. Among the nonber were two young brothers and three young sisters, the youngest being but twelve years old. Her parents opposed her going but she wept so latterly they relented and she was haptized. After the baptism and they had returned a short distance, her parents made application. when they again went to the water-side and, like their little daughter, were led into the flowing stream and took upon them the name of Christ. What a time of rejoicing! Surely the angels rejoice when sinners turn to God. "God works in mysterious ways," He sometimes procores the lambs to get the sheep to follow .-Three baptized last Wednesday, making eleven in one week. The work is just fully begun, and we have the assurance if some brother could be with us a short time many more would come into the fold of Christ. Brother Yount leaves to-day for another point in our district. May God be with him and bless his labors.

From Dunnings Creek, Pa.

Dear Brethren:-Y request, I will give a few of the many D kind feelings, and love and fears that were manifested before the parting of our beloved brother, C. S. Holsinger and his kind family. Had we not believed he was needed more in Illinois than here, we would not have consented to let him go. He gave the church his farewell address on the evening of the 14th of September to a large number of brethren friends and neighbors. At the close of the services it was a sad scene to see the people give the family tarewell. They accompanied us to our home where they spent Monday preparing to leave. Friends and neighbors were coming and going all day, and in the evening about forty were together, many bringing presents for them as tokens of love. At 9 o'clock they were all invited to come together to have a season of prayer, and sing some songs of Zion In the morning three spring-wagons drove up but they could not take all that wished to gi along to the Railroad, which was eleven miles distant, and at the station some more kind members and friends came to bid them farewell Nine of the crowd stepped on the train to uccompany them a short distance. In the company were C. S. Holsinger's old mother, over seventy years old, his only sister and his oldest brother with wife and three sons; and Levi Holsinger, (a nephew) and write, all clinging together as long as they could, but it was not long until we all had to take the parting hand.

HOW IT IS IN DENMARK.

BY ENOCH EICY.

we confined our remarks to a few of the astons in Denmark. In this we shall speak wre particularly of their religion, which is desmated, Lutherm. In form it very much reendles the service of the Episcopal church in America. It is controlled exclusively by the isomment. Prosts (as they are called) reexether positions, their fixed salaries, and wir respective orders pertaining to their sevvalcharges from the government, to which bey cling with scripulous tenacity, and in putual tyranny which is particularly peculiar other class. The buty are worully priest-ridthe and in their ignorance, have a great zeal or God, but not according to knowledge. As Cermany and many other European conuhas the government controls the priest, the Mest, the school teacher and the child; hence be clothren are rocked in the cradle of a State sharch hierarchy, fed and nourished by the mik drawn from the breasts of their sparitual authers, who, though they promise others lib-Whare themselves the children of landage ud corruption, their religion being a work at be head and not of the heart—a mere matter Hraming and not of conversion.

In order to give some when of the tenacity Wh which the people clang to their religious "sumg in the school, we here relate a circumance which came under cur notice while there Gertain man having conscientions simples in which he would be taught the art and access.]

heavy fine or imprisonment. While it is a fact a God bless you, they bend down their heads that we can never expect religious influence to govern our American Protestant schools to the same extent in consequence of the divided and corrupt state of Christendom, we nevertheless feel to say that it would be a great blessing to our country and an advantage to the church if all our school teachers possessed a true Christian character; from the simple fact that the school room and the family circle are inseperably connected—the one can always feel the effect of the other more or less, in a moral, intellectual, and even religious point of view, and from that consideration we would be pleased to see every school in the country taught by a true, faithful brother or sister; for just as the parent moulds the character of the child, so does the teacher the pupil.

From the above considerations, the difficulties which our dear ministering brethren in Denmark must labor under to establish successtully the true doctrine of the cross, can be more easily imagined than expressed. We think the 36 faithful standard-bearers of the truth, which have been saved and brought from the power of darkness and brought into the glorious light of the gospel in the short period of three and a half years, forever settle the question of the propriety of supporting the Damsh Mission.

Furthermore it should ever be remembered that to set up the standard of truth unywhere in America is nothing to be compared with a toreign mission, where not only blindness prevails to a much greater extent, but where facilities for preaching the gospel are much inferior, The State church has a sufficient number of houses for worship, but they cannot under any circumstances be obtained by dissenters who, are yet too f w and timited in circum-tances to build houses of worship for themselves; hence our dear brethren with all other dissenters must hold their meetings in private houses, (sometimes a public hall (which are generally small and inconveniently arranged for meeting pairposes. (They do not have groves for summer use). A tent would be a good service to them. Brother M. M. E. may truthfully say, the ditficulties of a missionary in that country are little understood by us who have not been there. My pen foils to describe. If our ministering brethren in Denmark could use Banlam's ass to go to their appointments it would be to their weary limbs what a cup of cold water is to the the thirsty soul.

My dear lacthren, when you start to meeting and are permitted to jumpento a splendid spring seated coach drawn by a pair of lively steeds, sailing along the road on "flowery beds of case," so to speak, soon to arrive at a good, large, comfortaldy scated and heated room to worship on, turnished with plenty of lights, and books to accumulate every desire, so much so that a great part of your congregation can indulge in bear blind youl lead the masses with a rigor and | sleep while you are speaking, soon to be aroused by the doxology. Services over, you are now met by half-dozen or more warm-hearted brethren and sisters pressing you to go with them with so much captivating enthresiasm that you herome perplexed to know how to decide. Soon we are in brother or sister A's parlor with sofas and rocking-chairs sufficient to accommodate all, while the sporkling diamonds of well fired up coal-stoves with many beautiful pictures on the wall to meet your gaze, and you are pleasantly entertained till by and by, say from one to three hours, the sisters come in with a red but smiling face indicating the hard task of preparing luxuates is now performed, and you are welcomed to partake. The day is spent pleasantly. the evening comes, and you are conducted to a comfortable room, to a benutiful clean hed decked with coverings of tapestiv will chaved works and line lines. Pros. 7: 16.

Now turn around and imagine you see our Brang war, refused to send his sun to school dear mini-tering frethren a Denmark take their stayes on loaned giving a farewell hiss to "Is of war. For this be expected to suffer a wife and children, the discrete class section:

That point of deep eespair; thus wemling their way, not knowing just where they are going, or how they will meet the close of the day, whether it will be a friend to take them in or an enemy to cast them off, but if received at all, to meet in a attle damp house, with but one little fire in one corner to warm by; soon to be invited to supper consisting of black, hard, rye bread, with perhaps a little cold meat, and sometimes butter, and when done cating, a cup of strong coffee, soon to be lit to a single bed, with scanly covering, and perhaps mother occupant, as they seldom have any spare beds. In the morning arise and say, Can I have a meeting at your house this evening? Answer, perhaps, yes, or no. If yes, he starts out, walks another day to invite people to inserting, evening comes the brother returns, weary and perhaps, discouraged, a half dozen assembled. He preaches, inquires about another appointment, perhaps be gets another invitation, and perhaps not, but renews his energies, lifts his head over all discouragements, perseveres, the seed is taking root, a few plants come up, the light is beginning to shine, numbers gather in now. Small rooms, few, if any seats, perhaps one light, people stand and listen for one hour attentively, after walking from two to eight imiles, and now, at least around Hjorring, the people that sat in darkness see a great light; thirty-six are there now, some of whom we know by personal acquaintance are shining lights. The little sheet edited by Brotner Hope is stealing a silent march all over Henmark, and has found its way over into Norway and Sweeden. The silent messenger is touching some of their hearts, and the Macedonian cry is heard from across the Eastern Sea, "Come over and help us." But who can respond? Our brethren cannot do all at home. O may the Lord send many labor ers into the great Scandinavian harvest field and may the united prayers of our entire. Brotherhood arise in behalf of the Danish Mission. and enter the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth, and may our hearts swell until our purse strings break, and we donate that which is required of us according that we have, and not according to that which we have not, and the Lord will add hrs blessing.

HE DIDN'T WANT TO HEAR IT.

I Edidu't want to hear a sermon on covetcoisness as it looked as though the preach er was begging money. And he should not preach on style and tashion, as the reposed neighbors were very tashronable, and would stay away from church. He didn't want to hear the preacher reprove people for lad conduct in church, especially the brethren's children, as it offended them and looked for rough He didn't want the preacher to say much about dancing and Sabbath breaking, as the young people would not come to shurch to hear the preaching. He didn't want anything said about Subbath Schools or massions, and no one should ask him for the poor, as he paid for what he wanted, and worked for his money and others could do the same. He didn't like to hear the preacher exhort too warmly, as it might bring some into the church before they were ready, and they ought tall back into the world. More than three or four sermons he did not want to hear in one place, as it would keep people away trem their work, and might loring a "let" into the church before they had counted the cost. He did not want a preacher to visit him that was not coolly in the "order" - hair, cont, vest, pants, and all—because it had too must worldty influence, and he did not want any one to book only as he did, as he disessed just right. He Ewould not go to a chorele where carpets were in the aisles; yet his own partor was spread with Brussels, and lace adorned the windows. He was one of the strictest of the strict, but where were his children? Out of Christ and they never heard their father pray. -Gospel Preacher,

DO YE EVEN SO TO THEM.

BY SILAS GILBERT.

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye oven so in them: for this is the law and the prophets." Matt. 7; 12.

MIIS Scripture meets us in many ways, and the observance of it will keep us walking in the humble pathway of Jesus. This terrible self of ours will have to be gathered up clean and put on the altar and offered up to God; if it is not, the enemy of our souls will hall us to sleep. As this command meets us almost daily we should give it much careful thought. Jesus says, "it is the law and the prophets." It meets us by having sick neighbors. If we were sickunable to help ourselves, what would we want our neighbors to do? Stay at home? No: we would want visits from them and a word of encouragement—their endeavors to make as comfortalile.

het us all do likewise-it meets us in our financial affairs. Do we buy and sell with our neighbors as we would they should with as for do we wait and search till we had some one in a financial embarrassment and then set about getting their property under value. The world has such cases, but we should set them a better example. While there are many in the storld that would do so, there are many that aculd he far from it.

Now we may stand in the way of sinners at we are not very careful on this point. The world is watching us and if they should see some some cases in the church, the Devil will use them as a luig-bear to keep good, mural men out of the church. Then we have the pour eruple, the poor widow, the orphan children. Do we ever get their situation fitted on ourselves? Think of the thermometer settling down below zero, their scanty clothes, their offen cold houses, their wood almost gone, what would we want? Surely, a more vivid testiantmy of love than "be ye warmed and filled." Such would be opportunities to lend to the Lord, and when we loan them we need not be afraid of the security, for we can get a hen on heaven

Our text meets us in our duties in the charch. We elect our ministers, we expect them for attend meeting, rain or cold. Do we do as we want them to do? What would we think of our ministers if they did not attend meeting more regular than some of the deacons and lany? Is there any excuse for us? I say not Since of our ministers have many hardships to encounter. Some are called away so much that they cannot carry on business successfully; so their income is very little.

Now would not a visible testimony of bearing one amother's burdens according to true o 2, be in harmony with our subject? Then we have ministers who are able to spend in the or all of their time and many are the cries to the over and hencus, for we are starting for spiritual bread. There is another opportunit. . . . till this Scripture. If you would be to it it stead, would you want the good minister of Gelto stay at home? Nay verily. Then we have churches that are abundantly able to send these that cannot go themselves, and for a paid to commence scuding them we need not 2005 some distant land. "WRITE THEM A LETTER TO-NIGHT."

ON'T go to the theatre, concert or ball. But stay in your room to-night; Deny yourself to the friends that call, And a good long letter write-Write to the sad old folks at home. Who sit when the day is done, With folded hands and downcast eyes, And think of the absent one.

Don't selfishly scribble, "Excuse my haste, I've searcely the time to write," Lest their brooding thoughts gowandering back To many a by-gone night-When they lost their needed sleep and rest, And every breath was a prayer That God would leave their delicate babe To their tender love and care.

Don't let them feel that you've no more need Of their love or counsel wise; For the heart grows strongly sensitive When age has dimmed the eyes— It might be well to let them believe You never forget them, quite: That you deem it a pleasure when far away, Long letters home to write.

Don't think that the young and giddy friends Who make your pastime gay, Have balf the auxious thought for you That the old folks have to-day. The duty of writing do not put off; Let sleep or pleasure wait, lest the letter for which they looked and longed Be a day or an hour too late.

For the sud old folks at home, With locks first turning white, Are longing to hear from the absent one Write them a letter to-night.

THE KINGSHIP AND KINGDOM OF CHRIST.

"Pilate suith to them, Shall I erneity your King? the chief priests answered, We have no king but Clester." John 19: 45.

MHERE are two great principles of interpretation of Bible truths, wlopted by Christian ministers—the spice itual and the literal. Those, or at least some of those who adopt the spiritual, reject the literal; and $vice\ rersa$. Both classes, in our equition, are wrong. The true plan is, to adopt and apply both principles of interpretation, according to the nature and tenure of the subject. The application of either principle, exclusively, lends directly and unavoidaldy to errors and absurdities.

Among the various errors into which strictly literal principle of Biblical incontained in the text, to wit, the denial of the royalty, or Kingship of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. This no king. time. It originated, as you perceive, with those ignorant and mulicious Jews, | dom. who accused Christ of being an imposblasphemy had him arrested and put on trial; first before Caiaphas, the high priest, and then Pontius Pilate, the Rosman governor of Judea. It was then and there, at the trial of Jesus Christ, that this no king and no kingdom doc-For when Pilate, who appears to have been a believer in the doctrine of the King-hip of Jesus of Nazareth, asked the Jews, "Shall I crucify your King?" they immediately replied, "We have no Ling, but Casar,'

Here then, we have the original and ent persons; we feel it to be our duty, ty of the sons of God nd wish, in accordance with our feelugs and sense of duty, to briefly examme and test this doctrine by the word of God; and by so doing, ascertain whether those who thus speak, speak and preach according to the oracles of

And now, in the performance of this duty, we shall endeavor, briefly, to show.

- I. What this no king and no king-DOM DOCTRINE 18.
- II. Examine and test it by the ORACLES OF GOD.
- HI. REFERENT, BY SHOWING THAT JESUS CHRIST IS KING, IN A TWO-FOLD SENSE, AND THAT HE HAS A TRIPLE, OR THREE FOLD KINGDOM.

According to this argument, we shall attempt to show,

I. What this no king and no kinds DOM DOCTRINE IS.

The advocates of this doctrine hold and that he has as yet no kingdom. They admit that he is both the Prophet and Priest of the Church, but that he has not yet entered upon his kingly office, and never will, till all his péople are converted, and all his enemies are destroyed. And this, they say, will not take place until he shall come again in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory, to raise the dead, to change his living saints, to destroy the world, to create a new heaven and a new earth, and then set up his everlasting kingdom. Then, say they, and not till then, will he receive and profess the kingdom, and be crowned King of his Church, and Lord of all. This, then, is an outline. or a brief sketch of the so-called no king and no kingdone doctrine.

Now is this doctrine in accordance with the teachings of the Bible?—or is it a new-fangled and man-made system?

II. This is the next question wi PROPOSE FOR EXAMINE ANICTRY, BY THE ORACLES OF GOD.

That Christ is no King, and that his kingdom is yet future, is argued,

 Риом инклумент от тик липм-KING AND KINGBOOL

The term king is defined to mean, the sovereign ruler of a kingdom; and the term kinoplam is explained to signify, a town, district, or country, governed by men have fallen, by the adoption of the a king, and implying five essential elements, viz: king, territory, capital, subterpretation, is the theory or doctrine jects and laws. Hence, then, the argument is, that Christ can as yet be no king, because he has as yet no country to govern; that is, he has no territory, doctring is here asserted for the first capital, subjects and laws, all of which are essential to the formation of a king-

Now, can this argument be met and ter, and upon the charge of treason and overthrown?—if not, it stands good; if it can, it falls, and must, of course, be given up. Let us try its validity, first by unology,

- 1. Christ is called Father. -- (1sa. 9). 6.) Father is a patronymic term, and commonly signifies the head of a family. trine was first conceived and proclaimed. $|\Lambda|$ family implies a wife, children, house, law and order. But Christ can be no! Father, according to this not king doc trine, because he has, as yet, no such so cial communion; or in other words, no wife, children, house law and order, in nn associated state.
- first proclamation of this singular doe bredeemer is one who rescues, or accountrue. And inasmuch as this old Jew | plishes redemption. Redemption in its | days, of things pertaining to the kingish doctrine is still believed and preach theological sense, implies sin, forfeithne dom of God, did he not commission them thou the King of the Jews! Jesus ans ed not by the Jews alone, but also by servitude, ransom, restoration. But the as his embassadors, to go into all the wered, "Thou sayest that I am a Kingsome professed ministers of Christ; and Christ of this no king doctrine is not a world and preach the gospel to every. To this end was I horn, and for this e-pecially because this doctrine has been Rodeemer, because sinners are not yet creature, teaching their to observe all cause came I into the world, that I should nequently and holdly proclaimed among delivered from the bondage of corrupt things whatsoever he had commanded! bear witness to the truth." John 18:37the churches of God, of late, by differe tion, and restored to the glorious liber and did he not command them, among | Messiah's claims to royalty were ful

3. Christ is styled a Shepherd. A shepherd is a keeper of a flock of sheep; and this keeping or tending of sheep. implies a fold, feeding and protection. But according to the no king doctrine, Christ cannot be a Shepherd, because he has no certain sheepfold, no pasture fields, and no place of defence.

 Christ is called a Physician. Λ physician signifies one who practices the healing art. The healing art implies patients, medicines, the administration of remedies, and the healing of diseases. But, this no king theory forbids that Christ should be a Physician. And why? Because the health of the daught er of his people is not yet recovered.

Now this may suffice to illustrate the fallacy of the argument that Christ is no by nature, God over all, he is also King king, and that he has no kingdom, simply because the constituents or elements of his kingdom are not yet completed. King over all gods."—(95: 3.) In Jer. and teach that Jesus Christ is no King, [This, we say, does not follow, and therefore the argument is fallacious. But, second, it is argued from positive joint texts. Let us test the validity of therefore, he is the sovereign ruler and this argument, by examining some of the strongest proof texts by which this doctrine is wont to be supported.

> $^{}My$ kingdom is not of this world." (John 18: 36.) This text is offered in evidence of the alleged doctrine. But does this prove that Christ is no king, and that he has no kingdom in this world? We think not. Christ said to his disciples, on a certain occasion, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Did he mean that they were not in the world? By no means. He merely meant that they were not like the world, even as he was not like the world. Aust so, when he said, "My kingdom is not of this world," he meant My kingdom is not like the world, but is a holy, spiritual and heavenly kingdom. "If," said he, "my kingdom were of (or like) the world," that is, carnal, and foun ded on the purse and the sword, and sustained by gandy conipage, battery rams and steal-clad armies, -- "then would my disciples fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence." This passage, then, is far from proving the no kingdom dogma. Again,

2.1 certain neddenam went into a far country, to receive for himself a king ilom," &c. −(Lake 19; 19.) – This -par able is also offered in proof of the doc trine under consideration. But when rightly understood, it will be seen that it proves no such thing, as they imagine, and that it lends not the least countenance to such an idea. The word kingdom in this parable denotes kingly authority, or an installation to the kingly office. The parable refers too well known custom in the Roman empire, at that time, which was this: When men, who by hereditary succession, or otherwise, acquired claims to revalty, or the government of a country, they were accustomed to visit Rome, to the invested with authority, by the emperor, and then return to administer their government.

Now, then, did not Christ go into a far country? did he not go into Paradise after his death on the cross? and did he not return again on the morning of the third day, saying, he had received all 2. Christ is called a Redeemer. A power in heaven and on earth: and after er speaking to his disciples for forty other things, to seek first, the kingdom, by understood and acknowledged, not of God? Here then, we have a literal fulmfilment of this parable, and a bonu, fide establishment of his spiritual and pre-millenial kingdom, in all its assen. tial parts and elements.

The points to be established, under this head, are as follows:

- 1. THAT CHRIST IS KING IN A TWO. FOLICSEMSE.
- 1. He is a King by nature. Being over all. Hence we read, in the Psalms, "The Lord is a great God; and a great emiah it is said, "The Lord is the true God; he is the living God, and an ever. lasting King."—(10: 10.) As God, King of the universe.
- 2. He is King by appaintment. The Lord Jehovah has said by the mouth of the royal Psalmist: "I have set my King upon my holy hill of Zion," (Psalms 2: (6.) The "holy hill of Zion," in this text, denotes the "Church of the living God. the pillar and ground of truth." Over this redeemed and sacramental host, Christ is the appointed King. Already under the Old Testament, he was repeatedly proclaimed and acknowledged as such. "I have set my King. , . . . mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts," &c. (Isa. 6: 5.) It is further said, "The Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Lawgiver, the Lord is our King: he will save us." (ch. 33; 22.)

Moreover, Christ is particularly set forth as the appointed and acknowledg. ed King of his Church and people, under the New Testamens dispensation, This might be strongly argued from the types and prophecies of the Old Testament. But waiving all this right and privilege, let us content ourselves in hearing a few gospel witnesses.

First, let us hear the magi, or wise men of the East. What is their testimo ny! What say they upon this subject! "Where is he that is horn. King of the dews!—for we have seen his star in the East, and are come to worship him."-(Matt. 2: 2.)

Next, let us hear the testimony of the disciples. What said Nathaniel? "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; Thou art the King of Israel." (John 1: 49.) What said the whole multitude of the disciples. at the descent of the Mount Olives! They all with one accord, and with uplifted voices, cried, caying, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven, and glory in the highest." (lanke 19: 38.) This text is a fulfilment of the prophecy of Zechariah, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion, shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold thy King cometh to thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt, the toal of an ass." (ch. 9: 9.)

Agair, let us hear the testimony of Christ himself, which he gave before Pontius Pilate, where, as the apostle says. he "witnessed a good confession." I Tim-(6:40) When Pilate asked him, "Art by his disciples, who hailed him as the cation and for humanity. It has king, but also by some of the leus; so that they said, he that maketh muself a king, is not Casar's friend." ln conclusion on this point, let us reand you of the testimony of the angel gil of the heavenly hosts, at the time four Savior's birth, and at his ascennon to heaven. At the time of his birth, he angel of the Lord came down and preared to the shepherds, while watch at their flocks by night, and proclaim-Ato them: "To you is born this day in he city of David, a Savior, who is Christ he LORD." (Luke 2: 11.) At the time Christ's ascension, the hosts of heaven agiled him as the King of Glory, saying: dift up your heads, O, ye gates, and he is lifted up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of Glory shall come in. Who this King of Glory? The Lord of nosts, he is the King of Glory." Psalms

From all this strong array of evidence, is undeniably clear and manifest, that thrist is King, as we have stated in a yn fold sense; viz: by nature and by Waimment.

EULOGY ON PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

BY PROF. W. E. LOCKARD.

ET no enviler say that we are at war Π with free schools. We have them. and because we love them we shall deal usparingly with whatever we think is Wrong or useless in them. We want to we them grow and spread and exert a till greater power for good in the future than they have done in the past; get we shall not hesitate to condemn the many faults that have grown up with bem, and become in a measure a part of their life. In doing this we expect wide violence to the feelings and proj | Epublic. It has done a grand work for ration of Independence, has opened the relear the track for young America," us home at last, 10% of made America the shrine for the oppress ed of all nations, the beacon light of lib erty to all people everywhere struggling to be free. To it we owe whatever of greatness we have achieved as a na tion. To it, enshrined in the hearts of the people, we owe our marvelous growth in science, in morals and in the social sen fiments. To it we owe our agricultural and commercial prosperity. To it we owe our liberty as a nation, our characfer as a people, the peace and security of our homes, the good will of liberty loving people everywhere, our own approv al and the favor of God,

Our free school system is able, in and of itself, to work out the problem of selfgovernment and the universal brother hood of man. No nation can long be free nor long deserve its freedom, without some system of general education. We see this fact illustrated in the past and present condition of the two sections of our own country. Here in the North where free schools have obtained, we find a sturdy growth of all the virtues; honest toil with honest recompense; a manly independence; a general respect for the rights of others; due regard, for law; a land of pleasant homes where white winged peace sits brooding over every door. Look at the South and mark the contrast. There, the very re verse of all this is and has been true, In a land where it was a crime, to teach the poor to read, what else could be ex pected? Slavery and free schools could not exist together, and therefore schools were not tolerated. There, the few always lorded it over the many. A general sense of dependence and insecurity always possessed the poor and lowly. The rich and educated rode roughshod over the illiterate poor, whose ignorance and poverty they themseleves had cansed. The rights of man, as man, had no place in their creeds, and even religion was press ed into service to support a monstrous crime.

It is safe to say that no such battle of the wrong against the right as exemplified in the late Rebellion, could have occurred had the free school system been there, as with us, woven into the very structure of their political economy. The free schools of the North-saved the nation in its time of peril. The school made it possible to eradicate slavery. It has been the conservator of peace and order, the turor to intelligent citizenship, the destroyer of caste and the promulgator of the gospel of fraternal love. It is the bulwark of our liberty, for it gives to our youth self defensive knowledgeand as long as that is afforded them American institutions are safe.

If with all its faults it has done so much in the past, what may we not predicate of its future, when freed from its worst faults, it is left free to work out thing new was received with raptarons its grand mission! "With its arrows of thought, winged by the fire of progress" it will triumph over wrong, superstition and oppression everywhere, and prepare the world for the millennium which is to come.

doors to the new era of grand humani tarian freedom and high impulses; noble conceptions and lofty deeds.

ORIGIN AND GROWTH. Our free school system originating while the country was yet new, was only cal culated to meet the wants of an agricultural people, battling with forests, wild beasts and Indians. Their course of study was very limited. They had none of the modern appliances for saving the people the necessity of thinking. Learn ing was not then made easy. They had not discovered the royal road to knowl edge in which the favored children of this generation are treading. The high school was a log house. The furnace was a huge tire place, and scholars took turns at lugging in "back logs" and "fire stick." Puncheon floors; benches made of split logs, without backs; long boards fastened to the wall for writing desks; teachers who were scarcely able to do the "sums" required of the scholars; no maps, charts, globes nor apparatus of any kind; these were the conditions under which our fathers and grandfathers received their schooling. And yet from those old log school houses went forth men, who, for vigor of mind, originality of thought and keemiess of analysis would put to the blush many of the graduates of our modern high schools and edleges.

And this is so as a direct result of the methods of teaching pursued then and now. Then the path to knowledge was a hard road to travel; now it is a way of pleasantness bestrewn with thoraless roses. Then the very difficulties encountered and overcome added rugged strength; near the facility with which knowledge may be acquired enervates the recipient and defeats the purposes of all education. We eat, but do not digest. Our mental pabadum is adminis tered in much the same way in which turkeys are fattened in France, viz: by our instrument fashioned like a sausage stuffing machine, so that willing or un willing the turkeys' crops are filled.

Then, while their limited facilities circumscribed the curreiglum of study, they more fully mastered what they undertook to do, and thus made the subsequent acquisition of knowledge comparatively easy. But as the forests were cleared away and machinery began to supply in a large measure the want of muscle, it was felt by many educators that some advance might properly be made, both in the extent of the course of study and in methods of teaching.

The advance once begun, conservatism was approoted. Old methods were laid aside because they were old. The age began to pride itself on its advancement and claimed to be in a peculiar sense, the age of progress. Everything that was old was interdicted while everydelight. Every statesman had his planfor a model government. No crazy brained reformer met with a rebuff without calling to mind the trials of Columbus and Gableo, and consoling himself with the reflection that all great men have been treated in the same shameful manner by an ignorant and unsympathizing world. His supposed ill treatment called to his side suporters, sympathizers and followers, and forthwith his theories began to grow. We need not look far for instances in support of this statement. They are familiar to all students of history. Opposition and persecution will givelife and growth and vigor to the most pernicious of causes. We say persecution advisedly, for violent measures in all time, have failed to suppress ideas. In the language of Emerson-"The highest glory of human nature is to love right better than life, and to obey the dictates of conscience at gyery conceivable hazard. Truth, when uttered from the stake, or on the scaffold, becomes absolutely irresistable; and even falsehood, when scaled with blood, or strengthened by opposition, acquires, not unfrequently, for a time, an irrepressible power." And so, betwixt these two causes—the lack of opposition to change for fear of standing in the way of real progress, on the one hand, and a stubborn opposition to all change, on the other, an opposition, too, not always conducted with candor and fairness and bordering on persecution sometimes -our school system stands where it does, and as it does to-day-magnificent in its proportions containing much of good in its composition, and also some evil grand and powerful in its means of doing good, and also, to a certain extent exercising a pernicious influence over the minds and lives of those nurtured under its care. Divesting ourselves, therefore, of all prejudice, let us calmly and reasonably examine the conduct of our public schools and see wherein they overreach their purpose, that we may intelligently set to work to supply deficiencies and lop off superfinities.

NO TIME.

MHERE are persons who have no time to read the Bible, no time to pray, no time to serve the Lord. They remind one of that old shoemaker who. commencing his work in the morning was in such haste that he had no thus to put a bristol on his waxed end. The result was he toiled long and accomplished nothing. There is a story of a soldier pursued by his enemies who was seen mending the girth strap of his saddle while the foe was in sight. He has hored diligently, but yet carefully, until at last the work was done, and then. springing into his saddle he fled on the wings of the wind. Had he in his baste sought to escape without mending the girth strap, he would surely have been evertaken and destroyed. So in this world's care and business, we have no time to lose, but we have time to pass. prayer and provender binder no tam's journey. reminding. Paul had walked holily among his brethren. Not an impure act could be charged to him whilst in the church at Thessalonica. It was a fact that he behaved himself justly while there; and more, he behaved unblamably This he could say and did without boasting. He spake as one that dared to please God who "trieth our hearts," No "flattering" words were used while among them, nor "a cloak of covetousnes." Still more, he did not seek glory of men, nor of his brethren. "But we were gentle among you," is his declaration, and he said it without boasting. Were the apostle to visit some of us, and after his departure write us that he was gentle among us, what would be our first expression? Would we say Paul is boasting? Would we say he is proud; puffed up?. Perhaps. Well, but Paul was an apostle. therefore could thus speak and write. Admitted; but was he more than a child of God? Was he not dwelling in a fleshly temple, subject to all the ills and weaknesses of a corrupt body as we are? Was he not enabled to say he behaved unblamably among his brethren by the some means that we are enabled to behave? When he obeyed God from the heart, he hehaved unblamably. When he preached, in all gentleness, the word of God, he also behaved unblaumbly.

That minister who shows not to preach the Word is behaving in the house of God. That minister who lives holdy and justly, is behaving unblamably. These two words, holiness and justice embrace the whole of a successful Christinn life. It is not questioned whether the min who is holy will be saved; in this we all are rate, even as the Father and Son are one. The man who is living justly is not regarded as a dangerous man in society. He is not shunned in the markets, on the streets, and among his neighbors. Of no, he is not charged with misercollect. His heart is warm and tender. He does not set himself up as a judge in Israel, but labors with the church, with all long-suffering to maintain its parity and simplicity. He is not "lording" over God's people, neither is he apologizing for rnttles, thornces, worldly fashion and superfluity. When from home he is not astomed of his brethren and sisters; nor is he troubled about his plain clothes. He knows how to behave, hence behave . Pity and pray for those who are more concerned for fashion and fiftly fucre than for holiness, froth, and rightronsness

Why do frouldes arrow. Because somebody does not behave in the house of God. Why must quiet and peaceably disposed members sit all day long and listen to things that should not even be named among those who believe because somehody misbehaved? Why are committees called a long distance, money, fime and mind expended? Because some body is not unblamable-simplicity has not behaved. How often we forget that "it is better to sufter wrong than to do wrong," It is wrong to strive and contend from day to day about a trivial matter. and at last stop just where we began; or, perhops, find ourselves away from the fellow-dop of our brethren. All this comes of not Jahorring ourselves.

How many of us, when a brother nusbehaves go about to restore him "in the spail of meckness?" Do we reason thus, "Now Bro. B. his erred, and whatever we do noist be done for his good, and the parity of the charely We guty you Bro. B ..., and desire you to be saved from your error. O come and walk with us! Be patient, be bomble, and we will all lafor together as dear children. Will you turn again to God as in former days, and enjoy the ldessings of your Father." Is this Iron we talk to the ermig? Or do we say in our hearts, "Bro, B — s, has trespossed, and as he has some talent and might excel not, or my husload, or my fleshly brother, or my father, i.e. the case may be) I will vote to expel hour year I will do all I can be put to be down so low that se can hever rise in the albertions of others, in short Pil do all I can to degrade and disgrave teim. IN HEAVENLY PLACES.

 $D_{EAR}|B_{RETHREN}|_{AT}|Work: \rightarrow$

CHNCE our last communication to you we have been sitting with our brethren and sisters in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. After the Neosho County Feast the meetings were continued in a school-house several evenings. and about the time that some were almost fully persuaded, we were obliged to leave. How we enjoyed the association of those of "like precious finth" at this place! Bro. Sidney Hodgden is the Elder, and is assisted by Bro. A. J. Solomon in the ministry. More laborers are needed at this place, and we utter the united sentiment of the church in Neosho County, when we say that an active, zealous minister would receive a grand-welcome among them if he were to locate in that fruitful field.

On Thursday night, Oct. 2nd we were in Chetopa with S. M. Burket, Brethren David Bare and A. J. Hixson who had been spending several days in looking over Labette County. They expressed themselves as being well pleased with the appearance of things in general. An appointment had been made for us somewhere west of Chetopa, but by some misunderstanding did not reach the place. We returned to Parsons on Friday afternoon, where we remained until Safurday, the 4th, when we went to Paint Creek Church, Bourbon Co. This church held its Feast Sept. 30th. Brethren Neher. Edgecomb, and Hess were present to assist. Three loved ones were received by baptism during the meetings. After the Communion, Bro. Edgecomb remained and held meetings during the week, until the writer arrived on Saturday evening. When we assembled at the large school-house near John Bolinger's and met many old friends and associates from Carroll Co., Ill., we concluded that this was also a heavenly place. An attentive audience on Satnrdav evening. Met on Sunday at 11 A. M. and notwithstanding another society had a meeting in a church near by, the school-house was densely croweded, and a number stood at the doors and windows attentively listening. After meeting many went down to the stream to witness the laptism of one dear soul who holdly came out and confessed Jesus.

At 4 P. M. met to have a talk with children. A heavenly place again! The children looked so pleasant, belowed so well that we concluded that their little hearts were warm for the right. gen to the truth and would show in the future how useful they may be it properly taught. The older ones enjoyed the occasion no less than the younger ones. What father or mother will represente partake of the joys, which are always found in heavenly places? None are so cold and hard-hearted that they cannot be touch a with the love of off-pring. How carefully we should guard the interests of the young! Persomally I feel my negligence is that respect, but pray God to grant goace for the future.

Met again at 7:30 for public worship. Bro Martin Neber led in the services, drawing his conclusions from the remarks of the Philippian jailor, "What must I do to be saved?". Neher is a plain speaker, uses, plant woods, and plain reasoning, all of which we admire. His co-laborer, Bro. i. Igecomb is no less at home in the ministry. The people need common cense reasoning austead of the cold, distant and onsympathetic. No minister is real to talk roughly and absordly to the people, but to and letter to pet. This is God's power unto saivateur, anything else is not God' power and no storesoft in failure.

When the services were over many came for ward and another to Jens threwalt. THE LANARK CHURCH

THE Primitive Christian of 7th instant contams the following:

"A correspondent of the New Jerusalem Messenger makes the following remarks about Lanark and our people there:

It is a town of 1,200 inhabitants, surrounded by a rich farming country. A peculiar religious sect called 'Dunkards,' Hourish here, They make good citizens, sottle all their own disputes, without recourse to law, take care of their own poor, and dress exceedingly plain. The men wear broad-brimmed hats, and coats of a singular cut. The women wear slat sun-bonnets in all weather, and dress in calcos. They have little or no association with the world. They neither vote nor go to war. The church in which they worship must be plain, not richly furnished or showy. No steeple is allowed on the top. They longht a church in the neighbrhood of the batherans that had a 'stee-They took it down ere they would worship in it. The preachers are not paid, and some say their sermons are not worth paying tor. They are generally thrifty farmers, and well-to-do in the world, we say,

"How strange it is that the coat generally worn by our brethren should be considered a singular cut, when there is nothing singular about it. Indeed, there is nothing strange about it, as it is the most common cut that has been worn in America for the last hundred years, and yet it is so 'singular.' Our brethren wear a ery common cut, but the fashionable world do wear some very 'singular' culs, but they are not so considered because they are ashionable. Style has much to do in making hing- look 'unsingular.' As to our sisters out there wearing 'slat sun-bonnets' and 'dressing in caheos, we are not quite sure that the corrrespondent is right. Possibly some of them ise a more costly material for 'Sunday dresses' at least. But as to our Western brethren having no 'association with the rest of the world." is news to as, as we were told they are quite ociable, and indeed we found them so away from home, especially our publishing brethren at Lanark. We hope they will rise to explain as it will never do for them to have a world of their own out there,

"We dare say that the views of this correscondent in regard to our people are about as singular as the cut of our coats, but it does not make a particle of difference to us, as we are not the least ash uned of such singularity, exand corr attributed none sociable qualities,

The correspondent to the Messenger is about correct. However, few of the sisters wear "slat un bonnets," not because they are too proud a do so, but because such bonnets are difficult ckeep in order. Many of the sisters-some if the wealthiest-do wear calico dresses to church on Sunday. They do not insist in word hat others shall do so, but they show by practice what their preference is. They teach by example rather than procept. Indeed we have neva heard our very plainest sisters say anything about dress, not that we would say they never mave; but from this we take it for granted that they do not make it a hobby to paralle whenever an opportunity is presented. Some person-think that to live in town or become rich resure to make one dressy, but any one acmainted with the Lanark Church can see the talsity of that notion. We have been here over ayear and have not yet heard in church a complaint about dress.

The brethren and sisters here are as sohade as in most places. By some they may seem hard to get acquainted with. Our ministers frequently remind us that we should be courteous and sociable to all we meet, and a word of welcome is always given any who fayor our incelings with their presence.

Our house for worship is enclosed by a good force; and nice evergrees and other ornamesaltrees are growing in the yard. The house is very plane, yet it is neat, constantable, welllighted, as I the floor is kept sermoileasly clean. Our brothren and sisters think heaven, to be be onliked, want be shown, and so they try to kerp thracely should houses.

The slin on our preaching falls to the say 'sermons are not worth paying for." The Lan J. Church does not hey sermous with · . . . 11.

NUMBER XXVI.

[From the "Thristisu Standard" by special Arrangement,]

TELL, the Caliph Omar, to whom Jerusalem surrendered, cleared away the rub bish and filth about this holy rock, and built over it a dome, thus making it a place of prayef. Several of his successors enlarged upon and improved his work, until it grew into what is now improperly called the Mosque of Omar. But it is not a Mosque, and its true name is, The Dome of the Rock. A Christian Church had been built at the south-western corner of the old temple court: this was turned into a mosque, and bears the name El Aksa.

The Dome of the Rock is an octagonal structure, surmounted by the handsomest dome. I suppose, in the world-handsome, not in its ornamentation, either outside or inside, but in its form above. The spring with which it leaves the drum on which it sits, and the peculiar taper with which it approaches its crescent-crowded apex, are inimitable. 1 will not here attempt a description of it, or of the building which supports it. Suffice it to say that the building has no significance except as a support to the dome, and the dome none except as a cover to the sacred rock. The inside diameter of the dome at its base, is 63 feet, and this is but little more longer than the longest distance across the rock.

Name of the writers whose books I have read, saw this rock uncovered. For centuries it was kept continually overhung by a emopy of the gichest silk, the gift of the Sultan. . Sin e the last of these were out, the rock has been uncovered. I suppose that the present poverty of the Turkish government, together with the general indifference now prevalent among Mahammedans in regard to their sacred places, has caused the neglect to supply a new canopy. We were allowed to examine the rock at our leisure, but not to clumb over the wooden partition, about five feet high, which surrounds it. It is a part of the natural rock of the hill-top, len projecting when the surface all around if was leveled. It has the rough and irregular shape of a natural rock, showing signs of cutting on only the western side. It is about six feet high at the highest point, and at lowest, about one fout. It extends about 52 feet from north to south, and about 35 from east to west. Under its south-east corner there is an opening, through which a flight of steps leads into an artificial envern, about 20 feet in diameter and S feet high. A circular hole, two feet nine inches in diameter, is cut through the rock above into the top of this cavern; and nearly under this hole there is a hole of nearly the same size in the floor of the cavern, which is covered by a shale of markle nicely fitted into if. spirits; and good Mohammedans can sometimes hour the voices of their departed friends speaking to them through the slab. This slab is not to be removed until the day of judgment. so we had not the privilege of looking under

This curious rock, thus left above the surface, where all else was carefully leveled, thus supplied with a cavern beneath it, an opening from its top into this cavern, and an opening from the cavern floor into some other receptacle beneath it; a rock so strangely revered by the Mohammedans from the beginning of their history, has been an object of much thought and speculation among Christian archaeologists. The most prevalent opinion among those who have formed a definite opinion, is, that it is the very rock on which Isaac was offered; that it shool within the threshing-floor of Araaunh; that David offered his sacrifice on it; that Solomon, on account of this preyings sacred use. left it projecting when he leveled the mountsin's top; that he nuclesed as least a portion of it within his great after of briss, which was (a) feet square; that the hole drilled through its top into the cavera, and the one from the shoor of the cavern into a receptable below, were intended to allow the blood of the victims to flow through and into an underground channel, and thence into the valley of the kodron. To my tient history, both sacred and profanc, is silent, the strangest people that ever lived, at regard to it.

Around the Dome of the Rock is a level space, paved with smooth slabs of limestone, nearly rectangular in shape, and extending 537 feet from north to south, by 460 feet east to west, measured through the middle. It lies about 70 feet bigher than the surrounding area, and is reached by two flights of steps on every side. Scattered about over this platform are numerous praying places, cupolas and pulpits, which I can not stop to describe. The Dome stands nearer the southern end of the platform than the northern, and nearer the western than the eastern. I suppose that this platform corresponds very closely to the "Court of the Jews," in the temple.

The entire area outside of the platform, and within the inclosing walls, is about 35 acres in exteat, and about 1,500 feet long, by about 1,-000 in width. It, like the platform, lacks a litthe of being rectangular, its eastern side being a little longer than the western, and the northern than the southern. The surface is nearly level everywhere, except at the north-eastern part, where it is uneven, and where it is also lower than elsewhere. In the southern part there are half a dozen cypress trees of rather a ragged appearance, and two or three dozen olives, of still worse appearance. Weeds are allowed to grow everywhere except where the tramping of feet keeps them down, and grass grows up between the stones in the pavement of the platform. The Mosque and the Dome are both too sacred for any but bare or slippered feet to tread (they allowed us to wear our slippers), but boys were playing ball in the large portico of the Mosque. The entire area is a place of prayer; but we saw more persons gadding about and laughing and talking, than we did praying. Everything visible about the place has an air of neglect and decay. This is true also of everything Mohammedan that we have seen, both in Palestine and in Egypt. The system, with all that belongs to it, is crumbling and ready

The wall around the Haram, as the Arabs call the temple area, is in most places not more than ten feet higher than the surface on the inside, though it is from 40 to nearly 80 feet above the surface on the outside. The northern wall, near the north-west corner, is partly the natural rock, which was originally higher here than the level to which the area was reduced, and partly the wall of Turkish barracks and Governor's house. The chief part of the western wall constitutes the castern wall of houses that are built against it, and the upper stories of these houses stand above it, with their windows looking into the area. Along the southern part of fins wall, the Tyropseon Valley is not so much filled up as elsewhere, and here is seen, near the ground, same of the original wall built by Solomon, or at least some This last hole, according to Mohammedan be- of the large stones which he used. Here is the hef, is the entrance into the place of departed | Jewish wailing place, where the Jews meet every Friday afternoon to bewail the loss of their temple. We visited the spot on the 18th of April, at half joist four in the afternoon. and found the space, which is 90 feet long and 11 feet wide, full of Jewish men and women, the women predominating. Some were standing, some were sitting on the ground, many were leaning their foreheads against the auient stones, and were rewling aloud trom the books in which their lanentations are printed. I copy a brief specimen of the lamentations:

> "For the palace that her desolute, we sit in subtade and roomin.

"For the pulace that is destroyed, we sil, etc.

"For the walls that are overthrown, we sit, etc. "For our majesty that is dejouded, we sit, etc.

"Por our great who he dead, we sit, etc.

"For our pregions stones that are formed, we sit,

"For our priests what have stumbled, we sit,"

As I looked around upon the mourners, I saw many who gave evidence of the deepost feeling. Tears flowed down their cheeks in streams; they read with booken interance, and occasionally one wept aloud. I could not refrom from sympathy, and I mentally exclaimed. Poor people, I pity you, and gladly would I hope for your consolation; but all of your pray ers are in vain. You reject the only One through whem you can come to trol, and your prayers will not be heard much you form to thim. I own mind this theory appears altogether plans- left the place with a sad heart, and was led to this, and I know of no reason, for and accepts, renewed reflection on the strange past, the stransing it, save its want of history at support. CHROWL. 4 : 2 menn?

Will some one please explain the 5th and 6th verses of the 6th chapter of Revelations? It reads as follows: "And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. -And I behold, and lo, a black horse; and he that sation him had a pair of balances in his hand. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine."

As the numbers seventy, forty, and three are very often in Scripture, can any brother, or sister tell me through the BRETHERN AT WORK how often these numbers are in the Holy Bible? And have they any particular sacred meaning?

QUERY ANSWERED.

Will some one please explain Matt. 11: 11. In particular we would like to know who is the least, and why called the least in the kingdom of heav-JESTINA MILLEIL

IM E understand the first part of this verse Y to teach that of all the prophets and teachers that came before, there was none greater than John the Baptist; not that he was a better or wiser man than any other, but the dignity and importance of his mission; for he proclaimed the kingdom of heaven was at hand or about to appear. He was havered above all prophets before him in that he had the privilege of introducing the long looked for Messiah, the Son of God to the world. Jesus tells us in Matt. 5: 19, "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven." Do you ask in what sense can he that is least in the kingdone be greater than John the Baptist? In the same sonce that John is greater than those that were before him; for the prophets of old could only teach Christ in the far future, whilst lolin could proclaim the advent of the Messiah, and that he was about to enter upon his work of redemption, but he that is least in the kingdom or Christian age, can teach that Christ has not come but has completed the work of redemption—had been offered as the great sm-offaring for the whole world -went down into the grave and rose triumphant the third dayascended up to heaven and is now seaded on the right hand of his Father to intercede for us, and that God accepted the offering and sentthe Holy Ghost or Conforter as an evidence of his acceptance and to guide us into all truth. and that whosever believeth on him and is idedient to the requirements of the gospel, shall R. QUESTIONS ON TRINE IMMER-SION.

BY PETER WINEBRENNIE.

MRST. Lask our Tunker Brethren to give us one example or trine bardism in the New Testament. There are now,

2. Give one preced or command for frime immersion. Nowhere does it say "dip three tim - for one baptism."

3. Why do you say, when you baptize, baptize you in the name of the Father, and I haptize you in the name of the Son, and then say that the candidate is not baptized notil the third dip is completed? Why tell two nntruths before you arrive at what you call truth?

4. Why don't you use the ceremony, in haptism, just as it is recorded in Matthew? Why add words to it? Why put words into the mouth of Christ Jesus? Did he not understand what he was saying? or, did he need your wisdom to add to his word?, Beware.

5. Your adding words to the commission certainly proves that your doctrine on haptism is not contained in it as it stands in the word, does it not?

6, Your trine haptism not being contained in the Bible, neither in precept nor example, then why do you condemn all who differ from you? Remember Christ will judge all.

REPLY TO THE ABOVE.

Deav Friend:—

1. I think you must have been very inattentive while reading the New Testament, or you certainly would have found some example of trine baptism. All baptisms administered by the apostles, after the commission was given. were administered in accordance with the commission. They either administered baptism in accordance with the commission, or else they were disobedient, were they not? The commission teaches nothing but trine haptism.

2. Have you been preaching all this time without having read the commission? If you have please turn to it now and learn that no one is authorized to bartize any other way than, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Here then, all who are authorized to baptize, are authorized to haptize three times for one baptism; or if baptize means to dip they are authorized to dip three times for one dipping.

3. Tunkers as you call them, never use the language you charge them with. Hence this needs no reply. They don't tell the two untruths you charge them with neither, but you do that yourself. You tell your cambilate that you will haptize him in the name of the Father, but you don't do it. After this you tell him that you will imptize him in the name of the Son, but you don't do that either. It is you, then, who tells the two untruths instead of the Tunkers, is it not?

4. Those among us, who are authorized to bapfize, do use the ceremony as given in Matt. Hence this needs no reply.

5. This has been answered in my reply to your 3rd and 4th, and need not be repeated, 6. The first part of this question has been answered in my reply to your 1st and 2nd.

Hence I need only say that we condemn no one. The word of God condemns the disohedient. All that we do is to joint out the manner to which men and women may disobey God's word; and although we may see them disobey that word, we do not condomn them, but are willing to aid them by pointing to single immersion and every other invention of man as dangerous perversions of the teachings of Christ. If you charge us with condemning others may not we, with equal propriety consider the last word in your 4th question an insimulation of condemnation? Those this reply may prove satisfactory. If otherwise please let me know in what particular and I will write E. UMBAUGH.

WINEBRENNERS RETORT.

Dear Brother:- Not one question have you answered; you simply beg the question, and deny that you condemn others while you must know that you fellowship none but your trine immersionists. No my brother there is no trine immersion in the Testament. You can show none. Why did you not?

P. WINEGGENNER.

REPLY.

Their Friend.—You say I have not answered om of your questions. If your assection is true you are right, but if anything more than a man's assertion is requed to establish a fact. you are wrong. You say I beg the question, Please explain how? You say that I dony that we condemn others. I do dony this. Should we fellowship any but those who obey the teachings of Christ and his apostles? You say there is no trine numersion in the Testament, I told you, that all the baptisms administered after the commission was given, were administered in accordance with the commission. You can readily infer from say answer to your Brd question, and also from Christ's commission. that where any of the aposties said, "I baptize you in the name of the Father' &c , they either did so or were disobelent. Now it the apostles could not say and not do, for instead of doing what they said they would, say they will do the same thing in another mame, without being disobedient, we who live in the present age cannot do so without being d'sobedient. Can we? If so please fell why we have more liberly in this respect than the ap office?

Those who go about doing good are doing as Jesus did, and, although their humble work may not affirmed the notice of the great, God will recognize it as done unto Hom.

"I have been a member of your church for thirty years," said an elderly Uhristian to his pastor, "and when I was laid by with sickness for a week or two, only one or two came to visit me. I was shamefully neglected," "My friend," said the pastor, "in all those thirty years how many sick have you visited?" "Oh," he replied, "it never struck me in that light." and so many consider only the relation of their brethren to them, and not their own relation to others.

PEACE AND UNITY.

BY ANNIE F. HARRISON.

THESE two little words large in them vol-1 nmes of meaning. We will not attempt to define them in all their various significations, but we realize that in them is conveyed the duty of our lives.

When we look around and see instead of peace, strife; in the place of unity, discord; it saddens our hearts and brings deep regret to our minds. To be at peace and dwell in unity is our duty, but it does not stop there. Not only are we to hive in pence and unity, but we are to use our whole influence to bring peace to others. "Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God," What a blessed promise, to be a child of the living God; to be adopted into his family.

YE OLDEN TYME.

T was over 2000 years ago, even in the year 1 4646, that Dr. Samuel Whiting was a minister in Lyon, Mass. At that time one Obadinh Turner did keep his journal and did write therein as followeth:

*1646, June ye 3d: Allen Crydges hath bm } chose to wake ye sleepers in meeting, and being much proud of his place, must need have a lox taile fixed to ye end of a long staff wherewith ve may brosh ye faces of them yt will have naps in time of abscourse; likewise a sharp thorne wherewith he may prick such as be moste sounde.

"On ye last bord his day, as he strufted about ye meeting house, he dal spy Mr. Tombus sleeping with much comforte, his head kept steadie by being in ye corner, and his hand grasping ye rail. And soe, spying, Allen did quicklie thrust his staff belond Dame Rallond. and give him a grievious prick upon ye hand, Whereupon Mr. Tombus did spring up much shove ye floor, and with terrible force strike his hand against ye wall, and also to ye great wonder of all, prophambe exclaim in a lond your, "Cays the woodchuck," he dreaming as it seemed vt a woodebuck had served and bit his hand. But on comeing to know where he was, and ye great scandall be had committed, he seemed much absched, but did not speake. And I think he will not soon againe go to sleepe in meeting. Te women may sometimes sleepie, and none know it by reason of their enurmonbonnets. Mr. Whiting does pleasantly say yt from ye pulpit be doth seem to be preaching to stack- of straw, with men jotting here and ther among them."

QUIET LIVES.

MIRIST'S lowly, quiet workers unconsciously bless the world. They come out every morning from the presence of God, and go to their business or their household work. And all day long as they toil they drop gentle words from their lips, and scatter little seeds of kindness about them, and to-morrow flowers from the garden of God spring up in the dusty streets of earth, and along the hard paths of toil on which their feet tread. More than once in the Scripture the lives of God's people in this world are compared in their influence to the dew .-There may be other points of analogy, but specially noteworthy is the quiet manner in which the dew performs its ministry. It falls silently and imperceptibly. It makes no noise. No one hears it dropping. It choses the darkness of the night when men are sleeping, and when no man can witness its heantiful work. It covers the leaves with clusters of pearls. It stenly into the bosom of the flowers, and leaves n new cupful of sweetness there. It pours itself. lown among the roots of the grasses and tender herbs and plants. And in the morning there is fresh beauty everywhere. The fields look greener, the gardens are more tragmut,-All life glows and sparkles with a new splendor. And is there no lesson here as to the manner. in which we should seek to do good in this world? Should we not strive to have our influence felt rather than to be seen or heard? Should we not scatter ble-sing so silently and so secretly that no one shall know what hand drapped them? The whole spirit of the Gospel teaches this, "When then doest thy alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth, that thy alms may be in secret." We are not to seek the priose of men. We are not to do good to receive reward from men. We are not to sound trumpets or announce our good deeds from the housetops—Schoted.

SINGING FOR JESUS.

BY TEATL BEPROGLE.

ONE evening as I was sitting in the twilight musing over my day's work, little Emma poshed up a chair and took a soat beside me.-After sitting there quietly and thoughtfully awhile, she said to uie. "Auntie, the birds were in the tree to-day singing for Jesus." I replied, were they? senreely thinking of what I was saving, when she continued, (referring to her little sisters) we sing for desus, too.

These little girls had been in the habit of taking a hymn book or a note book, and retiring to some secluded spot to hold their little concerts. We never objected to it, lint we had not thought of it that they were really singing for Jesus. This opened our eyes and we concluded to encourage them in all their make-believe services. – We have known parents to object to their children holding such meetings because they thought it was a lead sign. Our parents thought it was a sign for a funeral. This is only a foolish notion. It is no bud sign at all, it is only a sign, that the clothren are drawn upward by some unseen cord of Divine love. Let the children play going to meeting, and let them sing as much as they please. Give them your Bibles, your hymn books and your note books, let them wear the dust off even if they do fear them a little. It will pay you to get new ones occasionally. He who has said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for ad such is the kingdom of heaven," is an doubt well pleased with the offerings. of their innocent, little hearts. He who said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there will I be in the mulst of them," will He not be in the midst of these little ones. to guide and bless them?

The spot where children hold their meetings is hallowed ground, for surely, the Unseen Dr. vine Presence is there. Let the children sing for Jesus, even though they may not know a single note or a verse. desus will understand them, and you can soon teach them a few yerses, if you will try Suffer the little children to sing for Jesus and torbid them not.

"Who shall sing if not the children? Did not Jesus die for them? May they not, with other jewels, Sparkle in his dudence

Why to them were voices given-Bird-like voices, sweet and clear? Why, unless the song of heaven They begin to practice here?

"Oh" they cannot sing too early; Fathers, stand not in their way: Birds do sing while day is locaking— Tell me, then, why should not thev?" $Woodlary, P\sigma_c$

CONTENTMENT.

BY DANIEL RESIGRA.

YONTENTMENT is a treasure that is dug U after by all classes of people; by the poor as well as the rich, the peasant as well as the nobleman. But it is like entering into the Kingdom of heaven, though sought for by many, yet found by but few. All desire it, and all seek it, but seeking it where it does not exist, it is of course sought for in vain. How vain, and laden with perplexities, is the delusion of seeking it in riches, which often take wings and fly away," and which, in the best, are only a head full of cares and a heart full of desires and auxieties. Are those who are rich in the goods of this world contented? Are they satisfied with what they possess? When they have two farms will they not covet the third? When they possess their ten thousands, will they not covetonsly grasp and miserly and niggardly hoard to reach their hundreds of thousands? Can they sleep so sweetly on their soft and downy beds as did Jacob with a stone for a pillow? Are their consciences not haunted by the guilt of having "kept back by fraud the hire of the laborers" because their "cries are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth?" Are their souls not turmented; their sleep not disturbed by the niblding little toxes of," Where can I invest my hoardings, so that they may not be lost? Where can I insure them so that neither man nor God can deprive me of them. Those who can answer all these questions in the negative and are contenture the exception. Equally vain is the delision of seeking contentment in beauty of person and worldly pleasures, for like the beautiful flowers of the grass it shall wither and pass away.

But is contentment not to be found in fame and honor? How soul-termenting the delusion? What is fame?

of one is for a slow decay Aven these shall pass toway.

And in regard to finding contentment in honor, it is the same as seeking it in wealth and riches. the more a person finds the more he wants, and so is never contented into satisfied. A person serking honor will soon not be satisfied with that which he receives according to his welldoing, so he begins to rob it from his neighbors. He begins to covet all the honor, not willingly permitting any one else to receive any. When he sees some one whom he estimates as being inferior to him, receive honor, he envice him. When he hears the virgins sing, "David has slain his ten thousands, and Saul his thousands," the Sants are aroused to jealousy against the Davids, persecuting them, speaking evil of them, whetting "their tongue like a sword, and bending their bows to shout their arrows, even bitter words," -Psalms 64: 1, trying to exalt themselves by attempting to debase others. But such envious, grudging, honor-covetors can no more be happy and contented than was king Smil the Benjamite.

No, true contentment is not found in anything that is transitory. It requires for its toundation something that is immutable, and is in its nature pure and holy, and for such foundation one seeks in vain but in the Holy Trin ity. Who could not rest and be content in the faith of his being the son or daughter of the Almighty, omniscient and merciful God, who protects and cases for his children as we do for the apple of our eyes? Truly, multinching faith in God and the menus of Jesus, the spotless tamb, and the conscious indwelling of the Holy Spirit, the comforter, must render a soul happy and contented. Faith that does not reach to youder starry heavens to grasp desus there, but that feels him, and in love embraces him within his heart; there annumts his feet with the tears of gratifude, flove and joy, and exclaims, 'My Lord and my God." Being "dead indeed unto sin" and "quickened together," and "risen with Christ." Col. 2: 13, having the affections riveted on things above, the soul finds contentment sweetly within, even "life hid with Christ in God." Having taken a draught at the "wells of salvation," from the hands of the Savior, he is satisfied, happy and contented, "shall never thirst," though always drinking, for it shall "be in him a well of water"—comfort, peace, joy and contentment "springing up into everlasting life - John 4 - 14.

Such is time and lasting contentment. Will you diligently seek it, dear reader? The groinise is, "Seek, and you shall find I but remember that it is not found in any worldly object, nor in the "counsel of the ungodly, the way of sonners, the seat of the scornful," but in the "congregation of the righterers," the "Church of the first-barn, which are written in beaven," whose "delight is in the law of the Lord" and whose ment and drink it is to do their Master's will, Give your heart to God, and humble yourself by hand, under his mighty hand, and it will come to pass that you can say with David of old while in the wilderness of Judah, hercely persecuted by king Saul, "Thus will I bless thee while I live;] will lift up my hands in thy name. My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness. and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips, when I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night watches. Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice."-Psalms 63; 4-7 Bethlehem, Pa,

MORMONISM.

CEMI-MORMONISM at the East, as well as in all its original deformity in Utah, is suffering the withering ldast of an aroused pullic sentiment. Leading clergymen and Christian laymen in the State of New York have been in consultation to devise active measures for the breaking up of the impure Oneida commumity, in the center of that State. Led by the retired and really very able former head of it. John Humphrey Noves—a relative of President Hayes-the community has voted to give untheir system of complex or bestind marriages. They do not renounce their principles; indeed they advocate the superior parity of celibacy. but will not live separate as do the Shakers .-They will permit separate marriages, break up the indiscriminate association of the sexes, keep up their torms of moral and religious discipline, their socalistic plan of doing business and holding property, and for the care and education of the children. Young Mr. Noves, the present head of the budy, is happily married, and is opposed to the complex marriage system of his tather. His personal influence together with the strong public sentiment around them, has secured this hopeful step towards a moral reformation.

10) The prosperity of the Methodist Book Concern in New York, the Rev. Dr. Hunt, one of the managers in this city, gave some interesting statistics in an address at one of the late Chafanqua meetings. He said that after the fire in 1836 the capital to begin business with was $281,050.74 In June 1878, the net capital was $1,000,414 48, showing an increase of $719,-762 69 which came from profits. Herords show that the New York Concern has paid for objects outside of its town business since 1839 the sum of 82,120,800,3%. This was paid by order of the General Conference, or it would otherwise have been added to the capital, so that the fotal profits have been $2,859,665,04 in forty-two years, or an average of $67,872.72 per year.

TYPE first Love-feast in this part of the coun-I fry is now past and truly it was a feast to us all and one long to be remembered by all present. In an humble tent 30x40 feet, covered with borg bay, about fifty-three members commored, and people who long sat in darkness, were permitted to see the ordinances of the Lord's house observed in their primitive order. We trust and believe this occasion will be the means of furthering the Master's cause in this place. We organized a church with twentyfour members, with two deacons and one mineter, and named it the Weeping Water thurch. Sunday-School Convention.

THE Sunday-school Convention for the north- ${f I}$ - ern district of Indiana will meet in regular ession the 23rd day of October, 1879, in Solomon's Creek Meeting-house, 1; miles northeast of Millord Junction, Elldurt Co. Those ronning by way of lake Shore road will change cars at Goshen for Millord Junction. Those coming by way of Pittsburg, Ft Wayne and Chicago, will change cars at Warsaw for Milford Junction. Those coming by way of Band, This, will stope off at Milford Junction.

We expect this meeting to be the best one of the hand ever held in northern Induana among the Brethren, being just one day previous to the northern Imbana Mission Meeting at the sum place, thereby calling together the ablest and most ventous workers in both the Missionary and Sunday-school fields. Brethren and sisters. let us come together and learn how much good and how much good can yet be done, and last, therae will be "The Bilde."

The following is the programme as prepared for the Convention:

1. What are the advantages of Sundaychools among the Brethren? Jesse Calvert. Daniel Shively.

2. Has the experiment of Sunday-school Conventions proven to be beneficial to the Sunday school cause in the Brotherhood? Daniel Whitmer, John Sturgis.

3. Teacher's Meetings, and how to conduct them. Louis Muniz, Sarah Johnson.

4. What are the nesessary qualifications of teachers and officers? P. R. Wrightsman, Isaac Berkey.

5. How should scholars be instructed who cannot read? Isaac Early, Noah Shutt.

6. How can all who attend Sunday-school be induced to take part in the exercises? John Wrightsman, Henry Wartsler.

7. What records should be kept, and how? Amsey Puterbaugh, Alman Mock.

8. How should funds be raised to defray the expenses? Wm. G. Cook, Harrison Elson.

The persons named with each proposition will open the discussion, after which all present will have liberty to take part in the exercises. Perfect freedom to present the light of the Gospel upon these subjects, and to suggest the best methods of teaching our youth will be allowed. We want active workers throughout the Brotherhood to be with us and help in the noble cause. All will be heartily welcomed.

Hillery and I had some appointments ahead of us, which we were endeavoring to reach, one at Belton, Cass Co., Mo., two miles from the western horder of the State, one at a school-house, five miles from Bellion, and two in the vicinity of Lawrence, Kansas. We went in brother Hillery's private conveyance, and, with the exception of the hot and sultry weather, and teeble condition of brother Hillery's health, as he was scarcely yet well recovered from the effects of a severe spell of congestive fever, a short time before, at brother Fred Kulps, near the Mineral Creek Church ,-we had a deligidful truc

We left Warrensbusg, Mo., on Friday mornmg, reaching brother Jonathan Enmerts' four miles south of Mo., passing Friday night with this kind family, resuming our journey Saturday morning, and arriving at sister Minnie C. eral Mormons in the audience. This was the first "Dunkard" sermon ever preached in that neighborhood, and I was, perhaps, the first preacher of the sort this rustic audience had ever beheld.

Curiosity, doubtless, stimulated the major part of the congregation to come out to the meeting, for they eyed the round-tailed coat, and general "outfit" of your humble servant as minutely and currously as if he had been some tabulous, or numbescript, animal, or "soaring varment," suddenly and nnexpectedly turned loose in the community.

I certainly had the "undivided attention" of that "highly respected and intelligent audience." I was informed that a decided impression was made on one of my hearers, a Mormon woman, who remarked, "That is the doctrine for me!" I sincerely hope that this poor "Latter Day Saint" may, in God's good time, be brought out of the darkness of Joe Smith into the marvelous light of the Gospel of Christ.

At night I preached, by request, in the Christian (or Campbellite) Church at Belton.— The house was full and good attention given to the discourse. Text, Acts xvii: 18. Here the gaze of the curious seemed concentrated on our little group of sisters, who sat near the speaker's platform attired in their plain clothes, and modest white caps.

Monday morning, "bright and early." Bro. Hillery feeling somewhat better, and the "Latin parts" of the machinery all round being in better working order, we set out for the celebrated State of Kansas. We had a delightful drive: protected from the fierce rays of old King Sol in a covered carriage, tanned by cool and invigorating breezes, and charmed by the matchless scenery of the delicious landscape around us. The view was magmificent indeed. The constant succession of well-ordered farms, with their long colonnades of tall and feathery Lomhardy poplars fringing the broad avenues of approach - well cut, smoothly-trimmed hedges, shapely orchards, laden with red and tempting fruit, immumerable streks of grain, smooth, broad, level roads, vast, illimitable prairies stretching in the dim distance, far away as the eve could reach, dotted with white cottages, and varied by the winding outlines of enchanting streams tringed by stately trees, all conspired to form a picturesque and delightful

This little town is some 14 or 16 miles

Here we failled up for the night, enjoying the hospitality of a genteel family of this quantipeople. The next day we journeyed on, crossing the far-tained Wakarusa, on a scow, at the substantial, Teutonic village of Eudora, and reached brother Supplee's about noon. We spent two or three days with the family of this kind-hearted prother and his noble wife. Here we felt truly at home, and realized that we were in the house of a brother and sister in the hord. We met here brother Samuel Baker and wile of the Willow Springs Church; also Bro. Flory and wife of Lawrence. Owing to our detention one day longer on the road than we had expected, we did not reach our appointmont for Monday night, at the school-house near brother Supplee's. Fortunately, however frother Baker was present and preached for the

The weather on Tuesday evening was threatming; black clouds blocked up the sky with every indication of a storm, so it was thought prodent to questione the meeting. We were solicited by brethren. Baker and Flory, to hold a series of meetings in the city of Lawrence, but the state of brother Hillery's health, and my personal engagements at home, would not, at this time, alimit of this. In speaking of the proposed meeting, and the style of preaching most likely to prove effective in Lawrence, Bro. Flory thought that "hove" would be a good in this view. Leave is a wonderful grace, and spent a pleasant evening under the hospitable roof of old brother and sister Eyre who have a comfortable little bome near the suburbs of the city. Lawrence is a beautiful place. It is a neat and cosy little city of some 9 or 10,000 inhabitants, nestling amid green trees and clustering vines on the south bank of the Kansas river-The wide, well-paved, clean-kept streets, its elegant business houses, its neat cottages and handsome residences, its smoothly-shaven lawns, and imposing public structures form a striking contrast with the Lawrence I saw 21 years ago, with its straggling collection of "doby" adobe) buts, and shanties built of rough pine plank scattered promiscuously, hither and yon, along the banks of the Kaw, as if somebody had pitched a peck of Irish potatoes into the air, and each one lay where it fell in picturesque irregularity, and in utter defiance of systhetic law. One of these dingy huts, a veteran survivor of the days of yore, stands, in monraful and solitary grandeur, on the brow of a hill overlooking the classic waters of the Kaw. This important item in the past and progressive history of the city, we obtained through the persistent curiosity of the two accomplished females who were our fellow travellers on the trip. To them the world is indebted for this imperishable fact. Fired with antiquarian zeal, at their behest, I started out in quest of the desired information. Fortune smiled upon the praise-worthy purpose, and I gleaned the inestimable knowledge from an aged and venerable looking specimen of the African race, whom I encountered in the vestibule of the Post Office. But, in the language of the old Methodist preacher, "I must wind to a close" lest my nar rative. like

We had, altogether, a very pleasant, and, I trust, a profitable trip. In the companianship of brother Unllery, earnest, devoted, zealous in his labors for the cause of Christ, and that of sister Hillery, no less interested in the triumph of God's people, both myself and wife felt that we enjoyed a rare and precious privilege,-one that contributed to our sparitual growth. The occasion will long be remembered with emotions of pleasure by ns.

May the Lord prosper our beloved brother and wife in their labors for the mubuilding of Christ's Niugdom on earth, and when done with the things of time and sense, triumphant them to that better kingdom above.

Warrensbury, Mr.

From Modesta, California,

WE held our Love-feast on the evening of the 20th of September. Commenced incetive on the evening of 18th, and continued antil Monday evening, 22nd. We had a very pleasant and good meeting. The church seemed revived and edified and some favorable impressions made on the minus of many, We still try to "plant and water" by holding forth the Word of hife according to the "ability that God giveth," and we humbly pray that the Lord may give the increase so that a bountiful harvest may be gathered into the Lord's garner! The church held a choice for one minisister and two deacons. The lot fell on brother S. A. Overholtzer, for minister, and for deacons, brethren Jacob and Isaac Shelly. A happy union of feeling prevailed among the members, as was umply indicated by the vote for the brethren to their positions. The Brethren of California desire the prayers of the Church. both on this, and on that side of the stormy waters. Humbly praying that the Lord may strengther and encourage the Brethren in California we are as ever.

Fraternally,

P. S. GARMAS.

From Mt. Vernon, Va.

THE Mount Vernon congregation seems to the mila prosperous condition. Seven have been reserved by baptism, since the 24th of August. Elder J. R. Gish and compación have returned to Johnous. He labored hard while he was a noigh us fromg to encourage the Christ-

Covington, Ohio .- Our church is in a healthy condition, both spiritually and temporally. During brother Bashor's meeting (of one week), there were six added by baptism, and one sines, Our Sunday-school is well attended by the little folks, but not so well by their parents as it should be. Success to Sunday-schools and the E. Beery. City Mission.

From North Manchester, Ind .- Our church is in a healthy condition. True, we have our losses and crosses, but still we prosper. Yesterday we had council meeting and disposed of matter before the house pretty satisfactory to all,-hope the Lord will add his blessing to the same. We rejoice to inform you that we had the privilege of receiving three more to the church by haptism, making in all for this year even sixty. God have the praise.

From Mansheld, Ills,-Closed meeting in Woodford Co., October 1st, with seven additions by baptism, one restored, and one applicant to be received in Lacon. Two were from the Baptists and one from the Methodists. The brothren and sisters in Woodford are lively, working members and did not forget the preacher nor his family. Muy God's blessing be with them evermore. I reached brother Barnhart's on the 2nd inst. Small congregation last night on account of rain. Humbly trusting, we begin D. B. Grasov.

From Franklin Cliurch, lows. - Our feast is past and we had a good meeting. Brother II. Palmer was with us and preached for us. One precious soul was constrained to turn in with the people of God. Held a choice for two deacons, the lot falling on brother Hiram Porter and Lewis D. Gurber. Hope the Lord will bless them and cause them to be true and faithful workers in their calling, and may we all live so that we will be permitted to hear that welcome applicabil, "Well done,"

From Maple Grove Colony,-Last Sunday, (Sept. 21st.,) was our regular appointment on the Sappa River, about eight miles north of the colony. Brother N. C. Workman responded to the request, made by a person in that neighborhood. The request was that brother Workmon should fell the people what the Brethren did believe. He not only told the people what we, as a Church, believe, but also gave roud. Semplural reasons for the same in a clear, logical and convincing manner. He, in the space of two hours, handled subjects enough to engage a speaker for a year. At the close, two precious souls, were united to the body of the church by baptism in the presence of a large and interesting undience. Some good impressions were made upon the minds of many offiers. May the good Lord help our dear brethremand sisters to be finitibled in the discharge of every Christian duty. We are almost daily regerging additions to our colony and yet there is room for good, enterprising men and women. Our communion will be held on the 1th and 5th of October. We will have our church completed cons to hold it there. Health in the colony good, weather dry, necessaries of life are plenty and chenp. S. R. Погутяник.

GELTY.—In the Yellow Creek Congregation. Stephenson Co., Ill., sister Mary, wife of Leonard Gelty, uged 49 years, 5 months and 2 days. Funeral services by the Brethren, from 2 Cor. 5th chapter. Davin B. Eby.

SNYDER.—In the Union District, Marshall Co., Ind., Aug. 19th, friend Eva, wife of David Snyder, aged 52 years. Finneral services by brother M. A. Eisenhour from 1 Peter, 3: G, W. MATER.

PLETCHER -In Cook Co., Texas. Aug. 11. 1879, sister M. M. Pletcher, age: 21 years Her suffering lasted but a few days. She was confined to her room on Monday, on Thursday she was anointed, and on Similry night she passed over the river. She leaves a husband and one child and many friends to mourn their loss.3 She was a dutiful child, a kind commoion, and ever ready to obey the communits of the Lord. Funeral services by the writer. J. H. Sowder.

MICHAEL .- In the Howard Church, Indiana, Sept. 1st 1879, sister Martin Jane, d nebter of friend Wm., and sister Aseneth Muchael. aged 21 years. Finneral sermon by the writer from Rev. 14: 12, 13.

This dear young sister was taken down early last Spring with the consumption. She bore her afflictions with an unusum degree of patience. On the 29th of June she called for the elders of the Church and was anointed in the name of the Lord. She leaves a kind father and mother, five brothers and three sisters to mourn HIPL HAMILTON.

WRIGHT.—In the Mt. Vernon Congregation. Augusta Co., Vn., September 7, 1879, of Diptherm, sister Eva, wife of brother William J Wright, aged 28 years, 6 months and 12 days. Funeral discourse by brother J. R. Gish of Ills., from Rev. 11: 12, 13.

She leaves a large number of friends and relaives, besides her husband and little son. She possessed such a modest and affectionate dispersition that all who knew her seemed to be devoted to her. She was a zealous sister, and bet Christian example is worthy of inntation and should characterize every one that professes the name of Christ. Cheer up, weeping friends, surely she is one of those pewels, spoken of by S. W. Garbers. Malnehi, 3: 17.

WARVEL -- In the Ugans Creek Congregation, of Typhoid [lever, September 18, 179, near-North Manchester, Ind., sister Alice Warvel. aged 16 years, 9 months and 23 days.

Like the tender flower that is so soon cut down by the frosts of Autumn and sails into the earth, so did our sister pass calmly and serenely away through the gates of death into life eternal into the Kingdom of God. At the early age of twelve years, the gave her heart. to God and became. His faithful follower, a disvoted Christian, respected and estermed by all who knew her. If was a sail scene to behold our sister in death's embrace, but we left that if was God's will. Sister Alice will be saitly. missed, not only by near and dear relatives in the family circle, but by associates and friends, in the church and Similar-school. Thus, one by one, we pass from fines to a state of things eternal. May God help us all so to live. that when we must suffer the pangs of death we may have the hope of an immortal cown. in the home of the blessed.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 2d. Baptist churches possess the Bible characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.

D. B. RAY, Affirms.

J. W. Stein, Denies.

BAY'S 1ST AFFIRMATIVE.

THE church question is emphatically the question of the age. Long and painful has been the controversies over rites and ceremones -modes of worship-and abstract theological speculations; but the time has fully come for "the battle of the charches". The questions, "What, and where are the churches of Jesus Christ," reverberate amidst the thouser of coclessastical artillery throughout the entire land. Few, if any, lovers of the Bible dare deny the importance of the question. The churches of Christ are, in a very important sense, the "light of the world," "the sall of the earth," and "the follor and ground of the truth."

mary usual Bible signification, to describe local (when he offered his son churches at Christ" (Rom. 16: 16). Our word | Know ye therefore that they which are of Lanh, mot to baptize, but to preach the gospet; not, that of women in Canal.

church is a very imperfect translation of the Greek word reclesia, from kalein, to call, and ek, out of; therefore, literally, it means the called out. Liddell & Scott, in their Greek lexicon, define the word "Ecclesia, an assembly of citizens summoned by the crier, the legislative assembly." There is no controversy about the existence "of churches of Jesus Christ" somewhere on earth.

It is almost universally admitted, throughout Protestant christendom, that Baptist churches are churches of Christ. In denying our proposition, our friend denies the salvation of any Baptist. He thinks that all Baptists will be damned, unless they become Tunkers. Surely, Mr. Stein will use all diligence to teach all Baptists the way of the Lord more perfectly

We believe the truth of our proposition re firmly as we believe the truth of the Bible. We expect to introduce several Bible characteristics possessed by Baptists, which will show that Baptist churches are churches of Christ.

sess the Bible characteristic which demands spir itual regeneration—the new hirth—and spiritual life as an essential to haptism and church monbership.

This characteristic is so essential, that no orgamization which demis its truth con be regarded as a true church. The testimony neits support is overwhelming.

Arg. 1. This Baptist characteristic is proved from the fact, that repentance is essential to baptism and church membership. Those that came to John's baptism were required to bring the "fruits worthy of repentance." Lake 3: 7. On the day of Pentecost, Peter said, "Hepent, and be haptized, every one of 'voo.". repentance reaches unto sprantual life. * God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life." Acts 11: 18. It is repentance (vis zoon) into life. We state the argument thus: (1) Repentance precedes baptism; (2) Repentance reaches into spiritual life; (3) Therefore, spirit and life precedes baptism. Agam, "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation"—eis solerian-into salvation. (1) Repentance precedes baptism and church membership; (2). Re pentance reaches into salvation; (3) Therefore, salvation precedes baptism and church member-

Arg. 2. This leading Baptist characteristic is proved from the fact that heart-faith precedes laptism and church membership. Every such believer possesses spiritual life, and is, therefore, in a state of justification. (a) Testimony of the prophets: At the house of Cornelius l'eter said, "To him give all the prophets waness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shalt receive remission of sins." Acts. 10: 40. Every true believer has remission of sins. It is agreed that this heart-tuth is essential to haptism and church membership. Abraham "toheved in the Lord; and he accounted at he him printfied and the salvation of his scale (3) Therefor righteonsness." Gen. 15: 6. Paul enforces fore, every one must have the purification of the same in the New Testament, where he says: | heart and the salvation of the soul hetere hap-"Abraham betreved God and it was counted unto him for righteonsness. Now to him that Our proposition is so definitely stated, that when he offered up his son on the altur. He prior to implish and church membership there is no room for controversy as to its mean- was justified in the sense of pardon when he be- (e) Paul testities that he was sent by Christ ing. The term churches is here used in its priscibeved, and was justified before men by works to the Centiles. Polopen theoryces, and to turn the same are the children of Abraham." Gal. 3: 6, 7. This settles the question that the plan of salvation which saved Abraham, is still the plan by which sinners are saved. This plan, which is held by Baptists, is further taught by the prophets, Hab. 2: 4; Is. 28: 16; and is quoted by Peter and Paul as the New Testament plan. 1 Peter 2: 6; Rom. 9: 33. Thus we have the testimony of all the Old Testament prophets, and adopted as the New Testament plan, that every believer has the remission of sins, und is a spiritual child of Abraham. (b) In the New Testament we have the testimony of Jesus that the believer is saved and has spiritual life. "And he said to the woman, thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." Loke 7: 50. Our friend does not believe this doctrine taught by the Master. Jesus said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, both everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unity life"—and of death into life. Characteristic I. Buptist churches pos- John 5:24. One must be a true believer prior to baptism and church membership. Every such true believer has passed out of spiritual death into spiritual life. In the interview with Nicodemus, the Savior sets forth the same. Baptist doctrine, that the believer in him has eternal life, and is not condemned John 3; 15-18. Paul affirms, "That if thou shalt confess with thy month the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thone heart that God bath raised him from the dead, thou short be saved; for with the hour! man believeth unito righteousness; and with the month confession is made unto salvation." Roan, 10; 9, 10. The testimony in support of this Bajorst characteristic is overwhelming. W. state the argument as follows: (1) Every one must possess heart-faith prior to baptism and church memberships (2) But every one that possesses neart-faith has regeneration and spiritual lite. (3) Therefore, every one must pos sess regeneration and spirital life prior to haptism and church membership. This our triend has admitted. In spate of the aloctrine of his church he has surrendered this question so as to admit that none but the "regenerated" are to be laggized. Yet for the benefit of others. we continue our proofs.

(c) Peter testifies: "And God which knoweth the hearts, bear them witness, giving them the Holy Chost, even as he did nuto not and put no difference between us and them, porniyong their hearts by faith." Acts 45: S. 9. Also, Peter says: "Whom having not seen, ye love: in whom, though now ye see him not, yet telieving ye rejoice with joy inispeakable and toll of glory; receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." I Pet. 1: S. 9. The true believer has his heart purified and his soul saved, according to Peter. I. True faith must procede haptism and church membership (2) But every one that has true faith, has his hear? tism and church membership.

(a) The testimony of John stands thus: "Whowork, th, is the reward not reckoned of grace, | soever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born but of debt. But to limithat worketh not, but of God." I John 5; I. Also, "He that believbelieveth on him that justifieth the angodly, eth on the Son of God hath the witness in hamhis faith is counted for righteon-ness. Even as sell." I John 5: 10. The true believer is "horn David also describeth the blessedness of the upon of God," and has the witness in himself." This unto whom God imputeth righteousness with- is Baptest doctrine. I. True belief must preout works." Rum, 4: 3-6. This faith was reck- cede leptism and church membership. (2) Evoned to Abraham for righteoneness, when find lary true believer is born of God, and has the called him out of Ur of the Chaldees, long be- unternal witness. (3) Therefore, every one must fore his circumcision and justification by works, the horn of God and have the internal witness.

them from darkness to light, and from the powcongregations. In the New Testament, we read | The apostle further enforces the doctrine of seriof Satan unto God, that they may receive forof "the seven churches which are in Asia" (Rev. justification by faith in the letter to the Galos giveness of sais, and inheritance among them; 1: 4); of "all the churches of the Gentiles" fians. He says; "Even as Abraham behaved that are sauctified by faith that is in me." Acts the Sarate a Assembly, "est week, that the deg-(Rom. 16; 4) and that such are called "the God and it was accounted to hunfor righteonsness, 26; 18. Yet Paul says, "For Christ sent one radation of Mormon women there is as great as with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect." I Cor. 1: 17. Mark it well. Paul was sent to turn men from darkness to light, from the power of Satan unto God; but he was not sent to baptize. Therefore, laptism is not essential to the turning from the power of Satan unto Gol. 1st. True faith must precede baptism and church membership. 2. Every one that has true faith is justified by faith in Christ. 3. Therefore, every one must he justified by faith in Christ prior to baptism and church membership. Paul again says: "And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Acts 13: 39, 1 All must he believers in Christ prior to baptism and church membership. 2. "All that believe are justified." Therefore, all must be justified prior to baptism and church membership.

Once more, the trembling jailor cried out, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" And they said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." Acts 16: 30, 31. 1. Every one must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ prior to baptism and church membership. 2. But every one that believes on the Lord Jesus Christ is saved. 3. Therefore, every one must be saved prior to baptism and church membership.

The New American Cyclopedia (edited by Geo. Ripley and Chas. A. Dana; published by Appleton & Co., New York) under the head of "Baptists," says:

"The Baptists, properly defined, are those who hold that the haptism of christian believers is of universal obligation."

Surely Baptist churches possess the finalamental Dible characteristic which demand spiritual regeneration—the new birth—and spiritual life as essential to baptism and church memhership.

THE DEATH OF A CHRISTIAN.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD,

ALL to mind a Summer evening, When the sky is all serene, When the sun has just departed, And no clouds are to be seen.

When the gentle zephyrs whisper, And the twilight gleams appear: Then the heart is filled with glodness. For the scene hath nothing dress.

But 'tis crowded with peace and quiet, To the faithful of the day: So they can in sweetness slumber, After they to God do pray.

Thus the evening's very pleasant, To the Inborer of the day: Who has wrought and worked most nobly, And doth not from daty stray.

So it is with all who labor, in this life while it is day: Working hard in Jesus' calling. And his teachings all obey,

When their san of life is effing, There will not as found appear: They can poss from earth to glory, Having mought to make them fear

Blessed thought for dying Christians, That no clouds shall intervene; To disturb their dying shumbers, Or molest the parting scene,

That he is being now, we arady shown, and that he has a kingdom now, will be no difficult task to establish. In evidence of the fact, we offer the following proofs:

1. The trackings of Christ, "Jesus," it is said, "came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye. and believe the gospel," (Mark 1: 14, 15.) In his sermon on the mount, he said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God. and his righteousness," (Matt. 6: 33.) And again, when speaking to the multitude concerning John, he said: "Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John, the Baptist; not withstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Raptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force," (Matt. 11; 11, 12).

Such were the teachings of Christ concerning his kingdom. If then, he do eleved his kingdom at hand—if he taught men to seek it, and if those who did so, properly took it by force; then it was most certainly his present kingdom of grams, and not his future and everlasting kingdom of glory. But, we offer in evidence of the same thing.

2. The doctrine and tenhings of the apostles. They all studied and gradua ted in the school of Christ. He taught and instructed them carefully. For more than three years in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. He also endow ed them with power from on high, and sent them forth to present, in all the world, "the things concerning the kingdom of God. 3. Christ on a himplion of plany.

This kingdom is variously designated. It is called: "His heavenly kingdom," 2 Tim. 4: 18. "The kingdom of Christ. and of God." Eph. 5; 5, "The everlast ing kingdom of our Lord and Savior de sus Christ." 2 Peter 1, 41. "The king dom prepared for the righteous, from the foundation of the world," Matt. 25: 34. "My Father's kingdom," and "the king dom of their Father." Matt. 26: 29: cb. 13/43. "A kingdom which cannot be moved." Heb 12: 28. "His endless and everlasting kingdom." Dan. 7: 14, 27: |Luke||1: 33, | It is also called: "The third heaven," "everlasting life," &c. Mair, 19; 29; ch. 25; 46; I Cor. 6; 9, 10; 2 Cor. 12: 2.

These texts show conclusively that Christ has a heavenly and eternal king. dom, as well as natural and inediatorial kingdoms. These kingdoms are all separate and distinct from each other, and ought not therefore be confounded, and spoken of as being identical. The kinguon of grace is temperal, but the kingdomof glory is sormal. The end of the one is the beginning of the other. Hence, the apostle says, speaking of the resurrection and the end of the world; "Then cometh the end, when he shall have deby each up the kingdom (i. e., his mediatorial [46 God, even the Pather: when he shall have put down all rule and all | nied. And as a summary thereof, on ambority and power. For he must reign till he bas put all cuemies under his feet." 1 Cor. 15; 24, 25,

Then, at the end of the would, as we have stated when Chrisshall have finished his to discorial work and put down all his energies under his feet, he will surrender his mediatoria administration, and enter upon the posassion and government of his everlast mg kingdom of glory,

If we are correct in our views up or this subject, it follows, of course, that the millennium belongs to his reign of grace, and not to his reign of glory. In other words: that Christ's mediatorial kingdom will not terminate, as some be. lieve and teach, at the time of his second coming. But at the time of the res. titution of all things. After the second and last resurrection and at the close of the great Judgment Day, the King of life and glory will say to those on his right hand; "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," The kingdom here referred to, is Christ's everlasting kingdom of glory. This will be awarded to the righteous and blessed of the Father, as their happy, glorious, and endless home.

Accordingly, we are naturally led to the conclusion, that when the grand dramer of human recovery is fully accomplished, and Messiah's mediatorial throne finally vacated, then the world's destiny will be fixed and scaled forever. The righteons will then shine forth like the sun, in the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world; and the weeked shall be punished in hell, to all eternity. This is the plain doctrine of the Bible, in relation to man's future destiny, and which eaunot be dethis point, the Revelator says: "He who is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he who is fifthy, let him be fifthy still; and he who is righteous, let him to rightconsistill; and he who is body, let him be hely still." Rev. 22: 14.

The strength that is to be advained by being in passes for, of a clear conscioned was surely his. He pleased his Master, and therefore was strong, He did his duty toward his fellow man, and though many were affended, yet be gave them no cause to be so, and told them plainly that they could not prove the thirgs that they accused him of detag. God Lotts no man guilty for sinto his not committed. In the twenty-South chapter of Acts we read about Paul being mensed before Felix. But vas he found guilty! And in the next chapter when he was placed before Fesins, the Jews laid many and grievous complaints against him, but they could and prove them, yet they desired to have judgment against kim. How unfair! row unlike Christ they nered! And it vas the stane cay when Christ was acused. It was their prejudices which made them so and not because they had Oatob er 20 reason to be offended. Christ says. blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me." Then we may conclude that to be offended without a cause is not right, and the Christian is not accountable for such offence. When king Agrippa had come, Paul was again required to make his defense. Now when he was brought before the king he was found innoceut, and he was found inno cent once or twice before. He has done nothing worthy of death or of bonds, he had, as he says, exercised himself to keep his conscience void of offence both toward God and man, and when judged by the king was found innocent. So it will be at the great day when "the books will be opened and another book will he opened which is the book of life, and the dead will be judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works." The old prophets, who labored to keep their consciences clear and clean will be found innocent. Though some of them were slain and others shamefully treated by their brethren, the Jews. "Oh Jerusalem! Jerusalem! thou that killest the prophets and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chiekens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Sad indeed, for God had sanctified the temple to his presence, but now he says he will leave it unto them, desolute. Why did he depart from the house! EARTH'S latest sun is sinking fast. Our race is nearly roug Our trials now are almost past, The crown is almost won.

O come, glorious Lord, Soon come, fulfil thy word; O gather us all from these scenes of sm, To our eternal home.

I know we're near the solemn day, Waen Jesus shall appear; The light shines brighter on our way, The morning must be near.

We've almost gained our heavenly home, Alond for joy we sing; The augel-reapers soon will come. The harvest-home to bring.

All praise and honor by to him Who bled and died for me; Whose blood now cleanses from all sin And gives the victory.

Not all sadmess is unhappiness, else God would be the most unhappy of all beings. He knows and sees all the sin and misory in the Universe and feels it too. God is a Spirit, and not stone or iron. His sensibilities are Infinite. All wrong wounds Him, dishonors Him, grieves Him. Pis deepest. most rankling wounds are those the reecives "in the house of His friends." But He is free because True. All evil is objective. The part has nothing to gnav Him, the future nothing to terrify. " AM" tak - in all that was and to be, and that is immaculate. There is no pence for us, no freedom, till God's now is ours. The past must somehow be an nihilated, as a guilty past, and the for ture disroled of its miss of horror, before the present anticipates the glad Eternity of the All-holy. It is in the present we apprehend God, and are apprehended of Him. jection Philp, 3; 19, 4 Cor. 9; 27, Matt. 4: 2, 4 John 4: 32. "He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor." His missionary enterprise so impoverished Him that he had not where to lay his head. Why are we so niggard in the prosecution of his ends and the extension of His Kingdom! Why so lavish in promoting our own interests, augmenting our own comfort, or maintaining our popularity, while the claims of Jchovalt are disregarded, or opposed, or even treated with contempt? Our lack of sympathy with His aims betrays a small measure of the spirit of Nazareth, the Wilderness of Gethsemme, and Golgothat and this accounts for the absence of that freedom which renders the elect a "peculiar people," Jesus "made himself of no reputation." Philp. 2: 7.

As not one want of likeness to Him in this respect another stumbling-block to our liberty and progress? No soul can be five but in the Truth and that means surrender of body, soul, spirit, houses, ands, stock, friends, all that we are and have, for the consummation of the Divine purpose in Christ Jesus. He that is not free anough to give himself and his all for a Savior who left the bosom of Infinite Love, and Power, and Bliss, to endure the measureless horrors of a cross that aggregated the sms of the whole world from Adam to the last born, evinces nothing of the majesty of sacrifice which endears the soul to God. He, that has not consecrated his all to the Cross, can not give ton per cent, nor five, nor one, to the glory of God.

If Jesus has a right to the whole of our possessions, why should we grudge the tenth? If we would enter into the spirit of the incurnation, including all that his between the Manger and the Cross and between the Cross and the cordiciong Divine-human reign of Emnormal, what a stripping off of Jewelry and these-pampering appared there would befor the advancement of the interests. of the Cross! TT is not an uncommon thing to hear young mencomplain that their enrly schooling was deficient in quantity, poor in quality, or—if neither of these—was wasted through boyish indifference and folly. They would get on better in life if they knew more, they are from to admit, but they do not see that they are daily wasting opportunities, which, if improved, would in a few years give a fairly good education. They think them themselves too old to learn, and spend more time regretting their lack of knowledge than would suffice to give them the knowledge they need. It is said that the father of Professor Sumner, of Yale College, could neither write nor read when he came to this country, a young English mechanic. Within twenty years thereafter be was known as one of the best read men in Hartford, one of the most cultivated communities in the country. Instead of wasting his time in idle regrets for his deficient schooling. he learned to read, and read to 2000 purpose. It sometimes happens that we are imposed upon by plagiarists-there who purlein the articles of others and mass them off for their own. This is had-ngly, dishonest, thievish. Notsk.-Some people make a great deal of naise. They go through life like a thunderbolt, but after all we can not see much that they accomplished. There are others again who move along quietly—noiselessly, but they do a power of good. Their influence is such that it will be felt upon the hearts and lives of others long after they have left the shores of time. These are the workers the world needs to do the work that must be done.

PREPARATORY COURSE

I EN med certain religious discipling in this. world, during their stay on earth, to make them suitable characters for the next world—its so bety and government. This discipling is forceaste within them, a capacity, for appreciate the attributes of Jehovah, the glory, grandour, and sublimity of what is just and time, the philosophy of the golden rule. Naturally we have no power to appreciate chedience to God's law; and to be ashered into heaven without any preparation for it would be like sending a child to college before it had dearned. the alphabet. God has prepared a "course" for men to take while on earth which is to fit them. for the school alove where Gol will be all, and in all just as we have a common-school course which children most take before they have the espacity to appreciate the high school or college. A shild belonging to the prinary department of a jubbe school would be no more out ed place, would book no more faolish and be no more uneasy in the semor class of the world's lost University, than a man in Junean without having passed through the primary ouse laid out in the liable.

TREATMENT OF CONTRIBUTORS.

VOURTLESS our readers sometimes wonder What contributors thenk when their artidesare not accepted. That depends entirely mon two things; one is whether they are true Christians or not; the other, whether they are educated or not.

The true Christian always feels unworthy. unmeriting, humble, meek, and sulcan-sive. The true and refined scholar has in his life seen so many things which he could not understand things may be and are known of which he low the present surface, and (0) feet nearer the that is charged for admission to the garden, and the eternal Word.

knows nothing. Hence he is not full enough of self-confidence, self-importance to be much disconcerted if his articles are not published. About all he says to the editors when his MS, is rejected, is, "I am very thankful to you for withholding that a ticle from the public, for I do not now think it would either have added to my credit or have been to the good of the cause."

The following note from Prof. Lockard, of Mt. Morris College is a fair sample of bow scholars feel and write concerning their productions:

"Dear Editors:

Enclosed find manuscript. If too long for one insertion divide in two. I am afraid it will not suit you. It seems very dull to me, and if you do not like it please put it gently in the fire."

The article referred to made about a column and a half when set up in type.

We shall not here say how those who are neither truly converted nor educated do. We shall leave the render in suspense about that until some future time when we shall probably give specimens of what they say. We only have one at present and we would have no more regrets if we did not have it.

NOTICE TO AGENTS.

DLEASE send us the names of all persons whom you think you might get to take the Brethren at Work who are not now taking it, and we will at once send, them a sample copy. It is cheaper for us to send the paper that way than to send several copies to you and then you distribute them; besides, it will save you trouble and work.

More About Jerusalem.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement.]

AT first thought I would limit my account of Jerusalem, which must be brief at best, to two letters; but since writing these two I realize that the acount is too incomplete to give satisfaction, and I now devote another letter to the city and its environs.

Tarmediately east at Mount Moriah, which I described in my last, lies the Varley of Jehoshaldrat, through which the brook Kedron once flowed. It originates in a depression northeast of the city which is cultivated in grain, and well set with alive trees. I dust east of the north-east angle of the city wall the valley is about 150 feet deep, measured from the level surface outside the wall, and it continues about the same depth along the entire astern side of the city, its downward slope being no greater than of the ground on which the vall stands. The strip of nearly level ground lying next to the wall is about 200 yards wide at its northern extremity, but it gradually contracts as you go southward, until it becomes so narrow as to scarcely allow room for a brude path at its southern extremity. The slope from this surface drawn to the hottom of the valley also becomes gradually steeper as you go south. At Stephen's gale it is so steep, that an angle is made in the road descending it, in order to make it passable for loaded animals, and it is still too steep for vehicles. The bed of the valley, the chief part of the way, is a level floor. from 60 to 80 yards wale, thinly set with ohive trees and cultivated in grain. Where it is cross ed by the road from Stephen's gate, it is narrower, and opposite the south-east angle of the city wall it contracts into a narrow ditch which extends southward for some hundreds, of yards, beyond which the valley expands to its former width and is well cultivated in garden vegeta-

Along this valley, as I have just said, the Kedien one flowed, and one of our party expressed disappointment at not finding at there now. He had thought that the beautiful lines, Thou sweet gliding Kedron, by thy silver stream, were true to the brook as it now is. But no stream has flowed there, except after heavy rains in very wet winters, for many long years; and Capt. Warren, by his excavations, discovered the original bed of the brook, 40 feet be- ers from the monks, thus paying the only fee city wall than the present hed of the valley. It was identified by its stratum of water-worn rocks and publies. This shows what might otherwise be doubted by skeptics, that the scripture representations of the brook are true; and at the same time it illustrates the extent of change which has been wrought by the frequent destruction of the city walls, and by the constant accumulation of rubbish from ordinary chuses. I think I have seen a statement from Dr. Barclay, that during his stay in Jerusalem no water flowed along the bed of this valley, even after hard rains. But I saw the clearest evidence that during the exceptionally wet winter of 1877-8, not only a stream, but a violent torrent washed through it; for I rode along the bed of a freshly washed gully cut out among pribles and larger stones, the sides of which were even with my shoulder as 1 sat on my horse. The stanza, then, which I have quoted above, is true of the Kedron as it once was, and may continue to sing it with that understanding.

The Saylor would luger in incomlight's soft beam, And by thy bright waters till midnight would stay, And lose in thy man mons the toils of the day."

All along the surface between the eastern wall of the city and the declivity descending into the valley, there is a Moslem cemetery, and graves are about as thick there as they can be, burials continue to take place, and you can see one or more groups of women there every morning and evening visiting the graves of those recently buried. On the day of judgment Molammed is to sit astride of a granite column which now projects from the Harani wall over this cemetry, and here the dead are to assemble as they arise. I had curiosity to see what kind of seat the old fellow will have, so I got astride the column myself; but I did not remain there long, for it was more than 50 feet from the ground, and I am not so good a sailor as to enjoy such a situation.

Immediately beyond the Valley of Jehoshaphat, as everybody knows, rises the Mount of Olives Almost as som as you cross the bridge opposite Stephen's gate, you begin to ascend this mount. You have choice of four roads. One leads to the right, running almost parallel. for a while, with the valley, ascending very gradually, and passing around the mount on a southern shoulder of it. This is the road to Jericho, and the one followed by all beasts and women of burden who go or come in that direction. The other three roads, turning off not fur from one another, ascend the mount; one leading to the summit directly, one with an inclimation to the right; and the other with about an equal inclination to the left. These three are rather steep for horses, especially, the middle one; last we rode up and down all three

In the angle which separates the right band road of the three last mentioned, from the main Jericho road first mentioned, is the tradicional garden of Gethsemane. I judge from the nature of the ground that these roads can never have been far from where they are now, and that the present garden must be partly, if not entirely identical with the one in which the Savier's great agony took place. About an acre of ground is here inclosed by a well-built and comparatively new stone wall, some eight or ten feet high. The garden is divided into six plats of about equal size, with nicely graveled walks passing between, and all well cultivated in flowers. It belongs to the Latins, as the Heman Catholics are called in this country, and is under the care of some hard working and poorly clad monks, who remain in it during the day, and sleep at night in the Latin mognstery within the city. The flowers are beautiful, and there are many varieties of them; but my eyes were soon drawn from these venerable olive trees which appeared almost old enough to have cast their moonlight shadows on the divine Sufferer who prayed where they mov stand. Their trunks are gnurled and pierced with many cavities; their foliage is very scant, like the scattered lock on a patriarch's brow; and they are gradually giving way beneath the corroding hand of time.

They can not, of course, be eighteen hundred years of age, but their venerable antiquity greatly helps the imagination in its effort to realize the scene so long ago enacted on the spot. We drew our tape-line around two of them, and found them respectfully 21 feet and 21 feet feet in encounterence, measuring above the swell of the roots. We bought some flow-their beauty and fragrance lent a charm to our tents, until, like all things beautiful on earth, they faded away. We visited the garden of Getharmane many times; we preserved some of the leaves of the old olives, and we obtained a few specimens of pressed flowers which had grown in the garden. J. W. McGARVEY.

HOME RELIGION.

WE take the following from Murray's "Golden Role", arm den Rule": "There is no place in which religion should be so little a thing of form and so wholly a thing of spirit-and a peaceful, happy spirit too-as at home. Prayer-meeting picty answers a good purpose; and Sunday, church-going piety has its uses, and that piety lightens and blesses a home. Home religion is a thing of the heart, which is the same as saying it is a thing of love. It may exist in connection with forms, and it may exist in its sweetest unfolding, independent of forms. It may be gifted to sustain a family altar, and it muy not have the gift requisite. But if the We have known a man ask a blessing on food breath. READING ALOUD.

IT is strange that in a country whose language is stored full of the choicest works of the human numd, and whose population is, as a whole, so well educated, reading aloud, as a means of enjoyment and source of instruction, is so little resorted to. There are many families. where a book, or a chapter of a book, is never read to the family circle from one end of the year to another. The individual members of the family read, but all reading done in the family is silent reading. Father has his paper, mother her tract, and Johnny his story of wild adventure. Reading, there is enough of it; but each one reads for amost. There is no reading for the whole, and no grouping of the family into an audience for an evening s enjoyment, such as comes to people who hear a good but of writing well read,

Dear Brethren: -

Ulf Love-feast was held on the 19th and 20th of September, and truly it was a good meeting. There were about forty-five members present, some from Ohio, Indiana, Iewa and l'ennsylvania, and from six different comties in this State. This was the first least ever held in this part of Nebraska, and quite an interest seemed to be manifested. Many brethren and sisters thought this was the best Love feast they ever attended. It was held in an humble tent put up for the occasion. It was good to enjoy a communion season together, but sad to part never to most again in this world. We have a bright hope of meeting in the sning climes of heaven where parting will be no more. Brethren Snowberger from Indiana, Henry Brubaker from Beatries, Wm. Putten from Paul Co., L. A the 25th of September we had our teast. We are of a neal with very pleasant weath Two, at the most may made are good conference some of a 14 tight also with the Good Spirit. Our and were bapaired in the Mannee River. The chief has not very large, but we were not breff is non-office are not, as a general thing so encycled. We had a number of speakers from a distance,-Brethren Jesse Calvert, A. Leedy, and Samuel Phiel. The brethren labored very earnestly for "the faith once delivered to the saints," and sinners were warned to flee from the wrath to come. At the close of the meetling one made application for baptism. She afflictions; her body deformed by Rhenmatism. She had to be carried to and from the water. As she had put off Christ mutil so late an hour, I flought how good. He was to wait on her.-She was baptized without a groan or struggle, and as I looked upon her bowed form and deformed limbs, I thought of the great power of God, and that if the dear sister proved faithful, in the better world, her limbs would all be straightened, and she would have a new hody. Some of her children, who stood by the mother's side, belong to the church, while her compamon and other children are still living, as it were, in a cold and wicked world. May God worship God in spirit and in truth. Brother P. help them to be concerned about their souls, and that they may not put off the day of grace. until it is forever too late, is my prayer. Our bittle church is in love and union, with a few exceptions. We have one speaker, an elder. and four deacous. We are surrounded with different orders of seenalled Christians.

We were blessed with good crops for which we all ought to be thankful. We have fruit of most all kinds. Health not very good. We beg an interest in your prayers that we may prove taithful and get home to heaven where we will part no more. Wishing you all the grace of God, I remain your sister in Christ.

Dear Brothern --

FTER many inquires, we learned the time A of the Brethren's Love-least in Richland County, and as we desired to be with them, with and I started on the 2nd of October in a private conveyance, for that place. We traveled thro Fondulae, Greenlake, Columbia, Sank and Richard courties. The further west we went the more broken and irregular we found the country. Farge hills and bluffs, with fine wheat come forth and serve us. Treffices J. C. and valley between them, and springs of excellent water reminding us of Pennsylvania. The first day we drove litty unibs, bringing as about five unles west of Portage City, on the Wisconson Breen. Night overtaking as here we asked for feelgang and farm-house. It happened that we a sample of the settlers, they are surely a very numsterial list to a certain what boother lived fine people. We were se well cared for that we After felling them the object of our trip they very naturally wanted to know all alient our the C. E. & O. R. B. do likewise and the land Goetenn. We gave them all the light we could, and the Chex have taxorable nupressions of ore Brethman. From Montague County, Texas.

S there are many inquiring after Texas I A will give my views of it in as few words as possible. I have been in the State nearly three years and have seen the most of Grayson, Cook, Denton, Tarrant and part of Wise and Montague counties. There is good country in all of them, but I like Cook the best. This is a good country for a poor man. If he comes here poor and lazy he is sure to hold his own. When you come here if you think you can stay from old friends, just bring enough to get here with and feed you the first year, and try to make enough to keep you the next year. By that time you can make enough to keep you the next, and by that time you can have some idea how you like it, as no man can tell in one year how he likes it. I wish I had come here twenty years ago. We have had a dry Summer and water is very scarce. Crops are short but I think in a few years men will farm differently, plow less land and piow deeper. Society, as a general thing, is very good, but here, as everywhere, there are those who are not strictly moral. I sleep with my door open all Summer; do not have as much fear as I did in Virginia. I have ridden twenty miles alone at night and then lay down and slent until daylight without fear. There are no more crimes committed here than in the old States. I had a trip to the Indian Territory. That is a fine country but the most of it is lying idle. If it were so the whites could hold land it would soon be settled

I think while the Brethren are sending out men to preach, the South should not be overlooked as it has been in the past. I had a meeting in Denton Co., last week, had a good audience and as good order as Lever saw. Good could be done there it some more meetings could be held. There is a speaker in Grayson county, one in Clay, and one in Cook, but all have famthes to care for and not much of this world's goods, so we all have to spend the most of our time in the field. Since the loss of my companion I cannot leave home as I could before, but I will do all I can. I will commence meeting in our own vicinity October 31st, and if any of the brethron contemplate coming to Texas we would be glad to see you here at that J. H. SOUDER.

District Mesting,

AMD, feath conference of the Northern District of Missouri was beld in the Bethel Thursh in Half Co., on the 29th day of Septenther 1850. The mesti, 2 was visited by spec-Litters from its different State; Airguna, lowa, Indiana, Illinois, Nebrushi and Vansas, among whom was Elder Martin Myers of Northern Illinois, and breth on B. J. Frory and Daniel Miller of Lower

4. The magnization of the meeting resulted in the following apposition its: Moderator ${f D}_i$ D. Sell, Cook, C. C. Root, Roseling Clerk, Geo. A. Shar, erger. Out of the fourteen congregations composing the District, only eight were represented by d degates.

The most remarkable feature in the meeting v. that not a single query was presented for deliberation. In the regular precess of business the district estangebet, were called on to give a report or their labors, which stey did to the satisfaction of all, and were encouraged to contimes their services as appointed to them at the provious session of the emilerence. Next in under the treasurer of Mass on timels was called up on to make a report of the means in bond to carry out the present ferm of evangelism when it was locald that the congregations had not yet responded to the cause by their and, and that there was a lack of $15,00 of a schelenry to carry it out in way of he ming a xpour is in proportion to the part in the past, and hence such congregations are solicited to the line noble work or prending the gospel where it was not yet prenchal by the Borbien.

Next was the election of a delegate to represout in Annual Mosting 1884, and it, order to represent on Standing Connection the elders of the District only were to be considered as candolars for the election, which resulted in the appointment of C. C. Root. And last it was granted that the next District Meeting should be held with the lorethren of the Wakendah of that congreg thom, except that it be letween the 15th of Septem'er and the 15th of October, 11880. By order of the church.

Distinct Clerk,

Guspel Success.

And they that he wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever.-Dan. 12: 3.

From Loraine, Ill.—Our church council wie held yesterday, and the husiness before us was disposed of in peace and harmony. Among other matters, we chose Bro. Daniel Vaniman for our presiding elder, for the time being subject to himself and the church.

H. W. Strickler.

From Mansfield, III.-I am laboring in Bro. J. Barnhart's congregation. Two applicants came out last night, one a daughter of brother Barnhart, and the other formerly a Baptist, a Free Mason and ex-Sheriff of Bourbon Co., Kansas and a man of influence here. The weather has been unfavorable yet the interest is good. D. B. Gibson.

Oct. 12, 1879,

Plymouth, Ind.—Our church is still increasing. To-day one was added, last Subbath one. and several during the Summer and others are counting the cost. I do hope the brethren and sisters will do all in their power to save poor souls as the time is drawing near when we can-John Knisley. Oct. 12, 1879.

Panora, Iowa.-Brother Emoch Eby just closed a series of meetings in the Coon River Church which was very well attended and we trust that though there were no additions, the church was much built up and we hope the fruits thereof may be seen many days hence, J. D. HAUGHTELIN.

Oct. 2nd, '79,

From Locke, Ind,-We are still moving along in the even tenor of our way spiritually, the Lord occusionally adding to us such as shall be saved. On the 5th, two more old citizens were buried in the liquid grave, and arose to walk in newness of life. May the Lord aid them and all his children to be diligently engaged in gathering oil so as to have a sufficiency when the Bridegroom comes. J. R. M.

Goshen, Ind.—The work is still going on in this part of the Lord's vineyard. One was buptized in August and yesterday, Oct. 5th, we had the pleasure of seeing two young sisters willing to take up the cross and follow Jesus, which I think is the result of Sunday-school labors,— The majority of the young people here are members of the church, and I hope that those who are not will remember that youth is the time to serve the bord. Some may want for a more convenient season but that season-may never come. If is true we are young and our faces glow with youthful vigor, yet while we are thinking of this we should remember that many younger than we have died, and some very suddenly. Then, dear reader, if you are on the straight and marrow road, press forward and you will gain a rich reward, but if you have not unde your peace with God, ilo so to day, for to morrow may be too late.

For the Missionary Work.

DRETHREN sometimes ask the question, D. Where do we find the word missionary in the Scriptures? I answer, our every page. Precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there much. This word means duty and begins on a mother's Jup, at the family altar, in the Sunday-school and public meeting. A text for the Missionary work will be found in Mark 16: 16; Matt. 38: 19, 20. Who obeys this command?

Peter, after his conversion, must strengthen the brethren. Paul became all things to all men to gain some. This ancient missionary did not only go among well-organized churches, but raised his voice against superstition at Mars Hill, and boldly rebuked Corinthian disorder. Our hord, in his parable, gave to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. The invitation into the vineyard is not to be idle, neither should the missionary want for pay and an easy coach, but go torth in hope for a penny a day. A good workmen in this, should, like an experienced hunter, not shoot too far.

We extend an invitation to the Brotherhood to meet at the Solomon's Creek Church, Ind., on the 24th of October in behalf of the cause Will the adjoining district take part and make good use of our strange brethren, and make a strong effort to extend the influence of the ore, bren by turnsbing subscribers for the good papers, scholars for their schools, and money for Tract- and Mission work? There is bread and to spare to feed all; for God has blessed us DANIEL SHIVELY.

Among the Brethren in Missouri,

WE left Ft. Scott, Knusas on the morning of the 7th inst., and reached Clinton, Mo., after a pleasant ride of four hours. Our esteemed brother, J. S. Mohler, met us at the train and conveyed us to his home where we spent the day pleasantly. Brother Mohler is one of our active brethren. He not only lifts up his voice in defense of primitive Christianity, but wields his pen no less valaintly.

On the morning of the 5th, brethren C. Harader, George Barnbart and S. Click arrived, and in company with these and brethren Mohler and Wolf, we went to the Mineral Creek Church some twenty miles north. On the morning of the 9th, met in council. The proceedings are given in another column. Owing to the lateness of closing the day's labors there was no preaching, Met again in council on the morning of the 10th, and after a tedious and patient day's work in adjusting difficulties, we were very glad to find rest at the home of brother S. S. Mohler. Brother Mohler is the active elder in charge of the church, and is assisted in the ministry by F. Culp, John Mohler, D. M. Mohler and ——Hiatt. This church has seen some severetrials in its history, out a brighter future seems to be dawning for them. The members are plainly adorned, are sociable, hospitable, charitable and kind. To say that they are "narrow," "bigoted," "selfish," "cold and formal," beight do for one who cares not what he says, and says it simply to hear himself, but it cannot be said by him who has a regard for truth and. Christian cour-

Met at 10 A. M on the 11th for public worship. Theme, Prayer. In the evening, brother John C. Miller, of Linn Co., lown, addressed the congregation. On Sunday forenoon and in the evening the members, and others, assembled to hear the preacher. May the Lord give the increase. Gladly would we have remained among the brethren in Missouri a little while longer, but other engagements would not permit us. To those who are looking for limits in the West, we would say, go look at Johnson and Henry counties, Mo. Brother S. S. Mobiler of Cornelia, Johnson county, brother J. S. Mohler of Clinton, Henry county, Mo, and others will gladly aid you in becoming acquainted with their country. The crops there are good, the land rich and beautiful, and the society, so far as we could learn, is good.

We left the loved ones in Missouri on the murning of the 13th and arrived home the 14th, ghal to meet nor dear brethren, and sisters of old-time associations. M. M. E.

A HYMN. (From the German).

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

Y God, this heart I bring to thee, An offering and a gift, Thou claimest this, O Lord, of me, As I my thoughts uplift-

"Give me, my child, thy heart, thou sayest, That is to me of worth; Thou findest, otherwise, no rest. In beaven nor on earth."

O, thou, my Futher, take it then, My heart, despise it not, I give it, Lord, as best I can; Turn thou to me, O, God!

Though it is full of sais, mine own. And full of vanity: Thy goodness there is yet onknown, That vital piety.

Though it is now in penitence, Knows its depravity; And hates those things, without pretense Where it could pleasure see,

It falls and hys love at thy feet, And cries in curnest for, Bruise me, O. Lord, that L works meet May for repentance do."

Grind up the bardness of my heart, Make mellow my desire, That I with sighs and grouns, apart, And tears to thee aspire.

Accept me then, my desis Christ, Baptize me in thy blood, I believe thou hast been crocified, The world and no for good.

Make strong my feeble hand of faith. That I thy blood may feel; As the comsecu-pledge, it ladk Provided all things well.

Grant me according to thy means, Salvation, sanctity; And take upon thyself my sins And bear my penalty.

James. Good morning, Parson diowd meaning, James,

A. Where me you going, Parson. P. I am on my way to fill an appointmest.

J. How many appointments have you per month?

P. Four.

d. Well this keeps you pastly basy. takes up much of your time. It certains h inverfores largely with your business. I don't see how you can make a living.

P. -O. preaching is my business! 1 look for my gain from my quarter just as lawyers and doctors do.

J. =0, you do; well how does this al ary preaching work among your people anyhow:

P. Well, pretty much the same as other business transactions work. It is a sort of a unique of the latter game. The congregations never get a preacher cheap er than they thank is right, and the preacher never gets crongle anyway. You the section to some what getterlin my myself generally agreeable, both in and out of the pulpit, to preach to suit my people; for you know that a preacher that don't do this, don't stand much show now-a days of getting a call,—especially from a rich church where the pay is good, and the pay part is a very important consideration; and then my wife is expected to be sort of a leader in society, do a good bit of visiting around. and all this costs time and money,-and the fact is, I don't think the preacher's wife aught to do much drudgery in house work anyway. So you see the chances are poor enough to lay up something for a rainy day,

J .- Well, won't your people take care, and provide for your worn out preachers?

P. -I don't like to risk that thing. You see our people think when they pay for a thing as they go, that that ends the contract. They look at it in a business. like way, and really they are about right about the matter, for the preachers have made preaching a profession, and the success of the whole thing, that is the mine, and on account of my plain preachpreacher's pay, depends largely on the amount of brains and policy, especially policy, which he can offer in the market.

J. But don't you think though that they possess a real love for the souls of men, and that they have this as an inducement to preach, too, beside the pay?

P.—O I suppose so! but I confess that the thing is a kind of a puzzle to me to know just how it is. You see there are a good many things in the Bible that ought to be preached, and practiced too. but I just know our people wen't stand it; such as not to dress fashionably, nor to go to law, pienics, festivals, theatres, and ever so many more things; for the preacher that dares to say anything to do just about as he pleases? against such like things, neight as well have his funeral preached, anyway his pay would stop sure; and that we can't stand, and so we have just got to do the best we can't so while we leverheir souls, we must give it that kind of a shape; last I am not without hope either, for the Lord knows the fix preachers have got into. He knows we'ce just got to suit the people, and then too, I sometimes! think that may be, that rather a conservative course in these matters is best; for people, I mean good people, differ on all these things. Their training, you know has been different, and get they are henest, but still they can't see alike. The science of phrenchogy teaches us this: There are certain organs, or bumps, rather, an one's head that in different persons are differently developed, which all go to show that people will hone thy diff. ferr.

New there is brother Let-live, year know he belongs to the Dissenters, and he believes in baby sprinkling, and real ly thinks that's what the Scriptures teacle; but I don't believe that, and yet Brother Let live is certainly a good man. and realous for the cause. You just ought to have heard the warm, carnest not help lost say, Amen, to it. Now for stand it; rigid as they are for "much water, and I believe it is my duty to own consult the public taste, and to make line drawn through a dark place which can generally count on a pretty sur can only be faintly seen, and the people, though they differ, are still trying to work up to that line,—some on this side, and some on the other side.

J.—If I understand you, you mean to say, that there is in reason, some kind of a compromise ground that men get into as soon as they start for this Scripture line,—and before they reach it.

P.—Yes, things work so much smooth. er, and I hke it.

J.—Do you mean to say, that the Scriptures are so hard to understand that it is not advisable to preach positively that it means so and so, or to say, if we do not live accordingly we cannot be say-

P.—Well, yes, something of the kind. You see I have had a little experience in that direction. Before I just knew how to manage this thing peaceably. I preached tolerably pointed, and of course it limit some, so an old preacher that understood the business better than I did, he belonged to a different church than; ing, he felt cramped, and so be teame to see me, and just plainly told me, that, "that kind of preaching people do not like, they talk hard about you, and that good men do not like to be put out with the world, and besides it is as much as saying that you are right and all others are wrong," and the fact is, James, the thing looks just about that way, and I find it really works smoother, to be a little tender in points of difference, and when I consider my money prospects, I have just got to be tember, I can't help it, I can't afford to be unpopular, I want my pay, my market value is my hope for a living.

J. But don't that allow every person.

P. -Well, yes, that is just about the way of it, but you know Paul says, "Let every man be fully persimiled in his own mind," and I find that works lest and unjouves my jeay.

d. - Suppose though people would claim that privilege in respect to paying the prencher, how then?

P. Well, that might be fough on the premeler, lesides, it would show great sellisim ss, and I don't think they would get very much preaching.

J. At Strikes me that looks more like preaching for the leve of money than for the souls of men.

P. I confess I don't like that grizzly looking skeleton myself, but then I can't live on nothing, I must have pay for ga esching.

J. Suppose though people refused parving preachers.

 $(P, -\Delta h)$, we attend to that matter, that is part of the preachers programme, to teach people so they get the idea that preachers ought to be paid. You see protracted meetings two, three, or more weeks, and get sometimes twenty or thir ty or more to "join meeting," and then our people are made to feel good, and it | prayer he made the other night 1 could is natural for people to show their good feelings by giving us some money, and metosay that he is no Christian, wouldn't | that you see is our opportunity to tell do at all. My own people wouldn't them that it is true; this money will come good to buy sugar and coffee and clothing for the wife, and children, and him as one of God's chosen ones. He we strike a tender spot when we talk will think more of me, so will his poor that way, and besides all that, we know ple; and my own people are encouraged, people like to be praised, and we work when they see I am generally well liked, on that, so you see we get them to feel tell the brother of his good work in the and they had much rather pay me their that the way to do a nice thing by nice church, and of his position of usefulness, see by our envelope of cold. I am money this was, than if I preached the men, is to have the rich members porblo how he is looked up to, show this as a straight doctrine of the Scriptures as I others in this good work; and by us get Christian duty; quote a little Scripture zagemance, and besides, keep myself understand it; and then I sometimes ting some good brother, or sister, to do in the talk, especially about "doing good, thing for our pay, and that is the thing to stir us up to try other parts.

J.—I confess I can't understand this thing. Now over here is the "C. church" that don't often have meeting, and I learn it is on account of not being able to raise money for the preacher.

P.—O, all they need is a good drill! master, and I find that it is a good way with such, to talk with the sisters about it, to tell them to plant a patch of beans or potatoes, or cabbage, and set apar six or eight setting of eggs, so as to raise four or five dozen chickens; then to tote off the beans, potatoes, cabbage, and some of the chickens to market, and sell them for "preacher money," saving some of the chickens for the preacher when he comes around to look after their spiritu. al interests. Now you see that is the way to work up such a church,

J.—But don't you think many of the sisters need the hears, cableage, and so on, to get someting for their own famil.

P.-O, to talk to them though in that way works good. It makes them think of the prencher when they pull their beans, and enbloge, and especially when they eat a chicken at home, and it gen. eraily ends by the preacher getting some. thing, even if they have to stint them. selves mightily to spare it. Women have a tack of scraping things together, and of singing their hullabies to baby, even if they haven't just got good things to eat, or warm clothes to wear. They are sorter good somehow, and are calculated for the buiness of naking others hap. py, especially the preacher, though they are distressed a little themselves by it.

J. -Well, Parson, do you think that's exactly fair? P. =0, yes; its dividing the burden, you see. We know that women are sort of ministering spirits. They have a natural that of doing nice things, and we simply appeal to this trait, and the idea of paying preachers needs a littlestinglant frequently, and to get the women to take hold of it, has a soothingly-spurring up offect on the close-fisted men, and they generally shell out, and that's the point. I don't see how we preachers could get along at all, but for the weemen helping us, we would be addiged to go to work for a living.

ole "Well, suppose you would. Other people most too, why not the preacher? Paul worked while he was a preacher.

P That would look as if they were wouldly minded, and then it gives one a bony-handed-bronzed, appearance, and I believe it will make the brain sort a dull.

 As for the appearance of worldliness, I don't see that preaching for money changes that much, and as for having the appearance of a working man, we either them our services, and hold hadn't you rather have that than to have the people arways growling at the preacher's love of money - money! I just the other day heard a church member say that he is going to quit paying preachers until he is able to dress himself and family as well as the preacher and his family are dressed, and a good many people are just his way of think-

1'. O, such things don't scare us; it is an easy matter to consuch a brother into giving a nice bit, a good plan is to call at his house, pray with the family. ported on the movements of the times. think the Scriptures are a little like a a little wire-working among the rest, we and to communicate," why we meet just such cases, and you see we are prend for them, and when we come across they generally come off second best, we of course get money to go on in

I. I see you have given this matter attention, and are prepared to col money under difficulties.

P.-Attention, I guess we have, and shouldn't we? for the laborer is orthy of his hire, and we want it too. ow that's Scripture.

L-Don't you think, though Parson, But your reward in heaven will be great for a gratuitous ministry, and besides would be rid of the annoyances atading a paid ministry?

P.—That's rather fine, James. The gt is, I had rather have a sure thing of thy having pay now. It is now, I need gead and butter, and as for the annoynce, we manage to get that onto some ody else. J.-Well, Parson, you know the meaching. Why can't you and every body else do the same?

P. O, the "Dunkard brethren," you know, that they are eighteen hundred rears behind the age with their religion: the comparison you make is not fair at

I.—But they have as much, or more habits are no further behind the age than

Who do you think would discreditable? want to pay for such preaching!

J-1 don't know that they are any more unpopular than the gospel is, and lam sure they preach it, and ask no you it won't be long until our people will take the outside of the house.

Well, what of it! that don't prove orable. that they don't preach the gospel, neithseems to me the Scriptures say some and church! thing of the kind, about itching cars, ple have itching cars, that the preachers have itching pockets; and really Par son, I am afraid we are in a bad box.

P. Bad hox or not, these Dunkard brethren may do for the unrefined and ignorant masses: but they would not do at all where there is any figure to cut. To do this requires tact, talent, policy. great flexibility, and snavity, of man ners; and a man can't stand all this trimming up to please people for nothing.

J. But they somehow are generally found in line with Christ and the apistles. Christ, you know, thanked his heavenly Father than "these things were hid from the wise and prodent, and revealed them unto babes; and Park says, God chose the foolish things of the world to confound the wise." Which now do you think has the surest thing of their Christianity, you or they!

P.-Well, I have the surest thing as far as pay for preaching is concerned, also for being more satisfactory to the people, and that's a great comfort. Why, I am invited to nearly all kinds of social gatherings; such as pienies, Christmas you never heard of a Dunkard preacher; bleed their hearts afresh. I do wish you festivals, conventions, marriages in high or church member being a partper in would quit this whole business the pay life, Samlay school celebrations, and so on, but I never heard of 3me of their preachers being so invited; this shows who is best liked.

J.—Right here they are again found? on gospel ground, for it says, "Whatso ever is highy esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God." 1 am afraid you are in a bad box again, for all these gatherings you alluded to, are highly esteemed of men, and you are iu for them.

P.—You will soon come out "turncoat," and join this unpolished set, I guess. You will see it won't be long until your model "Dunkard brethren" will be in the same boat with us, even now, I hear that in some parts they are clamoring for pay for preaching. They cannot long withstand the civilizing influences of the age, you will see.

J.—Yes, I heard something of this too. but I learn that the places where they ask pay for preaching, they have drifted from punkard brethren" don't have a paid the time honored landmarks, and lost inistry, and yet they do a great deal of their simplicity, and run into disorder; and actually where such is the case, a few of their preachers, as you say, "have got into your boat, but the great mass of them stand opposed to a paid minis-

P. Well, what of that. It still shows that they are following in our wake,

J. But this is no credit to you, Pargisped than any other church, and their son, it shows that you take comfort to yourself, from what is a disorder among them. In other words, it shows you are P.-Why, James, they have not a bit willing to shake hands with confusion, and clothe yourself with the misfortune of a good people. You are in a bad box

P. I wish you would quit talking that way. Do you call paying preachers

It is a fact when any of our people become too poor to pay the preacher anything, they get the cold shoulder quick, and as they can't dress up, a little genteel like, they become to others a source of mortification. We know that the preachers don't like to have an introduction to such a brother or sister, and knowing that they generally make short work of their sociality with such, we seldom try to have the preacher made acquainted with

P - James, you draw an ugly picture. on us, I don't like it. I know nothing of what you say, as to the truth of it.

J .- That may all be true, but that's the mischief of it; but you just go among the poor members as 1 frequently do. Go and hear them complain and weep at their forced isolation, because of their excluding them from social recognition, and they feel they are so excluded, because of the pride, which the preacher pay system is calculated to foster.

P. Do you mean to say that the paypreaching system establishes caste in our churches? And that we preachers only get to see the bright side of it, and not the dark side?

J. - According to your showing, the thing has no dark side. You seemingly are as ignorant of the deep under current attending this preacher pay-system as is a Hindoo. In its effect, on the preacher, at least, I am led to regard the principle of paying preachers somewhat similar to the principle which the old pharisecs stood in line with, which led them to make beautiful the sepulchre without. and within they were full of dead men's

P. James, it is a downright shame to talk that way about the preacher's that take pay for preaching. You charge the pay system with the weeping and forced isolation of our poor members. I believe true humility will be reconciled to its lot. God so orders it that some are poor. Now don't change their condition, sad as it is, on us. Those poor whictaik as you say, just show how proud they themselves are. If they were humble they wouldn't talk that

J. One thing is certain, Parson, if it. That's one way of putting it, and the preachers would quit this pay sysyou would dark to preach the truth, and were no generosity among them, as if a | I warrant you if you preach the whole pure grapel awakened no noble impulses, truth, people will quit inviting you to as if they left their self denying preach their political, social, and nonscusical gatherings, and you would feel more like pressions of sympathay. No. no. that mingling with the poor. Your eyes would way of telling it won't do. A people by opened to see the false coloring which more generous, more willing to relieve this preacher-tickling, and this peoplethe needy, than they, are not found. A mekling system garries with it. For a good bit about him, and from all I pure gospel always produces motival the people don't bargain with the sympathy, and seeks opportunity to no preacher, to pay him, and thus please good. While a mercenary gospel closes him, without expecting in turn, that the up and stifles generous impulses. You preacher will please them by being very being with a by your own confession of mild in reference to popular sins. They how you must "play policy" to get our don't pay him to please the poor, who people to pay you, and then think you could not pay; they themselves expect don't get enough, and always trying for to be pleased. Thus it's a mutual exmore; and whenever a rich church offers | change, in which the poor don't figure more salary than a poor one, then you at all on either side, and they feel it: and us to gone insumation, that such well, I hardly know how, i.e., the Lord pear are quoted, when complaining at calls you to preach, where you get, the their forced isolation from Christian sobiggest pay. My own impression is it's qualifity, nothing else could have prompt the money that called you to leave the ed you to say this, but a self-justifying poor church for the rich one. Money spirit, which to gratify itself does not makes men selfish, and ungenerous. Why, hositate to give the poor another stab and, system, the false glare of popular approval, and your social ostracism.

P.—Suppose I would quit it and preach as you say my convictions of truth as taught by the Bible, what for a figure do you suppose I would cut among 10y clerical brethren who preach for pay? Such preaching would get up a general howl along the line, and all kinds of things would be said about mc. No congregation would dure to call me to preach for them any more

J.—Well, let them howl. In fact 1 think the howl, if any, ought to be on the other side awhile. Paul did that same thing down there at Ephesus, you know, there was a man there that made money by his religion, I don't know whether he was a preacher, but anyway Paul stirred him up, and they had a big howl at Paul, and he just let them howl, and that's just my notion about it.

P.- Yes, yes, but we are to be "wise as serpents," so the Bible says, and you know one man can accomplish nothing. J.- Yes, but the Bible don't say we are to act like scrpents. Will you promise me that you will make an effort to stop this pay system? I will help you, and we can soon see what can be done? P.- No, I will not promise at this time. You see my year's preaching over here is nearly up, and I have several hundred dolars about due me, and to go into this thing just now, would cut me out of my money, sure. No, I can't now. Suppose it would, can't you make some sacrifice for the truth's sake, so you could preach it? I would like to hear a sermon from a free man once. My idea is, there would be some old-time gospel song in such a sermon.

P. -But what am I to do for a hying, if I let my prospects from preaching

J. You would simply place yourself along side of us, sharing with us the burden of life, as it is. We must toil and save, to support our own families, and also support the preacher and his family, and the burden of all this amounts to something, from which you are exempt. But the greatest adjection against the system of paying preachers, is the things we talked over, and as for your living, apart from preaching for it, y m need have no fears, for generous, hearts and loving hands will not los wanting under pure gaspel to see to the needs of their ministry.

P. Well, James, I will consider over the matter, and in the meantime | I | will try and inform myself more of the working of the now paying preacher system as practiced by the "Dunkard" brethren I would like to have a talk with one of their preschers, Can you direct me to

J .- I don't know that I can direct you you to a better representative of their principles and habits than to "John Pious." Are, you acquainted with him?

P. -Very little. I am much better acquainted with Mr. "Fact" who keeps a notion store at the four corners, takes in lodgers, does some preaching around, and I think is a pretty fair sort of a man, Our congregations at times buy their masks and trinkets for our Christianis festivals, and mint julip for our church sociables at the "corper."

J.-I don't know him but have hear i hear his name does not belie the man. He is one of those that wants pass of r preaching; they say he is a smooth 'a's r. and those members of his church was are inclined after popular tastes, and habits, stand by him, they would be willing to pay him for his preach as if they could just got some of the corp preachers out of the way. He is e-sy on them, and is willing for there to do about as they choose; such as dres uz ... stylish, going to shows, taus, pieu s. and such like things, I don't think got would gain much by talking with a m But I tell you Parson, I'll gradoug with you to see Mr. Fact. 1d like to be a what he has to say, and it's a cross-1. round about way to his place, at 1 . I know the read; let us go together.

P. All right; come over: to m will suit me.

A. I'll be over.

OUR HOME,

AN ACROSTIC.

Mount of the orient, roung in grandour, Over thy snowy peaks, the sammy beams fall, Up from thy valleys the cedars are towering, Noble in beauty; mojestic and tall, Time in his onward murch, left us the record, Lighted with deeds which the martyrs have done! Earnest their work, for a truth they were growing, But we must toil till an increase is won. As o'er thy hill tops the sun rose in splember, Night stars receded from Heaven's blue urch, Over them still shines the light just as clearly, Night stars sing sweetly, as then, an their murch. Of while we're thanking of efforts of past time, Uplifting our spirits in praise for the true, Reserving the martyrs whose lives were devoted, Have we not a work in the present to do? Of yes, we must build up the city eternal, Made ready for souls that would dwell in accord, E on now it appears as a light to the nations, OUR HOME is expliced, the MOUNT of the Lord

WOMEN AT WORK.

BY DR. J. H. HANAFORD.

The present time there is a greater demand A for women than for men, as laborers,—n modern innovation. Indeed no woman of ordinary abilities need be without employment in this country, with so many branches of business open to her. It is true that some of these labors may seem mental, though just what the average housewife does in her own family, while it is mysterious that the same labor which we may do for ourselves is degrading when done for another.

The manufacturing establishments are now open to women to a greater extent than tormerly, while all the professions are ably represented by them. But the most important of these to her, as is believed, is that of a tencher of the young, to which she is admirably adapted. Fortunately, most of the schools of the ordinary guales are now taught by women, who are manifestly doing a better work in them, I governing better, on the whole, than the former occupants of these positions. If must be mimitted, however, that the value of female teachers is particularly manifest in the lower grades, where the most important impressions are made. Women, as a class, or real womens are "apt to teach." She is patient, is in sympathy with the young, understands their mods, their little sorrows, their tender minds, and by her silection can inthe acc, control may carde.

It is especially fortunate that the younger classes are generally in charge of women. Hos believed that yers, few, it any of the sherner sex can develop this class one essfully, can secure ous, or autorest of none sufficiently, leading them along, as at were, with a "silken

When we remove to first the first steps not by far the most important, the most easily faken, the other the most deficult to be obliferated, we may appreciate the importance of larying the best beichers in the Primary departs ment, these owing found, mainfestly among women. Women teach the more successfully by "object lessons," snar they are the most capable in adapting themselves to the expanity of the young in the select, in of the appropriate objects and fit illustrations. The finnd are more readily authorized by laying hearts, by the mother element. It is certain the moral nature may be mercafully sadested by the nathaence of a loving woman, one whose instinct it is particularly to love whildness as such, because they are young, helpless and confiling,

The Sadarheschool square a time held for the wide range of woman's call ence, one in which the power of the true mother may be supplemented. The test in pressions in this department of later are made in the tender years of chidnood, when the casusperting immortal eagerly recesses instentional obtlind in a pleasant gare, such as a woman may easily turnish. Woman's refinement, clear perceptions, and pleasing aidn -- admirably fit her for for this kind of in-traction of the very young, while it is believed that rude boys, verging on manhood in -tature, w.i. be better controlled and taught by a degrated woman-one of good sense and experience—than by u.m.—Hammat Work.

TO GOD,

4 TANDS to work, and hearts to prayer." II That was a maxim taught by our first founder on the earth, and is it not as meessary now, to-day, as it was then? And how can we put it in practice that we may reap the most benefits therefrom in a community? It is certainly not by standing still and waiting for the tides of life to turn, expecting something that will please our fancies, or yield the most enjoyment to self. It is not by sitting with our hands idly folded, and seeing our brother or sister lifting the heavy loads of care, without rising to duty and rendering our assistance, thus failing to call into action the Golden rule. It is not by finding fault with another for not doing what we do not like to do, but what is our duty to do; nor by leaving the stern battle of life for one or two to fight, and then expect a share of blessing in the victories won. Ah, may! If we would be noble men and women in the new creation, true brethren and sisters in Christ, we must together toil for the upbuilding of our homes, feeling that it is our home; we must together face the duties of life, lift the burdens, and lighten the cares, together seeking each other's comfort, and happiness, thus seenring the same blessing to ourselves.

In so doing, we will be hving examples of that fuith which we profess; and ours will be the inheritance of that Peace, which the world knows not of, because we have sown the seed, nourished the plant, and finally reap the harvest of patient toil and labor in Zion's cause, and our very lives will be the essence of praise to God.—Shaker Manifisto.

Many years since I mel, with the above little gena of poetry and copied at. It so fastened itself upon my mind, as containing much truth that the nupressions remained with me,

This Idoness of a family to a book seems a beautiful one, the parents representing the cover as a protection to the first tair leaves .-Then the thought of the leaves as blank, -a clothes the parents with a responsibility from which they cannot rid themselves, and cannot be overration. If was said thome ocold, 2 Take this child and nurse it to me." May not every parent take this as a command to Themseives? Does not this norsing mean this writing of memories, this painting of partness on these blank reaves that shall tell in beauty and strength lorever? His not God of the siditary in families for this very purpose? Leve is indeed a chasp; if we let u, if will bind up this wonderful trast, but it must be collivated or adits richness, that these leaves may not be last,

When the family a grown, let the surroundings still be love; let the interest of each on the other be retained by trequent correspondence, by often coming together, by the remembrance of britialitys, and in given way possible, keeping secure this bending.

When, even this protection be no more need. ed, and these leaves, written and painted nobly over, go to make up other books, let this same dasy of him be preserved in all its incliness at golden besurty. Then "lave shall lay each orner stone" of all our houses, -W. R. O.

Dear Brethrens—

UR council on the 23rd, found the members in love and union. It was unanimously agreed to carry into effect the premeditated resolution to have a Love-feast. The meeting was opened on the 1-t of October by Bro. McCrea, followed by brother Troxel. O, how our bearts throbbed as the brethren were speaking of the death and sufferings of our dear Redeemer. We are sorry to say that we had muthing but home talent to after but this exceeded our expectations. On the 2nd, Bro. Troxel addressed us from the 4th chapter of Micah. We were told not to give scant measare, in short to fill the half bushel fall and have a full sized one at that, and to walk lumbly with the Lord. All went away much refreshed and built up, so may we ever be. We have upwards of thirty members, here though widely scuttered over the counties. We have four descons and two speakers. Have had some few additions by letter and baptism during the past year. We would like very much to have some more ministers, and with the Macedonians. cry, "Come over and help us." Any brother wishing to pay us a visit and will give us two week's notice, will be promptly met at Wellington, and all communications intraded

S. I am alone this afternoon I feel like writ $oldsymbol{A}$ -ing something for your paper. I have had many trials and troubles during my short life. I am young in life and have had many temptations to endure. And perhaps many more to undergo. But hope, by the help of God, that we may endure them patiently. If we live thithful and obedient to the teachings of the word of God, be has promised us a home in heaven where I have a companion and two children, who were near and dear by the ties of nature. But it has been our heavenly Father's will to call them to their long home in heaven, while I was left to mourn their departure.

May we all so live that we may meet all the loved ones that have gone before, where separation will never come, neither sickness nor sorrow, nor pain, nor death, but where we can forever dwell together throughout the ceaseless. ages of eternity, and there to worship around the great white throne. -----Our Love-Feasts.

THE time has again come when the incellings but with is howeversess will be, and are being held throughout the Brotherhood, and we here offer a few suggestions to those who may he perceitted to attend and again celebrate the death or our Lord

1. Do not go simply because you have been in the legion of going, but no because you want more of Christian life within, and because you cannot afford to stay away from the place where this life is hist obtained. Do not let any small thing hunder you, and when there be sure to remember that each one particles of it for

2. Where there are many members in attendance let the effort be to hosten, as much as possible and is consistent, the services, so that no one becomes wearied. It can edity no one to be wearied over a fedious service. We suggest this had use we have seen patience almosed. and the care being little. There was too much half when posether service was going ou, and far too upo le said for any one to remember, ever of they laid wished:

3. Avoid anything like confusion, for God is not the author of this, nor do we think Him well pleased with it. We offer this because we have been at Love-feasts where the double mode of feet washing was practiced, as many as twenty brethren on the floor at once. The service then had more the appearance of a house raising than of a church ordinance.

4. To the speakers we would say, Do not abuse and condemn other churches, for Love does not throw stones at anybody, and besides you are not the judge of any man or of bis faith. Remember you are at a Love-feast, and do not fail to show these feelings, or you may have the feast without the prefix.

5. Do not on any account forget the feelings of the spectators, for with them your service will be respected, and they can not feel edited in standing from four to six hours in one position, and then get a scolding for being uneasy. Be courteons to all men and at all times, but especially at this time and place.

6. Do not as soon as the Feast is over, forget what you have just done, and he as thoughtless and worldly as ever, but try at all times to show to others that you lave Jesus better than before, and he willing to do more for him in the future. Also have each other more, be more kind, temler-hearted, forgiving one another more readily than ever before. If these are not seen, it will at once he thought, that you, did not least much on love. Let this spirit be

7. Do not think it is enough to enjoy these Feasts all for yourself, but talk to your neighbors and friends of the pleasure had whilst thus : feasting, and invite them to come in, that they may purtake of it with you. If you are selfish in any way or in anything do not be selfish in this, but be willing to ask and entreat others to come into the clumch and enjoy all its pleasures. Christians are not sellish. They want always that others share His goodness too.

Tall, to you children, not of the faults of the membership, but of their graces and virtues, and especially of your own enjoyment wholst in the Mister's work, John xiii: 17. The faults of others you have covered and let them remain so,

John says; "This is the love of God, that we to'ep his commandments, and his communidments are not grievous," A John 5; 3. Notice, 1. The commandments of God are not grievous, but delightful to those who love lum, (John 14; 21, 23, 21) 2. The commands to observe the holy kiss are so distas'eful, and grievous to Haptisi churches that they will not obey them. 3 Therefore Baptist churches do not truly lave God. How then can they be charactes of Jesus Christ? Read, again, John 14: 21, 23, 24. The passages a blaced by my friend, to show that salvation is combitioned upon faith without the deeds of the law, we believe and teach, but his cometision that from is therefore justified by faith without bootism, without work of gospel obethence, I reject as foreign to the phages, suphistical and acti-scriptural. (f) Peter says, "Repeat and be bapt zed every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for veis, in order to) the remission of sins." Acts 2: 38, Baptists instead of instructing penitent anquirers after this old, inspired, apostolic and primitive pattern, instruct them to repent in order to remission but he haptized because their sins are remitted. Their method of charging this scripture doctrine would make Chara instead of saying, "This is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for many for (cis in order to) the remission of sins," (Matt 26; 28), say it is shed because their sine are aready remitted. Thus the position of the Baptist church entirely changes the sense of the word of God. Baptists deny the relation bit we're baptism and salvation which Christ himself instituted in the great commission. He said, "He that believeth and is haplized shah be saved." Mark 16; 18. The Baptists proclaim that he who believes and is not haptized shall be savel. How our those who thus reverse the very constitution of the gospel be charalies of Cirast?

WALKING ADVERTISEMENTS.

IN most of cure ties one will see upon the streets men we cring large ad c'ath or indiarubber coats with advertisements pointed inpenthem. Why is this? Because the dealers have come to believe this a more effectual method of attracting the astention of the people its shelr wares than the usual poster. A man is more libely to be impressed by a mover-advert esment than by co that is passed to the fence.

It is so in matters of religion. TAKE ME TO THE GOLDEN SHORE.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD

Fou earth I treasure wisdom. Which is not of worldly lore; When I die, wilt thou, dear Jesus. Take me to the golden shore?

When with loving triends I'm talking, Of the pleasant days of yore; If death's summons should surprise me. Take me to the golden shore.

When I've fought my earthly battle, And have food in heaven my store; Then, dear Savior, take me over,-Take me to the golden shore.

When I'm crossing death's cold river, And my life's on earth no more. Then, dear Jesus, loving Savior. Take me to the golden shore.

When my spirit leaves this body, Grant that it on wings shall soar, To thyself in realms of glory.--Take me to the golden shore.

May I ask of thee, dear Savior, When my course on earth is o'er, That then wilt in tender mercy, Take me to the golden shore.

There is not the shadow of truth in the assertion that Adam's moral imbecility was the cause of his apostasy, and I challenge the production of evidence from revelation, or the moral history of man, to support it The power of man to defy God, and bea God to himself in will and object, is the vertebral element of human nature, and the mystery of the primal lapse. The opposite is purely gratuitous, a make shift to serve a theological dilemma "Theserpent implanted" no "falsehood." "He presented a false alternative, uttered a blank lie, and Adam knew it, and might have resisted with the triumph of Omnipotence, as the image or duplication of Deity in him had reference to their moutual relation to "good and reil." Turs fixes the sin where all human experience testifies-in the consciousness of violated moral integrity; or in sacred definition, the knowledge of evil as a personal fact. So strong is human nature, even in its rains, that the combined powers of earth and hell cannot override our moral rectitude against our will. There was no "talks impression" made in the case of the first offenders, else the act had not been sin. To swallow a fatal dose of prussic acid unwittingly is not snieide. Whatever impression Adam and Eve had was wholly on the side of right and victory. This is corroborated by the concomitant sense of guilt in yielding to wrong despite the immanence of Derty to prove invulnerable to the severest moral siege of all the legions of Apollyon. They had the sause of God and truth as they had of existence, and could not otherwise, unless we ascribe to them, the mental and moral states of the apostasy before they apostatized. Adam knew the truth, mentally and more ally, and that kept him free. He could not be impressed with the false notion that the opposite of the Divine mandate was also true. The impression was not false, but normal, deepening his sense of right, leaving him without excuse. Thus is THE HISTORY OF SEVEN LATERY SOLE. FAMILY RELIGION.

MHERE is not a small army of real Christians, who, though husband and wife are believers, yet both are not joined in one mind; one goes to this denomination, the other to that; and thus the house is divided, and the children are either left to go where they please, or perhaps some go to one place with the father, and others go with the mother, and thus a spirit of discord and strife is engendered, and religion, as it is called, is despised by the children. Such children generally grow up worldly people, and when the little home restraint, if there is or has been any, is removed, and the children go into the world, they are soon swallowed aprin the vortex of sin, and the parents are left to mourn over their mistakes. But alas, it is then too late to undo the past.

Such people often ascribe their sorrows to the sovereignty of the divine will. One of these said to me a short well in its place. But we can't live upon religion." I replied, "Your religion I would not give a penny an acre for; it neither brings blessing to you nor to yours." I added, "I believe the most terrible in the hand of God upon disobedient parents, is their children. What you are to God will be proved very offen by what your children are to you."

Speculations is regard to Platonism and the "bysteries of Egyptian theology" became now the head of muone and then an apple of discord. But the Bible was tree

Going into the island of Britan, where the ideas of the great reformer were most rapidly developed, we see the beggarly elements of the nal forms and opinions of men developing the "Spuit alone" theory under the to-ter-care of George Pox. Such sansting were the recentor thes of Reman Catholicism that when men sought to throw them off and become tree and untranumeled, they invariably settled down on the other extreme, which, in its demoralizing rallment is was little belter than the trying pan from which they had just escaped. Indeed reagreed materix were so mixed that lead thathave might well exchain, "A Popsh littings Calvin to principles, and or American charge They was the consistence of things been than . continue after the Bible on of five by Martin ed intreputity rested his plea on the intallible Word only, not had this been taken up by ina sociates and sociated threadhout the then Gnown religious world a mighty work would have been done for Christian ty. In thus rearecognized and the office. Price of plot to take a boson themselves. They need stated on structly following the infallable Word They did much for mankind, but had they inmuch work might have been accomplished

But Platenism and mysticism hegat "faithalone." Cruel forms and ceremonies evolved "Spirit-alone." The five points of Calvinian generated the five points of Armineanism; and the Westminster Creed produced a hundred others, so that instead of the Bible alone being the only basis of union there are honotreds of fine spun theories presented to the ulter confusion of minds who are seeking to be released from the fetters of sin. But the Bible was liberated, and the way open for others to accept it us their only guide to eternal joy and pence.

Bring tired of new and old creeds, and failing to realize from the various reforms around them, that holiness of character set forth in the Word of God, a few humble, unpretentions souls resolved, in the beginning of the 18th century to accept the Bible as their only intructor in matters of eternal salvation. They knew that the improvement of no creed outside the New Testament, could ever become the hasis of Christian union and restore to the worlding the ancient practice in all its simplicity. . They therefore agreed, by the grace of God, to devote their hves to the restoration of primitive Christianity, believing that its super. rity and exceeding simplicity would commend itself to all soher and reflecting minds. And it is not at all improbable that in their palgrimage they met others who also lifted their voices for the Bible only, yet were all the while preaching the Copinions of saint Arean, or saint Athanasius," This class is still numerous. The Bible and the Bible only is their plea, which plea when baid bare means, the Bible with the opinions of sand so, and sand seattached. One has a litthe anticentists from Tyndale and Spencer, with his Bibl. alone; another has a little unior, dron, while the third puts spiritualism with his. This only muddles matters,

The little hand who Carlessly out loose from dl Sectorionism made the Bible their sale fext Bods. Bud they wish to I now the mind of the hand? They sought it in the B bbs. Had they lation and discour, so that the ground gain of difficulties mining themselves? They adjusted them in himmony with the one less Book. Were forms to be adopted expressive of primaples? That which is bound in the Gospot produced fulls and observer, and core will. So actimes the principles of the Gospel and our equinous are to acl at variance with each other, and the question, whether the principles shall vield to the opinions or the opinions be sacrificed to the jume place must be decided. Here langes the destrict of many. Opinions are dear to them; and rather than bury them bemeath the much's mullstone of truth, they report the undying principles of the infallable Word and preish.

Our Brethren who were foremost in the grand reformators movements of the last centory could believe and dad believe that the divinely inspired Worst of Gold is the only gennthe anthough for every act of worship and obedicince to God. This regarded it as being schipled to the colightenment of benighted minds, and the government of the elect. That they cought advice of one another as to the be a methods of expressing practical piety and holimes of the racter, is not doubted by us; but this coensel was without princity, was not corred upon each other. Some say, "Be careful about preaching doctrine here; the people are tired of doctrine, and want something else." Precisely! The Pharisces and Sadducees, the chief priesis, scribes, and elders were very fired of Christ's doctrine and wanted something else. "The people were astonished at his ductrine" (Matt. 7:28). And when Peter and John heated the lame man at the temple and thus stirred up the wrath of the rulers who called a council and tried the apostles in their absence, said, "Did we not straitly command you that yo should not teach in his name? and beholf ye have filled stornsalem with your doctime" (Acts 5: 25) The chief presty did not like the doctrine, and the tashio table presses of this age are no more inclined to receive the chan were the Jewish priests. FROM PALESTINE,

NUMBER XXIX

From Jerusalem to Nablus.

(Fixin the "Christian Stanfard" by special Armagement.)] AVING made a detour of force or four miles to the west of the main road leadng nasta from Jernade n, on leaving. Gibeon, we followed a path which brought us back into that road before we reached Bethel. Thence we rode to a spring called Robber's Fountain, about 15 miles north of Jernsalem, where we found our tents pitched for the night. The road hes nearly on the water-shed between the shipes which descend to the Jordan and those which descend to the Mediterranean, but there is no continuous dividing ridge for it to fellow, and it constantly crosses the head of the Wadies, which descend, first one way and then the other. It is, therefore, quite an uneven road, and very rough. Traces of an ancient paved road are occasioually seen.

On the nest day we rode to Nablus, the anicut Shechem; but on the way we made a detour to the right, in order to visit the site of Shilloh — The place is easily identified, both by its Arab mance, Sciling which is a corruption of Shitab, and by its correspondence to what is said of Shilloh in the Scriptures.

built over the well, and water was drawn from it through un opening in the floor of the church near its eastern end. This church is now in rning, its foundation walls and the underground chambers whose arched ceilings supported the stone floor of the church, alone remaining. In one of these chambers the well is now found, and you have to clamber down through the broken arch and over a rough heap of fullen stones, to reach its mouth. The mouth of the well was arched over like a cistern by the builders of the church, and a circular opening twenty inches in diameter was left at the top of the ach. This opening is now closed by a wedgeshaped rock which we were got able to remove. But we found, beneath a pile of stones a little to one side, a break in the arch, and we succeeded in uncovering this, so as to get a peep into the well. The well is seven and one-half feet in diameter, and is walled with good masonry, very much like that of Ahraham's wells at Beer sheba. When Dr. Robinson measured if in 1838, it was 105 feet deep; but in 1870, when measured by Capt. Anderson, it was only seventy-five feet deep, and my own tape line touched the hottom at sixty-six feet. This change is caused by the practice, universal among the thousands who visit it aunually, of throwing in stones to hear them strike the bottom, and it accounts for the first that the well is now dry. It was wise to stop up the mouth with stones and put a check to this practice; and we were careful to replace the stones as we found

It robs one of much enjoyment, on visiting sach a spot, to find it so different from what it was. The folloof building a church over this well, nestend of bearing it and keeping it as it was when Jesus sat upon it, is amazing. But such is the loreditary folly of the Grock and Lidin priests, who have diffied almost every sisand spot in Palestine with their chapels, their masses, and their lying traditiones. I was told in X dons, that the Greeks are about to reladid the church over this well, and I devontly wish that before they began some -ensible man will buy the property and restore the well's month to its reginal appearance; the model for which shile and with well at Abrilian at Rear-

The vicinity of this well is abundantly supplied with mater, and a rudning stream from a copion spring arrigates the plain immediately north of it. The inhabitants of the land would seem rever to have needed a well here, and now that if a day they do not miss at. Why, then, the good labor and expense of aigenig it? Thropo dum can be satisfactorily answered, only on the supposition that if was dog by A eab. Had he not ben astranger in the bond, the thought could not have occurred to him. The very existence of the well, then, is proof of the scrip toral trade on that Jacon dug it.

About six hundred yards north of Jacob's well, is the tomb of Joseph. The tomb itself is in the shape of a modern grave, built of shows and covered with plaster. It is seven test long, three feet high, and three feet wide. It is surrounded by a stone wall twenty-five test square and ten feet high, rehulf, according to the inscription on a marble slab let into the wall, by a Mr. Rogers, British Consul at Damaseus, m 1868. The tomb is also modern, and was evidently hull by the Mohammedans, for it has the shape that uniformly seen in Mohammedou graveyards. But this modern work is only a reconstruction of the more ancient, and as Joseph was certainly buried in this immediate vientity, I can readily believe that this nomb muchs his barial place.

name, Nahlus, in an Arabic corruption of this. It is a well built town, stretching along the foot of Mt. Gerizim and standing about half way across the valley toward Mt. Ebal. It has a population of 13,000, and is a place of considerable business importance. The most remarkable part of the population is the remnant of 130 Samaritans, descendants of the original stock, who maintain a synagogue, and still keep up the observance of three great Mosaic festivals, the Passover, the Pentecost, and the tabernacle. Every year at the appointed time, they uscend Mt. Gerizim in solemn procession, and sacrifice the paschal lamb. I visited the spot where the sacrifice is offered, and picked up some charred pieces of the bones of the offering made there this year. The Samuritans helieve that Mt. Gerizim is the center of the world, and the highest mountain in the world. Lieut. Conder talking with the high priest on this latter point, told him just to look across to Mt, Ebal, and he could see that even it was higher! But the old man answered, "It seems so, but it cannot be; for Mt. Gerizin is the highest mountain in the world." I suppose we might call this walking by faith and not by sight.

WHAT A MOTHER CAN DO.

THE late Hon, Thomas H. Benton, for thir-1 ty years in United States Senator, said: "My mother asked me never to use talacco, and I never too hed it from that time to the present day; she asked me not to game, and I have not, and I cannot tell who is winning or who is losing in games that can be played. She admonished me, too, against hard drinking; and to whatever usefulness I may aftern in life, I attribute it to having complied with her pions and correct wishes. When I was seven years of age she asked me not to drink, and then I made are solution of total abstinence; and that I have adhered to it through all the time, I owe to my mother."

TALK TO THE CHILDREN.

AHILDREN hunger perpetually for new Undeas. They will learn with pleasure from the hps of parents what they deem mere drudgery to study in books; and even if they have the misfortune to be deprived of many educational advantages, they will grow up intelligent people. We sometimes see parents who are the life of every company they enter, dall, silent, and uninteresting at home among their children. If they have not mental activity and mental stores sufficient for both, let them first use what they have for their own households. A silent home is a dull place for young peoplea place from which they will escape if they can, How much o-efol information, and what unconscious, but excellent mental training, is in lively, social argument. HOME.

Bid. . ER E.S.

"HAT a world of thought is expressed in the word Home! It does not only conver the idea that it is the place where we get our meals, sleep, and where we labor, but the thought goes beyond this and presents itself to us as the center of earthly affection, aroun which cluster all of those Christian graces and qualities which tend to make it a Home in every sense of the word.

We endeavor to make our homes attractive, to render them comfortable and convenient but we will soon have to leave them to otherand take up our abode with those who have gone before us. But to the Christian this thought has no terror, when his confidence is stayed on the comforting words of Jesus, "I ge to prepare a place for you, that where I am yo may be also." A lione beyond the Jordan at death for the redeemed of all ages, of which it is said that "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

RELY ON YOURSELF.

T is related of Stephen Girard, that he had a nvorite clerk, and he always said "he intended to do well by Ben Lippencott," So when Ben got to be twenty-one he expected to hear something of his future prospects, and perhaps have a helping hand in starting him in the world. But the old fox carefully avoided the subject. Ben mustered courage. "I suppose I am now free, sir," said he, "and I thought I would say something to you as to my course What do you think I had better do?" "Yes yes, I know you are," said the old millionaire. "and my advice is that you go and learn the cooper's trade." This application of ice nearly froze Ben out, but recovering his equilibrium. he said if Mr. Girard was in carnest he would do so. "I am in earnest." And Ben forthwith sought the best cooper in Spring Garden, became an apprentice, and in due time could make as good a burrel as the hest. He announced to Mr. Girard that he had graduated, and was ready to set up business. The old man seemed gratified, and immediately ordered three of the best barrels he could turn out. Ben did his prettiest, and wheeled them up to the old man's counting room. Mr. Girard pronounced them first-rate and demanded the price. "One dollar each," said Ben, "is as low as I can live by." "Cheap enough, make out your bill."

The hill was made out, and Mr. Girard settled it with a check for $20,000, which he accompanied with this little moral to the stress orthogone ner, and if you are unfortunate and lose it, you will have a good trade to fall back upon which will afford you a good hving," JUJES AND GENTLEMEN: In presenting La the matter of Spelling Reform to you to night I must ask you for the moment to bay praise amid these innumerable harpstrings in self little children again, just beginning the toulsome ascent of the hill of knowledge. By In the vernal senson, amid buds and leaves, procure and repetition we become accustomed spelling, and we fail to recognize what a preconsolves at the storting point again and look along the road we have gone that we see what a difficult task has been required of us; how we have been compelled to labor without any becassify or profit; how our reason has been dwarfed because we have been torbidden to use it, and how we have been jumished or mortified perhaps to spell according to common sense rather than the spelling book.

Suppose, now, you are a liftle boy and have just learned that precisy spells pity. How much will the spelling of that were help you in spelling age Net at all, I a sensible class you follow your instruct and feeling a analogy you will say and miss the word. November the word cata. You learn propel with one l; out we must not follow the analogy when spelling foretell and gazelle; nor may these two be alike. But one must end in II and the other In Ile.

AFoe is all right; but not so with noe for no. nor knuc for know. The more common sense you have, the worse for you in learning to spell; and if you happen to bave but little of that precious article about you to-day, I have no doubt but that it is due to the violent way in which you were compelled to throw it aside when learning to spell your mother tongue.

Look at a few more of these words which you labored over when in the first or second reader: but not oneder (wonder)

One,

Two, dwo (do) Dry. dy (die) Speech. speek (speak) Schism, schink (sink) Wifeh, whitch (which) Scourge. ourge (urge) mirge (merge) Dirge, cheeze (cheese) Breeze, rongue (rung) Tongue, Opaque, taque (take) Wright, recight (recite) Height, reight (rite) Aisle, smaisle (smile) haugh (half) Laugh, Through dough (due) stough (stuff) etc Ecough,

And so I might go on for a long time, using only the more common words, which we are tanglit in the first four years of school life. I am not indulging in exaggeration. You can take any spelling book and find these inconsistencies by the dozen on every page.

If myrrh be mir, why not syrrh sir? If through be throo, why not tough too? If bough be bow, why not cough voic? It noise why not hose for hogs? It colonel be kernel why not infolonel for infernal? If neighbor be nabar, why not leighbor labor?

It has been mathematically demonstrated that the word "scissors"can be spelled in 596,580 different modes, and have analogies to authorize each spelling. For instance "sphissyrthee" is judged by the representations of its sounds in schism, myrrh, sacrifice.

Dear Brethren:-

TE had a very enjoyable feast. Brother John Wise of Bond Co. was with us and preached the word of God with great power. Other munisters were present, but brother Wise was the main speaker. Although there were no additions to the church, there were many good impressions made upon the minds of some good meaning people, who have expressed their willingness to obey the Gospel in its primitive parity. About one hundred and seventy were seated around the table of the Lord. As I sat and looked upon the young people before me miking sport of the examples of their Bedeemer, and of us because we obeyed the u, I thought how great were the trials of the young subliers of the cross, and how great our enjoyment if we only prove faithful to the end.

Meeting continued over Sunday. On Sunday evening brother. Wise de ivered in discourse on Christian hapfism, which we think is beyond successful dispute or contradiction. He explained some of the various objections to the action of baptism, the unity of the God-head and the meaning of sprinkling, pouring and imnewsian, and compared them to the word bapfive. Men may scoff at the saints of God lete in this world, but there is a time coming when they will remember their follies.

WE had a teast of love. Saints were made to rejuice and sinners to weep. Wives were made happy to see their husbands go down into the flowing stream and be buried in holy baptism. Three have been added since my last report, and we think there are quite a number almost ready to come. We had quite a number of ministers with us. About three hundred communed and some could not get to the table. The weather was delightful, and the congregation could not all get in the house. May God bless us all is my prayer.

TR feast of love is past. We commenced meeting on the 17th of October. Brother Isauc Billhimer was with us and labored faith fully. On the 20th brother John Metzg-reame, and on the evening of the 21st, brother John Barnhart came to assist us. We held a choice for two speakers, and the lot fell on two of our visiting brethren, Jacob Seiders and Aaron H. Kreighbaum. Five brethren were called to the deacon's office. May they prove faithful to their calling is my prayer. In the evening we gathered around the tables to commomorate the sufferings and death of our adorable Redeemer. The house was nearly full of members, We had splendid order. Four were added to the church by baptism.

Dear Sisters:—

PET no live as we profess, and try and see show crose we can live to our Savior and the Church. Let us be on our good how we raise our challren, and not put on them what we would not wear ourselves. Let us have family prayer and show them that we intend to do what is right, and not try to teach them what we don't live up to ourselves. Couldren are close observers, and v-ry soon see our mistakes God has given these little ciablem into our care and we should be true, to the sacred trust committed to us. We need divine grace to help us to discharge our duty faithfully. S it is always gratifying to the members of A a family to learn of the enjoyment of a loved one far away, so we, no doubt, as dwellers in local churches-members of the body of Christ-part of the great spiritual Family of God are interested in the welfare of each other, and since our Love-feast meetings passed off so pleasantly, we thought it would be interesting to the dear ones in Christ who could not be with us to read a sketch of the proceedings .- Hence the following:

The day being the 22nd inst. we met at 10:00 A M in the Silver Creek house of worship, a large commodious building 5 miles north of town. The weather pleasant, there was a large attendance, by some estimated that 500 were present in the evening. I believe twenty-one ministers were present from Northern, Ill., and Eld. S. M. Met agam after dinner, when Eld. Hillery addressed us on "PREACH THE WORD". He endeavored to elucidate the fact that the "Word of God" transcended everything else. That it nulerhes the groundwork of creation, redempthan, ALL GOOD, and therefore it should be preached instead of the doctrines of human meets, because our salvation is not predicated upon the opinious of men, but upon the "worn-we love to see the brethren and sisters from far and near coming in from all directions! These are the occasions that should, most of all, hring us down very humble at the foot of the cross, and inspire us with renewed vows to our Lord and Master. Brother Edward Miller of Hugerstown opened the meeting, when brother Adam Pyle, bishop of Back Creek Church, preached a discourse upon Heb. 4: 1. Brother David Koisley of Lower Cumberland hore testimony to the truth, and stated that people are very ready to accept invitations as appear on notices of picnics and so on, but when they are invited to the Gospel feast of spiritual things they are careless. The claims of the Gospel were pressed home to all both in the discourse and the testimony. In the afternoon brother Ephraim Stoner addressed us from Rev. 3:4. He insisted upon honesty among our brethren in this evil day, and gave out an earnest caution against the prevalent sin of dishonesty in busines dealings. He also urged truthfulness as another virtue of our Christianity. He said that a saying used to be current of some men that "their word was as good as their bond," and we were exhorted to attain to such a desirable standard of public recognition.

After a short intermission the usual selfexamination service was held. The Gospel propriety of the sisters' head covering was explained. We often wonder that there should be any sisters who have not advanced in grace so far as to understand the necessity of this "power" on their heads. The brother said the hair is the natural covering, the honnet is the artificial or weather covering, but the plain, white cap has a spiritual significance which every sister will be happy to comprehend. It was said self-examination should be done daily. To commune unworthily was condemned by the apostle, and no one desires to commune unworthily, hence strict self-examination is necessary. We may see others in fault and lose sight of ourselves. Hence, self-examination is needed that we may appear worthy guests of the Lord's Supper.

The Love-least followed "when the even was come." The inceting was very enjoyable and will long be remembered.

THE SONS OF GOD.

Sunday, Sept. 28th-We attended services at our town meeting-house this evening. Brother Jacob F. Oiler addressed as from Rom 8:44: "As many as are ded by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God." True Christians are the sons of God. A true Christian is a true follower of Christ, walking in all His commandments and ordin inces as laid out in the writings of the New Testament. They are been again, created new creatures in Unid, adopted into God's tanuly on earth, - sell is in subjection. Christ is master, the Christian is servant and follows the Master. The sons of God on earth are they who by the spirit of God are bil into all truth. May the labor not be in vare, but Zion built up and sonls saved.

THE SUN OF BUGHTEOUSNESS.

Sumfan Oct. 5th.—The discourse we heard this morning was on Mal. 4: 2. The text was written by a prophet's pen about 400 years before Christ. The prophet had Christ in mind as he "He that should come " to redeem. Now we look upon Christ, as He that did come and tutfilled the prophecy. Hence He is the Christ of prophecy and of history. The Sun is the go atest natural him nary, neares Christ is compared to a Sun of light. The Sun sends its light upon the earth; so does He. The San warms us with its head; so does the with His love. The first ided worshipper and homage to the Sun of Nature; the true worshippers adore the Sun of Rightcourness. The beauty and glory of the morning sun was compared to the untold beauty and the unveiled giory of the Sun of Righteonsness. Christ's new for as was rong and to the Sea's attraction for the earth. An Appeal For Help.

WHEN we read the pages of the B. AT W. we see many letters of encouragement we see many letters of encouragement where the brethren have been preaching, of Love-feasts, the different missions, &c. Here is another large mission field, and who will come and help fill it? I am the only minister in Colfax and Butler counties. There are many calls that can't be filled, and people starving for the Bread of Life. Who will come and settle here and preach and at the some time procure a good home? Butler county is forty miles from here and it is impossible for me to go often. There are thirteen members and one deacon. They have good land and cheap railroads, &c. For further information address brother Eli Armaghst, Sommit, Butler county, Nebraska.

Our feast'is post and if was truly a feast of love. We had no helpfrom abrand;- a crowded tent 30x40, and the best order layer saw. Brethren wishing to come West cannot better themselves as we have good land, good markets, &c. A church can be built up by coming and living out what you preach. Who will come and fill This massion? Come on. Any wishing information will address J. P. Moomaw, Purple Cane, Dodge Co., Neb.

On Sunday had one meeting in Applegate, at the Missouri Schoolhouse. All this territory belongs to the Rogne River Church.

During our stay we were very kindly received and well treated by the brethren and others. Had pleasant meetings,-attention and order very good.

On Monday the 15th, we started on our way for the brethren in the Coquille Church, Coos County. This church is situated on the west side of the coast range of mountain, about sixty miles west of Roseburg.

We arrived at Brother Harvey Luellen's, in Coos County, on Saturday morning, Sept. 20, where we remained with the brothren about eightdays. Had quite a number of meetings.

On Friday, the 26th, had our first District Meeting for Oregon. Business passed off very pleasantly. Also had a very pleasant commun ion meeting the 27th, at which time and place there were two brethren elected to the otfice of deacon. There were about litty-live eammonniem (s.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 2d. Baptist churches possess the Bilde characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.

D. B. RAY, Affirms.

J. W. Stein, Denies.

RAY'S 2D AFFIRMATIVE.

M. Stein's "negative" opens by charging u-with an "attack upon the Brethren" and "defiat"! Not true. His "first argument" is the charge, without proof, that "Baptisi churches are not truly recenerated;" because they have "legal license" to fulfill the lasts of flesh, according to "Gal, 5: 20." Horrible! Paul

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest which are these; adultery, formication, uncleanness, lacryrousness, idolatry, witcheraft, hatred variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions heresies, envyings, murders, drankenness, revellings, and such lake."

Was Mr. Stein, while a Bajdist, guilty of all these crimes? Baptist churches do not "engage in war on any account," with carnal weapons. He knows botter, His "Negative Arc. 2," is the unfounded charge that "Baptist thurches have not repented of" their "caths" This charge of profune swearing is not true The individual command to "swear not at all does not produlat the legal boath for confirmation," in a court of justice. (Heb. 6, 16) desabunselt, when on trial, refused to answer till be was pulsar outle. The high priest said outl

"I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us whether thou art the Christ, the Son o God desus south unto him, Thou bust said, Matt. 26, 63, 64. To adjure on, 48 "to put so oath to one." Jesu- answered under oath

His coarges about war and kissing have been discussed and will come up in another place. He also perverts our arguigent on "repentance into life." While in point of order repentance precedes faith with the heart, it is also true that repentance receives into heart faith as well as life. True repentance and faith are correlative. they cannot exist separately. Faith and spiritual life are simultaneous. Our argument is unmoved. He did not dare to touch our arguments based upon the testimony of the prophets. upon the testimony of Jesus, and upon the testimony of the apostles.

His "fourth argument" charges that "Beptist churches" deny certain Brote phrases conc. raing baptism to wash away sins, "for remission," &c. The charge is not true; we only deny the Romish interpretation that tenches logidismal salvation. These passages were fully examined in the discussion of the first proposition. Alr. Stein surrendered, so far as to adout that mone but the "regener sted" are to be haptized. One must be haptized as a ghild of God, or as a childof the devil. Will be go back to the doctrine of his church, that a child of Satur aught to be baptized to make him a child of God? will be answer? We must haptize one without spiritnal life; or we must haptize him after regeneration. Answer, yes, or no; must, we baptize a cladd of God? yes, please do miswer, most we taptize a child of the devil to make him a child of God? say, yes or no. Do, do, no.

Our first Baptist characteristic demands 'Spiritual regeneration—the wee birth—and spiritual life, as essential to baptism and church membership,"

This developes the great fundamental line of demargation between the churches of Ulirist and those of auti-christ. The Romish, with other anti-christian churches, holds that the nuregenerate children of Satan should be haprized and received into the church for salvation. the other hand, Baptists with one voice conend that none except the children of God should be received to baptism and church mempership. Our friend's church, on this point, stands with anti-christ. In support of this characteristic, we introduce our Arg. 3d. That this pencliarity is sustained. because lave to God is essential to baptism and church membership. No one can be scripturalty baptized till be loves God. Jesus said: "It ve love me, keep my commandments." John 14: 15. None should dare to attempt to keep the command to be haptized till be has the love d God in his heart. This our friend dure not teny. The curse of God rests upon those that love not the bord lesus Christ," 1st. Cor. 16: 22; but "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. 13: 10. (a) This stands as our first proof under Arg. 3d. As we were totally unable to meet the demands of the law, Jesus fulfilled, the law for us; and when the enunty of our hearts is dam and the "love of God is shed abroad in one nearts by the Holy Spirit" (Rom. 5: 5), then Christ becomes "the end of the law for rightconsuess to every one that believeth." from 10:4. It is evident that every lover of Godgaving fulfilled the law, is justified. 1st. Exery one must love God prior to haptism and clinreli membership. 2d. But every one that loves God is justified, Cd. Therefore, every one must be justified prior to baptism, and church membership. And as none are justified joyo to spiritual regeneration, therefore, regeneration must, in the divine order, precede, bajdism and church membership.

(b) John says: "We know that we have perof from death unitor life, Lecause, we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother at or eth m death." John 3 14 Every one that with him that begat, leveth him also that is to patter of him." Judio 5: 1. Every one that loves God, the Palher, blees the children of God Mark well at! does not say that we know that se have passed from death units life because we

Mr. S. admits that baptism is a "solemn oath." | have been baptized, or because we have united with the church, but "because we love the brethren." 1st. Every one must lave the breturen prior to haption and church membership. 2. But every one that loves the brethren has passed from death unto life. Therefore, every one must pass from death auto life prior to baptism and church membership. This settles the Bap. fist doctrine that sparitual life must precede haptism, as the Bible doctrine. (c) Jesus of the woman, said;

"Wherefore I say unto thee, her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much; but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little." Luke 7: 47.

If re the Savier makes here the evidence of sinsforgiven. 1. Every one must love God prior to toption and church membership. 2. But every one that loves God has tos sins forgiven. 3. Therefore, every one must have bis sms forgiven prior to baptism and church memhership. And as those who have their sins lorgiven have been "regenerated," therefore the Baptist doctrine that regeneration precedes baptism and church membership, is sustained by the Bible. (d) John says:

"Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is torn of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God's love," I John 4;

Yes! * Every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God," Does our friend deny? 1. Every one must love God prior to haptism and church membership. 2. But every one that toyes God "is born of God and knoweth God." 3. Therefore, every one must be born of God and know God prior to baptism and church

Mr. Stein will try to dodge this by perverting the scripture that says: "For this is the love of that we keep his commandments." Yes: eeping the external commands is the love of third manifested; but the "love of God must be shed abroad in our hearts" first. Our nembership.

Arg. Ith is drawn from the pattern of the trusple, which was a type of the church. This "is the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." 1 Tim. 3: 15. The materials of the temple were put into the building because they were previonsly prepared. Read;

"And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone, made ready before it was monght thither, so that there was neither hamner, nor ax, nor any tool of iron heard in the house while it was in building." I Kings 6: 7.

So in the "spiritual house," none except "livety stones" are to be put into the building. Pe-

"Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spirdual sacrifices, acceptable to Goil by Jesus Christ," I Pet. 2: 50

But our friend's church would have dead stones-children of the devil-put into the house to make them the children of God!

Paul says: "Now it any man build upon this anidation, gold, silver, precious stones, wood, cay, stubble; every man's work shall be made what "When I am, there shall my SERmanifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort at as," A C a. 3: 12, 13, But our trierol's church would have the "wood, may, and stubble" built in, hoping thereby to orepare the materal by putting in the house! Shall we put goats into the fold to make sheep of them? This is too absurd. This tun-Limental Baptist characteristic that demands regeneral on-the new both sand spiritual life as essential techniquism and church membership, is sustained by a host of witnesses. Baptists stand against the aut-christian world upon this point. We predict that Mr. Stein will never answer our arguments in this, and our Upriner affirmative.

WHERE AND WHAT.

BY C. R. BALSBAUGH,

Universalist propounds the following query: "Where will the righteous be rewarded, and what will they inherit?"

There is a hidden trap in this question with which it is hoped some fresh vindication for the no hell doctrine may be caught. But it is only an inevitable gin for the entanglement and overthrow of the error it is sought to bolster.

It is self-evident that the querist has no true conception of the real import of his proposition. The thought probably never entered his mind that in the employment of the words "righteous," "reward," and "inheritance," he has given up every vestige of sound argument in favor of his pet heresy. Reward signifies fidelity to a positave standard of obligation, and merit as connected therewith; while inheritance signifies grace. Righteoneness is the foundation of both. An unrighteous man cannot be researched with good, neither our be personally inherit even the pravisions of Infante Mercy. Both are as inspossible as being predominantly good, and evil at the same time. If the querist will glaborate this truth, both as to the distinction and unity of its two factors, with reference to the world to come, it will not leave him a shred of fact or principle in support of a Heaven for the ungodty. Let him give his own proposition an honest, philosophical investigation, and the inevitable conclusion will necessitate a future Hell, as absolutely as a future. Heaven. The single word rigitants, as descriptive of a part of the buman family, implies a different animus and finale us to the rest.

His query defeats itself. Are the righteens rewarded at all, as such, and have they any mheritance peculiar to them? Here is a drastic pill which will thoroughly scrape his moral, alimentaries before it is "cast out into the draught." If he answers in the negative, he is guilty of impeaching the Divine character, falsifying the Divine record, and destroying all distinction between right and wrong. Any child of the least reasoning expacity can see the force of this logic. If he answers in the uffirmative, he admits an opposite class, which is excluded from that inheritance. Graso what hore of the dibemma he will, his heresy is gored to death. Either alternative strips him as nude as of argument against the existences of future tor ment, as a fish is made of wook, or a sheep of

Here is the radical answer to his query: Rightronsness is its own reward in this world and in the next. Righteonsness is the eternal law of God's own being, and they who share it with Him, will share its fruits-partly here, fully yonder. The same is true of sin. The unrighteons can no more enter or enjoy the inheritance of the God-configured, than the Deiende, as such, can be joint-heir with Jesus on principles of equity. The doctrine of ignoring the lane of character in the intere world, is an outrage to common sense, and a stigma on christi-

ADDRESS TO A SINNER.

CHOULD you wish to be a Christian, And as such to live and die: You must search the holy Scriptures, And you'll find a Savior nigh.

Should you read the sacred pages. And betimes begin to proy; You must take your cross up daily. And pursue the narrow way.

Should you wish your sins forgiven, By the promise of the Lord; You must then embrace the gospel. And obey the Savior's word.

Should you feel so heavy-laden With the burden of your sins, That they rise up and condemn you-O, embrace the Savior's means!

Should you feel your condemnation. And your mind be exercised, O, repent, believe the gespel. Yes, believe and be implized.

Should you then obtain a blessing, When your sins have been lorgiven; You can then proceed rejucing. And jursue the way to heaven.

Should you wish to be a soldier In the army of the lead, You must then take up your armor-Take the sword, which is his word.

Should you see some ugly giant Come against you by the way, Use the weapons of your warfare, Persevere to watch and pray.

Should you wish to gain relatituace, To the sliming courts above, You must enter by the door-way. Un the highway paved with love, Should you wish to see the Savior. And to gain his great reward, You must square your whole behavior, By his everhesting word.

Should you then continue faithful In your calling to the end: You can then go nome rejoicing, Having desirs for your triend.

OBJECT OF EDUCATION.

BY PROP. W. E. LOCK ORD

AVING thus, in a general, and imperfect way, determined what ed ucation is or should be, and shown that tenchers, generally, have failed to attain to a comprehension of its true meaning; let us apply another test to the efficieney of our schools. With the light we have, it seems to us that the only excuse or reason for the existence of any education at all, is utility.

This suggestion will, no doubt, expose us to relicule. Maykishly sentimental people may furn up their neces and charge us with a want of culture, with being gross and earthly minded, with never vising to the consideration of the wants of our spiritual and aesthetic nature. Very well, he it so, er, strewed the roads from central Europe to Jerusalem, with the bones of hundreds of thousands of men, women, and ehildren.

This was the Religious Age, and it left its impress for evil on ages following. But its blind devotion to creeds, at once irrational and absurd, produced a reaction in the minds of thinking men, which led to the age of philosophy. In this age men began critically to examine the whole system of faith, and, discovering its various imperfections, concluded that where the parts were so defective the whole system must be unworthy of credit in an advanced age of society. It is among philosophers that such a revolution commences, and it is among them that it is carried out and completed; but the results of their rescarches penetrate all clasess, and, finding their way from the summit to the buse of society, reach finally the mass, where, sapping and raining all convictions and the whole system of truth, they produce a total want of faith.

This produced the era of skepticism, when instead of believing too much, men began to believe nothing. Wild chimeras took possession of men's minds, and vice, anarchy and bloodshed were the natural result. It was reserved for the Age of Machinery, the age of utility, to strike the happy medium, to sever the bonds of superstition that held the nations in their hideous coals, on the one hand, and to throttle a senseless skepticism, on the other; to evolve from the misdirected zeal, the fettered aspirations, the benighted minds of the dark ages, a higher civilization, a nobler conception of duty, waves fill him with admiration and uniting men and nations in a closer brotherhood, and so building up the kingdom of Christ;--for they serve God who lave their fellow-men.

But how, do you ask, does all this prove that utility is the foundation of all education! We will see. As long as men lived in an ideal atmosphere; as long as they would light for an idea, the truth or falsity of which could have no possilde bearing on the welfare of humanity; as long as they directed their efforts to fathou the unfathonalde, to know the unknowalde,-just a long was society in a state of chronic unrest. One theory would arise only to be supplanted by another. Like a huge pendulum, socie ty oscillated from one extremity of its are to the other, at every swing sweeps ing millions into Idoody graves. But when men began to follow their natural | er flowing on in majesty and power un instincts, when it began to be considered more praiseworthy to care for than to emeify the loody, to enjoy rather than to dispise the bounties of Providence, when each one began to pursue his own. This is the Asse of Machinery, the true and substantial happiness, then it Age of Industry. Everything is made was that wants began to multiply. After subservient to the accumulation of wealth. For increased wants followed increased like thanking God that he has made all Time was when ort was the goddless production. But human hands were things so bright and fair. There is a at whose starting were affered, the odds | too slow and too feel de to keep pace with | deeper purpose in the windings of the tions of the finest minds of the age. The light of divinity shines ery side. Here again we see that utility

He is fulfilling the law of his being. He material, and, by inference in the immais doing something useful.

The age of utility has been, so far, substantially, one of peace, of progress, of fraternal love. The useful, then, is the highest object to be sought for here. God has made nothing that is not useful, although in many cases their uses have not been discovered. Every plant bas its virtue. Every weed that grows has its purpose to subserve. As everything was made for use we may conclude that utility is the first, and, perhaps, sole reason for the existence of any plant or animal or world or system or naiverse. True, God has superadded beauty to most things in nature, and perhaps to all things, if we could only see their beauty. But beauty, apart from utility, is an illusion. We do not gaze with emotions of delight upon unmeaning pictures, although their colors may be blended in the most perfect harmony. We do not listen with any very pleasurable emotions to musical chords when disconnected from their setting in the

The colors may be exquisitely blended, the chords may be in perfect harmony, but if they are disconnected from their proper use, they fail to satisfy. The ocean is beautiful during a calm. In a storm it is sublime. When the winds blow and the billows roll the spectator sees the roar of the elements and thinks only of the grandeur of the scene. The white caps chasing each other in frolic some glee, the breaking of the billows upon the shore, the roar of the breakers, the majesty and resistless power of the wonder and awe; but he does not think. then, of the great jurpose of the elemental war that is constantly and forever going on,

He does not consider that were it not for the lightning and the winds and the waves, the great deep would become one vast ocean of pollution and death; that no living thing could be found in its depths; that it would become one vast charnel house, a loathsome scene of floating putrefaction. A sickening sense of desoluton and decay and death would weigh down the spirit. There would be no beauty there—-for there would be existence without a purpose.

If we look at the timest rivulet that trickles down the mountain side, or at the locantiful stream gently flowing through its valley, or at the mighty riv til its waters are swallowed up by the ocean, we see that all their lives are lives of beauty. IMMORTALITY.

BY L CONCLAST,

THE Jews believed that the soul is immortal. Christ and his apostles did not correct the error, if such it real. ly was. Christ's purpose was to select a people for his name. It is therefore necessary to form character in order to be entitled to a blessed immortality, Speculative theology has led off many intelligent believers who depend more upon their own powerful (?) intellects than upon the grace of God to enable them to see the truth as manifested by Christ. The Bible is a remarkable hook, out of which the followers of Christ can derive much comfort; while to the sol. dier of the cross it is a two edged blade to be used as a weapon of defense. It is so sharp that it can be used even for selfdestruction.

The writer has observed much and his experience has been varied and sad, having been led from one theological speculation to another, just as a faithful, hard working mechanic can be led from his legitimate business into some visionary speculative enterprise. The first question usually asked, "Is the soul immortal?" Next, "Was the kingdom established on the day of Pentecost"? Last, Is unmersion valid baptism without a correct faith in these things"? Every. thing is done to work up the imagination, and that accomplished, the investigator becomes an easy victim.

Lately one of those religious fanatics was led to believe it his duty to kill his little daughter as an offering. One man, who came out from amongst the brethren some years ago, would use the word 'Dunkard" in a derisive manner. A litthe further on he would call them the "Dunks," and finally the "Dumb Dunks;" and all because he could not convert then to his way of thinking. People who have no veneration for their own parents have still less for their Creator, and cannot therefore worship him in spirit and in truth. And this may account for the fact that so many who have embraced materialistic doctrines are now petrified in the cold aloys of infidelity.

The monks of Saint Bernard send wine of spirits with their trained dogs to perishing travelers in the snew bound Alps. In like manner has the Bushbusy at Work saved at least one from a congealing grave,

INFIDELITY,

BY G. SOHETH

IIAVE often wordered within my self whether the infidel is unly sinwere in his assertions. If he is, he surely aredicates his helief on a very narrow ion: lation. Why is it that he demands helicover whelming proof of those who selieve in inspiration, while he himself appears his belief with such puny, shall ow evidence?

The gist of his aroundent in favor of ntibelity is about this: Plut there are emany who profess Christianity and or of show any different fruit from those vho do not profess. Is this sound logic! uppose the great firm of Rothschild gere to send over to America an offer to are to every citizen of the United States hundred dollars on condition that they send to them their name, post office, and business occupation. Now a number of persons would send their names only, would they be very likely to get the hundred dollars? Would this be any evidence that there is no Rothschild? or that he never made the offer? This is the same kind of logic precisely. Now those who send their names only do not comply with the conditions named; and unto these may be likened those profess ors who have a name in the church but do not comply with the conditions of a true Christian. They are not benefited by their shallow profession only; therefore show no fruit.

It is a fact to be lamented that there are so many professors that do not adorn their profession with that piety and zeal that is essential to that holy and glori ous religion of the blessed Son of God, and by this furnish an excuse, weak though it be, for the infidel to make use of in denying inspiration.

Again, our public school system is acknowledged by the majority of our citizens to be a good thing. Now there are some who do not avail themselves of its benefits, find fault to the system, &c. Is this any evidence that the public schools of the United States are a fraud! Now these are like those who have access to the gospel of Christ, but do not accept it; such as the infidel and hardened sinner, generally. They refuse it, not because it is not good and gennine; but because it does not suit their peculiar whims and odd notions. Do those careless, cold professors have any obligation resting upon them concerning infidelity! We believe they have just in the same proportion as the infidel gleans from the life and daily walk of those careless professors. In the same proportion do we believe they will be held accountable at the bar of God in the day of judgment. These are they who "crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." We are to be shining lights. Thus showing to the world that we have been with Christ. I think every one would be much benefited if he would often read the epistle of June Also the second chapter of second l'eter.

DRESS.

EX ACREA OF STATISTIC

WHILE we hear much said upon the subject of dress, a few remarks may not be amiss from one acquainted with the writings upon the same, yet holding no extreme view. That our first parents were clothed in humility after their expulsion from the garden of Eden, all would reasonably believe, and think that the present style of dress is not all in semblance as theirs were, none will deny. And the fact that the present fashionable attire for the ladies is encumbrous, need only attestation on their part, without any previous loas from Admitting then the any source. truth of these statements, what a valua ble acquisition would the fashion of plain and modest attire bring to the greater portion of our community at large?

While I am inclined to believe that this would be an advantage to all conerned, I also believe it would be appreciated by the many fathers and noth ers of our land, and the true moral worth of any person would not be estimated by the amount of superfluous dress worn, but rather by the walk, conversation, and daily demeanor of the one in view. The practicability of the above needs only a trial to ensure success; and the vexed question (of too much dress) would then be a thing of the past.

I have often wondered at the advocates of plainness, dressing themselves in be coming style, and their children in the latest fashion, I must conclude that their strenuousness emanates from impure motives, for how could a part be clothed in humility and a part in superfluity and both retain the same principle. Does the fountain, (the heart) send forth both sweet water and bitter? Assuredly not. Then I ask, why is it? and where is the consistency.

DESIRING TO LOVE.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY]

LOVE divine, how sweet thou art! When shall I find my willing heart, All taken up by thee? I thirst, and faint, and die to prove The greatness of redeeming love,-The lave of Christ to me.

God only knows the love of God-Oh that is now were shid abroad. In this poor stony heart! For lone Usigh, for love Upane: This only portion, Lord be mine-Be nime this lefter part

Oh that I could forever sit With Mary as the Master's feet? Be this my happy choice— My only care, delight, and bliss, My joy, my heaven on earth, be this-To hear the bridegroom's voice.

Oh that, with broubled Peter, I Could weep, believe, and three reply. My tathichess to prove! Thou know of the all to there is known-Thou knowest O Lord, and than alone— Thun knowest that thee Ulave.

Oh that I could with tayonal John. Recline my weary head upon. The dear W doesner's oreast! From care, and sin, and sources free taxe me. D. L. o. L. to and in thee My everheling rest.

Thy only love do I require-Nothing in earth beneath desire. Nothing in heaven above; Let earth and heaven and all things gotime me thy only love to know, there me thy only love!

"WHY DO YOU DUNKARDS PREACH THE LITERAL WORD SO MUCH?"

BY CHASS YEAROUT.

TIMIS question has often been asked. I will endeavor to answer it. can give no better reason than this; Because we are commanded to preach the word," "I charge thee, therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his kingdom; proach the word; he instant in season, out of season; reprove, relaike, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." 2 Tim. 4: 1. Another reason is, our divine Master taught it by precept and example. Mark 2:2. The apostles sent to preach by Christ, preached the word. We preach the word to cause it is "perfect convert 5: 19, he says, "Speaking to yourselves ing the soul." "The word of God is in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual quick and powerful, sharper than any songs, singing and making melody in two edged sword, piercing even to the your heart to the Lord." This is the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and sum and substance of the mode and man of the joints and marrow, and is a discorner of the thoughts and intents of the Then as a matter of coarse, we are beheart " Helo 4: 12. The apostle says, to learn the art or screme of singing as elet the word of Christ dwell in you given, and gotten up by men of the richly, anall wisdom " Cal 3: 16 Whath would. And there seems to be land to cometh by hearing, and hearing by the general science, by which, all authors word of God." Rom. 10: 17, "The goss jare led, in setting and arranging tunes, pel is the power of God, unto salvation They all regard, pitch, length, power, to every one that believeth." Rom. 1: 16. It is through the word of God we are changed, and sanctified, not one word, but "every word that proceedeth out of the month of God." 'Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you," John 15; 3, "Sanctify them through the truth, thy word is truth."

"Having been regenerated not from corruptible, but incorruptible seed, through the living and enduring word of God." (Wilson's Translation.) "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life." John 6; 63. We want to preach something that will do the soul good, when the shores of mortality are lost in oblivion's gloom; something more enduring than the fleeting breath; hence we "preach the word," and it hath been declared, "though heaven and earth pass away, my words shall not pass away." Matt. 24: 35; Mark 13: 13; Luke 21: 33.

Our Master says, "search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life. and they are they which testify of me.' John 5: 39. "Seek ye out of the book of the Lord, and read." Isa. 34: 16. One of old hath declared, "Thy word | have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee." Psa. 119: 11.

When the gospel is so pure, so perfeet, why preach anything else! It is all the man of God desires to preach, not part but all of it. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteonsness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul;" "The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple." "The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart." "The commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes." "The judgments of the Lord are true, and righteous altogether." Psalms 19: 7, 8, 9. This is why our ministers preach the literal word. Brethren let us "carnestly contend for the faith once deliv ered to the saints." "Preach the word."

CONGREGATIONAL SINGING.

BY HENGY GARRIER.

TITAT singing is a part of divine wor ship, is generally admitted by all Christian worshipers, and that psalms. hynms, and spiritual songs are admitted. and recommended by the Bilde, is also true. We have a variety of testimony throughout the Bible of holy men, and Christians generally, worshiping God by singing. But to comment on the neces sity or propriety of singing is unnecessary, all will admit.

We desire to direct our feelde remarks mainly on a cultivation of this Franch of worship practiced by the Christian. The Bilde gives no mode of singing, as to high or low, long or short, lond or soft. Bur Paul says, "I will sing with the parit, and I will sing with the un derstanding also," And in Ephesians ner of singing as found in the Scriptures time, harmony, and melody, &c. Webster says, "singing is the act of uttering musical sounds by the voice." These sounds uttered in systematical order create melody in the heart, as the apostle would have us do. Singing in its pure motive, "sweetly moving accents, and flowing numbers has a benign, winning We are regenerated through the word, and powerful influence over the human mind." There is a power in singing that we can scarcely express; and there is nothing in all congregational worship that is more calculated to unite, to equalize, to knit hearts together in reverence to the great I AM, than good singing. All can unite in this, saint and sinner. The unconverted singing without understanding does not prohibit the converted to sing in understanding, or with the understanding.

The Almighty has placed that vocal organ in men and women. It is for them to improve that; it requires time and cultivation. We have something in the fourteenth chapter of Revelation which implies something of learning to sing. "And no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand." We must learn to sing. Many have found it difficult and gave up in despair; the gift not being so natural with them as with some others. It becomes Christian parents to take an interest in teaching their children to sing. It is not a day's, a week's, or a month's work, but it is a life's work. I thank my father to-day for the advice when but a boy, that I should buy a note book and learn to sing, as he could not sing and therefore did not wish his children to neglect that important branch. Yet I must say to all my brethren and friends, that with all the labor and toil in that direction, we are still very deficient; but having a natural inclination for music, and feel ing the necessity axd propriety of as all in general to press on, improve the time.

Young friends, brothren and sisters, and all, make good singing a specialty among yourselves, take advantage of all the opportunities you have. When in company you cannot improve your time any better than by singing. It is a very difficult thing for a person to lead a tune in a congregation properly when the congregation itself will carry the time in a drawling, irksome manner. reader, hear with your weak writer in his manner of expressing bimself. If all old and young would take the proper interest, and help us in this direction the work would move on much easier, and with more edification. Our aim is not to encourage any thing new or fast. W. are commanded to "let our moderation be known to all men."

Therefore let us take advantage of our Christian privileges, not only in singing, but all other duties we lowe to the Lord, so we may be ready and prepared to help to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb.

Willis a Christian intesionary had labored some time at Balasore, a young Brahmin, named Jugunnatha, embraced the Gospel. Soon after, the brother of a native magistrate said to him, "Do you believe this from the heart? Inguesnatha replied, "Yes," "Well," said the other, two are watching; you are making an experiment; if you live a holy life, we shall know that thes cospel is true which Padre saleh has been preaching for three or four years; 'art we have our doubts, and cannot believe; none of the Ooriyas till now have on brace Uthis religion; if you bear good truit, hadly I will follow your example.

About four P. M. of the 23rd, brother J. C. Lahman took us in his conveyance to his ideasant home at Franklin Grove, Lee Co. Bru. L. is surrounded by a dear family of children, who, with a kind, tender father, were, not long since bereft of the influences, the counsels and support of a tender mother. O how mother is missed! Bro. L. yet deeply feels his loss; and as we look at those bright young people we think of their aclung hearts. We think of their reflections on the pass; how their sorrow wells up and tears start from the eyes when they think of the mother who lies in death's cold embrace. Ah! they remember all her littledeeds of kindness. They remember her words of sympathy; they think of her patience, her love, motherly devotion to them. Our heart is too full for further in chtation. God bless the orphans and lead them to the Savier's told; and may abundant grace he given our dear brother for his stay, his support, and for his ardiious Inbors.

The theory of the andience room is inclined, and the place for ministers slightly rused so that both hearers and speakers may occupy advantageous positions. We think they have manifested a good degree of common sense in the arrangement of their house, and hope many souls in y be githered into the temple of the Lord there.

THE DISTRICT MEETING OF SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

TR last was written at Franklin Georg, III. We met the born of-God in public warslop near Aslition, on Similary, 10 A. M., and 7 P. M. The people at these meetings manyfested very great respect, and both old and young gave abundant evidence of having less well taught, for they behaved as well as area one could desire.

On the way to Hodson, the place appointed for the district meeting, we were joined by Bro Enoch Ehr, who accommenced as to meet the disciples of Jesus at Hadron. Arrayol or time for evening services, and was made jes ful in beart by meeting many with whom we may before met and worshipped. Projeto is were very numerous; and we presume it was good that it was so, for tiney, foo, hove to be begins occassionally. Bro, A.S. After considerable discussion, the Maconpin Creek plan was taken up by sections and debated. Articles three and five were amended and the whole adopted amid expressions of approbation. Adjourned for refreshments.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Met at 1 P. M. Some time was spent in completing the list of Solicitors. During the recess the following named brethren were elected on Board of Missions: John Beechly, John Brubaker, John E. Studebaker, John Neber, and A. D. Statzman, Poper from Sugar Creek Clinrob relative to the negative bases on Matt. 18: 15, 16, 17, was presented. The object was to ascertain the sentiment of the assembly on the practice of asking applicants for baptism whether they are willing to hear the offended in case they should be the offen ler. On account of indefiniteness the query was returned to the church with the answer that no bridher should deviate from the general rule of the church.

The Okaw Church wished to know whether any branch of the "one body" could permit sisters to wear any other plan covering in time of worship, instead of a plan case. The answer was in the negative.

The Milmine Church desired information relative to the place where a transgressing member should be tried. The case was peculiar and would require too much space to give in detail. Decided that he should be tried in the church where he now resides.

The Cerro Gordo Church requested D. M. to ask Δn adal Meeting to return to the place of originall queries that grow out of financial dif-Scullies, believing that such can be settled much better at home. Sent to A. M. This was one of the most important queries before the meeting, and was discussed for some time with considerable interest. The Bible way in demand then. Verse after verse was called up, and the Scriptures searched for testimony, Each one endeavored to produce the most convincing arguments, and it has been a long time since we witnessed such an instructive discussion. The Spirit of Christ was manifested by all, and though the views were widely different, yet brotherly affection was apparent in all. It happened in this as in many other important matters, the views were too far apart to permit an affirmative answer, hence was deterred indefinitely. Adjourned until the morrow.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 29TH. Meeting convened at S A. M. Prayer hy Bro. John Metzger, after which the roll call of churches was completed. It was found that during the year two congregations bad been formed out of the Bushnell Church, and that they are now known as the Camp Creek Church and the Spring Run Church. There are now twenty-seven churches in Southern Illinois, a number of them large and prosperous.

Report of Evangelists was next in order. Bro. John Metzger reported twenty-three additions to the church. His expenses were about $39. Bro. Daniel Vaniman preached ninetytwo discourses and spent ninety days in the field. Baptized thirty-two. Expenses $28.75. Bro. Jas. R. Gish preached seventy discourses and baptized seven. Owing to sickness, Bro. Joseph Hendricks was unable todo much evangelistic work, hence reported no additions. The whole number baptized by the Evangelists since last District Meeting, is sixty-two. Expenses, $102,57. We wish to observe that the Brethren of Southern Illinois are not afraid to tell what the Lord did by their hand. Acts 15:12, and 14: 27. We recommend those Scriptures to "the fearful."

The Treasurer then reported, which report was accepted and placed on record. Election of members of Standing Committee and Delegate to A. M. was next in order. Bro. John Wise was chosen on Standing Committe and Daniel Vaniman, Delegate to A. M. We cannot pass by in silence the method of the Brethren in Southern Illinois in their elections. All their elections are open. Each delegate writes his choice on a slip of white paper, and these tickets are thrown into a hat. The reading clerk then reads each ballot and the writing clerk keeps talley. When the last ballot is read, the Clerk announces the votes that each have received-all open and miletaly hart. There is some real salisfaction in this; and we cannot forhear commending the Brethren for their wisdom in conducting electrons. The member of Standing Committee was chosen in the same manner. And why should be not be?

Before the uncetting closed, several brethren addressed the meeting on the work and spirit of the District Meeting. This was truly a joyful time. It renorded us of the Damsh Mission meetings in Northern Illinois a few years ago. (i) how the tender hearts throb in unison with each other! Of all the Conferences we ever aftended, this was the best. Not a barsh word, not a single manifestation of litteriess during the meeting. The Spirit of Christ was apparent mill who spoke; and we bless God that we were there. Such meetings are an houor to the church and a blessing to mankind.

The next District Meeting will be held in the Big Creek Church, Richland Co. May many blessings crown the efforts of our dear earnest Brethren of Southern Hilmors.

QUESTIONS ON THE COVERING.

A NUMBER of letters were exchanged by twen Sister Lear and a brother on the subpot of the covering mentioned in 1 Cor. 11:1-U Below we give the brother's queries and Sister Leac's answers.

1. If a man would permit his hair to grow as long as nature would make it, would it be a envening?

I would say, yes. But as a man ought not to cover his head, torasmuch as he is the image and glory of God, he ought not permit his hair to grew long.

2. It a woman permit her hair to grow as long is nature, will on the it, would it be a cover-

I would say, see. And as woman is the glory of the man, he ought to wear thus natural covering as a token of her respect for man, bor natural heal,

3. When one thing is substituted for saidher, what words in the Euglish express it

I uppose you me in by the "one thing" that "is substituted for another," that the hours nistinated for another or special covering The comport by my dear bud her, as the hor vas given had, hence rould not be put in the room of another or special covering. The han is instance's protection. It suffered to grow ion. as it should on women's head, it is then a conering. There are two words used in the original nal for the two coverings. Kulupto applied to the ground or engy, means to spread over, to cone al. The other Paribilion from Pure an B. B. applied to the natural energy and mean to carr accord, to gave lop, so with a coll. The lea, I ar of woman if left unconfined would every out the idea to account to 4. In 1 Cor. 11: 13 what constitutes the covering a woman should have?

The Kalupto, or special covering.

5. In 1 Cor. 11: 14, is the hair a covering? Long bair would be a Puribilion, or natural covering, but as man is the image and glory of God, designed by his Creator as his crowning work on earth, it would be a shame, a disgrace for him to wear his hair long, thus having a natural covering, for by this he would show that he acknowledged a natural superior. This would be effeminate; it would show that he did not appreciate his high, his exalted, and his responsible position. That he was not willing to stand forth in the dignity of his nature and take his proper place.

6. When one thing is substituted for anothr, what words in English express it?

I suppose you allude to the word "instead" in verse 15, "instead of a veil." The definition which Webster gives of the word instead, is, "in the place or room." Instead is Wilson's translation. The meaning of for, the common rendering, is, because, by reason that, for that, indicating the reason for any thing.

Wilson's translation is evidently wrong. The Greek word translated "instead of," is auti. biddell and Scott give the following renderings of "auti": over against, opposite, before, against, set against, put for, in opposition to, equal to, corresponding, counter. Put for, is the rendering that has the least idea of substitution in it. Again we would answer, the hair is not substituted for the special covering How could that be? The hair was the first covering given, it had nothing to supercede, nothing to take the place of. The hair was not substituted for the special covering for the hair. Each has its own design.

What is your authority for a special cover-

My authority is founded upon 1 Cor. 11: 5. But every woman praying or prophesying with her head uncovered disgraces her head; for it is just the same as if she were shaven." If you will permit I will here paraphrase a little. In the tourth verse Paul tells the man that if he prays, or prophesies having his head covered be tishonors his head, which is Christ. Man has no other head, neither spiritually nortemporaly than Christ. Woman has no other spiritua read, but she has another temporal head which es mi an.

Now if it would be a shame, a dishonor, a mark of disrespect toward her na ural head to have her had cut short or shaven, it would be no less such a mark of disrespect toward her portual H at to appear in his presence with and her special covering. "It is just the same is if she were shaven." It is just as disgraceul in a spiritual sense to be without the spehal covering, as it in a natural sense to be without the natural covering. We know that the sthedoes not allude to the barr in verse. by the word here is, unatakalupto, translated ancavered. It is suggraceful to pray or prophsy wishout this halupto on her head.

S. It a women's hair were short, would you consider if a very Peribularing?

I would consider it a covering, but not a Pr-Abulana, Prinhaham means to long loosely, sceny top, and those ladies, who have such want bul, graceful yeals should highly appreeiste natural meli gifta on House can have long hair and pray or prophosy, would she be yough?—I Cor. II: 13. Succeedably would be veiled, that is would have the Production but not the covering the questle ailusies to in verse 13th. The word Interconstant any aled in the original is Alatabulaphan, Paul appeals to their sense of propriety and says, "In ige for yourselves, is it becommunications a woman to pray to Gold unveiled without the Kolopta on?" Indeed, my dear hold, in Louish all the Scriptures were as clear to me morel as that part ander consideration.

profit a man should keep a list or special arriffical covering on his head while he praywould the concidence and selection of the H.

In the best place I no now consider the but a werre . I is some for proceeding, and not is a covering. It is worn just as any other in read ending access to give combit and no conserva for a man to wear on his head a Kata, terrane are pour d'or prophesed, or me,

We answer, they did. See Gen. 24: 65; Ruth 3: 15. And the ladies of the Orient still keep up this ancient custom. To take away the veil of a married woman was one of the greatest indignities that she could receive, because it deprived her of the badge which distinguished and dignified her in that character, and betok ened her alliance to her husband, and her interest in his affections. Hence the spouse so touhingly complains, "They took my veil from me." What the veil betokened to the women of the old dispensation (respecting their inter est in their husband's affection, and their dignity as being allied to man in the solemn marriage covenant), the Kalupto, or special covering is to the Christian woman respecting her union with Christ her spiritual head, and her interest in los affections.

12. Does woman sustain the same relation to to man, that man does to Christ.-1 Cor. 11. 3.

In a temporal sense she does. That is, man is woman's natural head. Man has no natural head but Christ. But they both have the same spiritual bead. Nature and revelation always ngree. Nature has made woman the weaker vessel. She is more frail, more delicate in her organism, more sensitive, more refined in her nature than man, consequently he is well fitted for the more rugged, sterner duties. He is well fitted to battle with the world to sustain its conflicts, to brave its storms, and consequently to shield and protect woman, who, because of her frailty, her sensitive shrinking nature, needs a strong arm to shield her from danger, marly wisdom to direct her. Nature has given to man an independent, fearless, hold nature, to woman a dependent, chinging nature. Man is to be the support, the protector of woman, and so far as he possibly can to shield her from the storms of life. Woman is to be the glory of man. In his retirement, in his seclusion she is to be his comfort and his solace, with her sweet words of sympathy, with her patience, her love, she is to lift from his brow the cloud of care, the cloud that accumulated during his contact with the world, she is to soothe his chafed and troubled spirit, and thus provide for him a retired haven, where he can regale himself, and thus be prepared for a fresh encounter with the outside world.

The above positions are just the postions that Paul has respectively assigned to man, and woman. Paul agrees with nature.

13. Why should woman have power on her head because of the angels?—1 Cor. 11: 10.

Paul commences this verse with therefore, showing that what he here says is drawn from what he had stated in the preceding verse. What then is the previous statement? "For man also was not created for the woman, but the woman for the man." The preposition for has several meanings. Its most general sense indicates, the antecedent cause or occasion of an action. This is the sense in which it is used tiere. Woman was not the cause of man's creation, but man was the cause of woman's creation. This shows a superiority, a precedency a creation. Man was not created as a helpmate for woman, but woman as a help-mate for man. Therefore, for this cause, the woman on thit to have power, or the token of power on her head, because of the angels, because of those ministering spirits, that minister for them, who -hall be herrs of salvation. That these holy beings may witness her submission to heaven's arrangement, and thus give her their act.

14. If any thing is a covering for a woman's head, would it be a covering for it in m's head of the same size?

It would. "But man indeed ought not to cover his hear, forus much as the is the image and glory of God." A man bught not to be covered). Katakaluptesthai.

(15) Is a cap a verl?

It is in all intents and perposes a Kalupto. It asswers the purpose of the covering which Paul admonshes Christian women to wear. It would not be a substitute for a Turkish well which envelops the entire person, face, and ad-Pan only wants the heat covered.

FROM PALESTINE.

NUMBER XXX.

From Jerusalem to Nablus,

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement.] N reaching Nublus, I called on Bro. El Karey, a Baptist missionary who is located there, and the only Baptist missionary in Palestine. I had a letter of introduction to him, given me by a Baptist preacher from London whom I met at Naples. He received us very cordially, explained to us his missionary labors, and being a native of the place, though educated in England, he was full of local information for which we were in search. We especially wanted to learn the best way to reach Enon, the locality of which was definitely fixed by Lieut Conder, but which our dragoman had never visited. He gave us the desired information, and the next morning, leaving our tents pitched at Nablus, we made an excursion to that interesting spot.

Our route took us back through the valley of Nablus, and we resolved that while passing between the two mountains of Ebal and Gerazim, in the still morning air, we would try the experiment of reading the blessings and curses. It will be remembered by the reader, that in compliance with directions given before the death of Moses, Joshua assembled all of the people on these two mountians, stationing six tribes on one, and six opposite to them on the other, and that he stood between and read to them all the blessings and curses of the law. See Dent. 27: 28; and Joshua 8: 30-35. It has been uiged by some skeptics that it was impossible for Joshua to read so as to be heard by six thousand persons. It is a sufficient answer to show, that while Joshua read, the Levites were directed to repeat the words "with a loud voice" (Deut. 27: 14) and that it was an easy matter to station them at such points, that their repetitions, like those of officers along the line of a marching army, would carry the words to the utmost limits of the multitude. But it was interesting to discover, that the spot chosen by God for this reading is a vast natural amphitheater, in which the human voice can be heard to a surprising distance. About half way between Nablus and the mouth of the valley in which at stands, there is a deep semi-circular recess in the face of Mt. Ebal, and a corresponding one precisely apposite to it on Mt. Gerizim. No man with his eyes open can ride along the valbey without being struck with this singular formation. As soon as I saw it I recognized it as the place of Joshua's reading. It has been asseried repentedly by travelers, that although two men statumed on the opposite slopes of these two mountains are a mile apart, they can read so as to be heard by each other. We preferred to try the experient in stricter accordance with Joshna's example; so I took a position, Bilde in hand in the middle of the valley, while Bro. Taylor and Frank, to represent six tribes, climbed balt way up the slope of Mt. Gerizing and Bro. Earl, to represent the other at tribes, took a similar position on Mt. E al. I read, and they were to pronounce the amen after each curse or blessing. Bro. Taylor heard me distinctly, and I could hear his response. But Bro. Earl, though he could hear my voice, could not distinguish the words. This was owing to the fact that some ferrace walls on the side of the mountain prevented him from ascending high enough. The trees between me and him interrupted the passage of the sound. The experiment makes it perfectly obvious that thoshna had a strong voice, which I have not, he could have been heard by his audience without the assistance of the Leviles. As to the pace included in the two amphitheaters, I think it ample to accommod to the six hundred thousand men, though of this I cannot be cerinin. If more space was required, the aid of he hexites was indispensible.

After making this experiment, which occupied an hour or more, we proceeded on our way toward Euon, having with us as an escort and guide a Turkish soldier belonging to the garerson at Nublus.

LINES AT MY MOTHER'S GRAVE.

BY GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

The trembling dew-drops fall Upon the shutting the sers: like souls at rest, The stars shine gloriously; and all, Save me, are blest.

Mother, I love thy grave; The violet with its blossoms, blue and mild, Waves over thy head; when shall it wave Above thy child?

"Tis a sweet flower, yet must Its bright leaves to the coming tempest bow? Dear mother, 'tis thing emblem: dust Is on thy brow,

And I could love to die; To leave unfasted life's dark, bifter streams,-By thre, as east in childhood, lie And share thy dreams,

But Emust linger here To stain the plumage of my stidess years, An Umourn the lones to childhood dear, With bitter tears.

Aye, I must linger here, A lonely branch upon a withered tree, Whose last, trail leaf, unt mely sere, Went down with thee, Off from life's withered bower, In still commun on with the past, truric And muse on thee, the only flower In memory's urn.

And when the evening pale Bows, like a mourner, on the dim, blue wave, I stray to hear the night whols' want Around thy grave,

II, can too much honor be paid, for much A -lave be given to the mother? Herepart if is, indeed, to hear. How patient was she with our wayward youth; over indulgent, the sterner parent tells her; but within limits, the very faults of gentleness are beautiful. She bears the testy and rebellions monds: like the willow

"If the rudest blocks assail her, Patiently she drouges awhile, But when showers and breezes hard her, Wears again her willing smale,"

But the father must have acknowledgement. contrition-very rightly; only it is sweet to see how ready the mother is ever to give much, and to accept, thankfully to accept, little. Nevertheless her influence is prodigious. She may seem to be pushed aside, for awhile, at times, but she is ever the one sought in time of trouble; the women that followed Jesus so closely, won, surely, as their meed, this likeness to him. She paves the way for dreaded requests or revelations to the father, bearing, alast too often the brunt of his vexation or testiness, and willing to bear if that the storm in it come broken and less severe upon the children. I rom the first. she is presentmently unselfish. While the fired father to to at his night's rest broken, she will sit operor hours, rocking the crying babe, and never for a moment losing patience. She is all comparison, all allowance, for its modernmenor- and the inharmonicus and rea-cless want that bring- weath upon it from others, does but bid ver press it comer to her warm maternal. heart. Then they re-nithough they ching to ner, yet win take liberties, and give such an-

How sternly ought the father to visit any disrespect to the mother! How strictly ought he to uphold her authority? With what respect ought he himself to treat her, before the quickeyed children! Is this enough attended to? or is not her dictum sometimes set aside with a pish or pshaw? Is the boy never allowed to come to one parent for a reversal of the sentence of the other? Is the very idea of such a thing one of which the child would never dream?-These questions are well to ask ourselves at times.—Selected.

HOMELY HINTS TO THE GIRLS.

ATRLS, you have no time to waste in reading novels; no precious hours to throw away in the hall-room or theatre. There is so much for you to do, so much to learn before you will be prepared to enter upon the joys and duties. of womanhood. You expect some day to be married, and that is right. There is no happier, brighter place on earth than a happy home; no place where woman can be so happy as in her awn home in the society of the man she loves and the children that lovingly call her mother. But the glory of Eden was destroyed, and so may be the happiness of the brightest home. terhaps you already love the man who is to be your life-companion, and you teel that his love is more precious than anything earth carcafterd. Do you know that being now in possession of his love is no proof that you will always possess it? You may, but not by accident. It will require vigihance and care to keep ever joire and unchanging that love which is now lavished npon you. Time will bring many changes -Your brow will not always be so smooth and fair nor your step so elistic. Care and disease will role you of many charms, but not withstanding all this, you may not only retain, but increase the love move cherished for you. The reality may be sweeter than the dream. I'O brethren seeking homes, I would say we have a good country, good soil, timber for present use, markets, &c. The Brethren have a church of about thirty or thirty-five members. We would be glad for brethren, especially ministers, which we very much need, to come and settle among us. Improved land is worth from $10 to 15 per acre; raw prairie, $8, but not much of it. E. F. OUR Love-feast is past. We had a beautiful time and a pleasant meeting. Bro. Jπcob Murray, from Blackhawk Co., J. Shultz, J. Gable and Isaac Barto, from Lost Nation, Iowa, were the ministers from abroad. The word was preached with power, and we trust lasting impressions were made on the minds of many which will not be forgotten, but will work in their hearts until they yield themselves to be servants of Christ. I hope and pray that peace and prosperity may attend the Church of J. C. MILLER.

Dear Brethren:—

I t has been about a year since we came from the East here to these western wilds, and I have not had the privilege of speaking to one of our members since. But when I think of the good meetings and sweet communions which I have so dearly enjoyed with the children of God in the East, I feel as though I could no longer stay away from them, but flee to where I could enjoy assembling with the true Church of Christ. I do think that if some of our eastern ministers would come in here they might do a great deal of good | I trust the time will come when the true doctrine of Christ will be preached all over these western idains. Brethren and sisters, pray for me that I may hold out faithful, and at last hear the welcome voice. "Come ajchigher" MARY E. RITTER.

Please Tell it Around.

FTER ten years of experience and ien years A of besitation, I wish to make known some thing that may save some brethren and friends trouble when in this city, for those who are strangers and no one to depend upon will be about as bad off here as in a wilderness, if not more so. Not long since an old brother was roped into a gambling den, while others have been relieved of money. Very frequently a letter or dispatch comes like this; "Will be in the city tomorrow or next day, he sure and meet me at the deput." There is no definite time or depot named, and as a result, a complaining letter follows felling how he tried to find our place but lailed, not dremning what amount of anxiety was caused by such indefinite notice. While penning these lines have just returned from the deput, a distance of four and a half onles, and failed to meet a very dear friend who mus have stopped off at one or the other stations and is now in search of a stopping place. I have gone to the depots by might and by good. You want to have a mind well disci- May fied grant grace and truth, knowledge and day, through storm and sunshine, and then tailed to meet my triend. I now venture some advice hoping that no one will misconstrue my motives. On landing in the city get ode an emnibus and go to any first-class Hotel. ask for a dispatch boy and either telephone or telegraph to your friend who will then call upon you and take you to his home. This is the costom here. When Paul went to Rome he did as the Romans, and doubtless they liked him all the more for his courtesy.

Biographical Sketch of the Life of Elder David Wolfe,

THE subject of our notice was born December Brd, 1813, in Union Co., Illinois. His father, Eld. Geo. Wolfe, was baptized in the same county in 1811, being the first person received into the church in the then territory of Illinois. He was, in many respects, a remurkable mun, and many yet remember his elo quence in defence of primitive Christianity. In 1531 he innived to Adams county where he was gathered unto the fathers to rest until Jesus comes to call him to receive the crown of life.

Elder David Wolfe remained through life a resident of the old home, where he died Sept. 14, 1879, aged 64 years, 5 months and 11 days. He was baptized by the Brethren in May, 1856, and in 1858 was chosen to the office of deacon. Two years later he was called to preach the word, in 1863 advanced to the second degree, and in 1865 ordained, in which capacity he exercised acceptably to the day of his death. In his death the Adams county church received a severe shock and his place cannot be easily filled, but such are the mysterious, yet always kind providences of God, for He seeth not as we

Brother David succeeded well in life, having secured for himself more than a competency. He was highly respected by his fellow-men, and regarded worthy of a common trust on the joint of his fellow-citizens who once sent him as their representative to the State Legislature before he became a member of the church. But the call of God turned him from positions of honor and trust in the government of this world to one far more honorable and praise-worthy in the Church of the living God. He, no doubt, as some ochers have, discovered the exceedingly unsatisfying character of politics, and singlet that Speace which far outlives the vexations of homan government. He turned from the strifes and commotions of the political forum to proclaim the acceptable truth of Jesus. A noble change. From empty honor, worry and vexation, to love, joy and peace through our lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Who could not die in peace, full of bright hopes for eternity under such circumstances? Well may it be said, "Our mother's his was not a failure."

He possessed a tender heart, and his very soul was in the work to which the Lord had called him. I well remember that at the close of a District Meeting in Southern Himois some years ago, in an exhortation, before the parting hand was given, brother Itavid found a very dear place in the affections of all present. Horing his exhortation his head became a fountain of tears, his eloquence exceedingly grand, so that the whole congregation was melted to tears. We felt that it was a real inspiration. and the remembrance of that seems prompts as to say, "Peace to his ashes," May his libe of love for his fellow-man be imitated by many.

Our Visit to Kansas.

Dear Botheren:-

AEFT my home in Ohio, September 24th. 🚶 via Baylon, Muncie, Bloomington and kausas City, for the State of Ivansas, which was reached in the alternoon of the 20th.

It is needless to aftempt to give a description of all 1 -aw, but rather to give impressions as they exist in my mind at present. I was feequently told by triends during my visit that I was excited and when the excitement abated. things would appear differently. But now as a week has passed away since my return home to familiar scenes and routines of duty. I think I can truthfully write my convictions with refecency to the State.

TIS GENERAL APPEARANCE.

To one unacceptorged to meeting such broad promes it is quite novel and affractive. As far as the eye can carry to see nothing but the Storedon, andosame, praine, is entanty zeand, and to me, a mative Backeye, was perbetty captiviting. These grass-covered plants. with heads of an the feeding all over them, are collamby my targetic the royers of souchstaning.

STATE OF SOCIETY.

In this particular our knowledge is of course quite limited, having visited only a few localties. Our impressions are that the society of Kansas compares very favorably with society elsewhere. Churches of all the various religious denominations are found throughout the comtry, especially the more popular. The people everywhere were very kind and obliging, and much interested in presenting the advantages and also the disadvantages under which they labor. The State has a well-established common school system, and the school-house everywhere meets the view, and the pedagogue, I learn is well remunerated for his arduous toil. "The common school, the hope of the nation," is here an established fact and highly prized by all the citizens. Labette Co., the one in which must of our time was spent, contained a school property in 1878 valued at $113.898,-Many of the sites have been nicely ornamented with shade trees and are inviting, as well as attractive, to the young tyro, enger in his pursnit of knowledge. I think that it may be safely said that everything speaks out with no uncertain sound for the future greatness of the

The health of a new country is often a theme dwelf upon by those contemplating a remove. In this particular I believe it may be safely said that Kansas is inviting. To all appearances there is nothing to prevent its being as healthy a State as any in the Umon. The water is sweet and pure, both hard and soft. True, there are some wells which are alkaline, and not so pleasant to the taste. Pools of water on the open prairies here do not stagnate but are kept pure by the action of the wind upon their surtace, hence the malaria so common to new countries, generally from this source, is entirely obviated. The wells are generally shallow, from 16 to 20 feet in depth, and consequently the water is not so cool as it would be if they were of greater death.

THE CLIMATE.

This is delightful. Southern Kansas bes in about the same latitude of Richmond, Va., or the north line of North Carolina and Tennesce, and enjoys about the same temperature, though probably less effected by local causes and hence more equable and amform. The Summers are warm, but much modified by the constantly prevailing wind from the South and South west. The Winters are short and generally hald; four or five months is consulered the extent of Wruter. Plowing commences in February ary, planting generally completed by April 15th, almost one month earlier than in Ohio. EARNS.

Cheapness is an essential item to the enngrant, it all other things necessary are equal. fumber and coal are aloundant and exceed ingly closep in the parts visited, Crawford, Cherokee, Labetto, Neosha and Lyon countres. Physic combined with a beathy climate and fertile soil will render cheap hand inviting. Unimproved lands rate from $21 to $6 per acre. Juproved from 85 to $25 owing to improvements and location.

TO MY BRETHRES.

In whose interest particularly I write to you, I would say a more inviting place for locating cannot easily be found, and we would suggest to every one confemplating a removal West, goand see southern Kansas. You will find more ready to show you the country and give you and are placed at the need to govern and control, the information desired. We would particularly refer our brethren to S. M. Burket of Parsons, Kansas, who is laboring in the interests of the Brethoon, and to those wishing to visit Naisas I would say, by corresponding with nim you may be much favored, especially nonisternig brethren. We also tidte pleasure in referring to Col. J. B. Csok, of Chef qualitable agent, whom we found a placeant and ordiging gentleman, and who rendered us much service and augurous much valuable information. A. J. Hivos.

The Silver Creek Meeting.

N the morning of the 22nd of October, we, in company with several others, left Lanather with for the Lave-feet at Suver Creek or Ogle Co. Having twenty-five notes teatrive. There are different varieties and on helias its we should before the salar solutions had pas on volumes, according to the tasks of the recussionary, and white the stars were yet visible in points. The tiny blade of grass, and the modest little wild flower, although they may seem almost beneath our notice, yet the same Hand that formed the gigantic bills, and piled the rocks one upon another, also made them and they are for a purpose, too. At this season of the year a peculiar sadness pervades all Nature. It is Autumn, and everything around us suggests the "Autumn of Life." The forests, which were lately robed in a mantle of green, are now almost base, and we see the withered leaves gently and noiselessly hill to the ground and are mingled with the dust of the valley. The naked branches will stand shivering alone smid the blasts of Winter. The falling leaves forcibly remind us of our mortality. How true are the lines of Mrs. Hemins:

"Leaves have their time to fall, And flowers to wither at the North whol's breath, And stars to set; but alf-Thou bast all seasons for thone own,

We arrived at the meeting-house before I0 o'clock, and found a birge congregation assembled. The opening sermon was delivered by brother Quinter, whose voice we have so often heard at Huntingdon. His discourse was based upon Galatians 2: 9; "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham."

The importance of being faithful in all the departments of life was urged upon us. Ministers, deacons, lathers, mothers, employers and employed, should prove themselves faithful in their different responsible callings. True, evangelical faith gives character. Faith means a system of truth, and is composed of all the elements which constitute a true, Christian character. Then the grand thought that it we are faithful we will be blessed and prove a blessing to others. If we faithfully perform the Christian daties God requires of us, even though we may Icel weak and unworthy, He will help us and others will be incited to duty, and thus while we are blessed the good influence we exert will bless all around us.

On Thursday morning we made a short call at the Mt. Morris College; arrived just in time for chapel exercises and were much pleased.-The scene reminded us of a happy group in the East that daily gathered in the "Pilgrim Chap" el," and of a pale, patient face that stood before as and read from the sacred page. He nobly inlifiled his mission, and one calm and leantiful Subbath evening in Spring-time, when all animated Nature seemed glad, we stood around his dying couch and witnessed the spirit take its flight—and all was over. He proved faithful to his calling and left examples of virtue and true piety that will ever be remembered by those who were thrown within the circle of his influence. He was compelled to leave his work when in the very midst of his usefulness, but others have taken it up and are successfully carrying it on. When there is a work to be done God always provides means, and this truth has been real zed in the Justory of our schools. It is to be hoped, that our young friends will appreciate the superior advantages, they empty, and by their strict etherence to right, and Carise tian chiracters, help to carry out and preserve the principles, which are characteristic of the Churco, and thus share the turden of those who and by their good nathueure, which is their happy privilege to exert when they leave the halfs of bearing and go out into the world, prove a idessing to themselves and others.

THE MEETING AT WARDAM COROLE.

On the 30th, we had another pleasant trip of (wents live miles north of this place to the wast at Wieldan's Grove, in Stephenson county. The first discourse was preached by Bro. L. R. Perfect from the words, "It is written." He careavoord to show "That the chief object or man is to prepare for the future.— lafe the time to serve the Lord. A right and a wrong way laid down before as. The Savior, when fempfed, dol not laring any theology or new doctrine, but only the oblifestimony, "It is written," We lind that Satan was present on that occesion to dempt the Sevier, and although we do not see min with our natural eyes, he is always present to tempt us, and why cannot we refer to the written Language of our Savior? There is power in these words. When opposed, present the word of God as an argument. When Sabartempled the Savior after his had faster in the wilderness, he said "M in shall not live by breadalone,". We are not to live by break alone in a comport aid work of a technique, Ag.

The subject of sell- xunimation was bancile by brother Hillery, who presented some graddeas. One was that "You can do not be I fo work, but how after we overlook ears do enations which cluster around that spot ensland excurse our bottimen and sisters. The supportanting -L.

and orderly that we ever attended anywhere, and were of a very impressive character. On Friday morning, Bro. Hillery again addressed a large audience from Numbers 14: 24. The meeting was closed with a warm address by brother Enoch Eby, who has charge of the church, and the singing of the old familiar hymn,

> . "When shall we meet again, Meet he'er to sever?"

Thus closed another season of refreshing that will long be remembered by those present. The brethren and sisters are very kind and sociable and make strangers feel at home among them. The same love and kindness which is a characleristic of the Church in the East, is also maoifested in the West, and wherever we go we fiad this grand and Christ-like trait among the Brethren. Jesus snys, "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples if you have love one toward another."

Dear Brethren:-

CHIDAY, October 3rd, was the time appointed for our Love-feast. The weather was elightful, and everything in Nature was happy. Bro. Juseph Snowberger, of Williamsburg, Pa., was with us, also our resident ministers, James, Brice, and David Sell. One young brother made his spiritual wants known and was baptized; also one reclaimed. While the emblems of Christ's broken body were being partaken of, adeath-like stillness pervaded. Much respect was shown by the spectators, which at previous densits was not the case. It is the duty of every one when he enters the house of God to show due respect for the services within, nor should he expect to be praised for good behavior in God's holy temple. It would be far better to remain at home than to annoy those who try to worship God, Brother Snowherger spoke on the subject of Self-examination. Prayer, family prayer, the tamily altar, our baptism and vow, religion, a secondary matter. Conclusion by Bro. James A. Sell. On Saturday morning we laid aside the cares of the day and at 10 A. M. met to learn more about Jesus. John 14: 1, was spoken from by brother Snowherger. Subject, "My Father's house of many mansions." Saturday evening again addressed by brother S., dso on Sabbath morning. The meeting was well attended, and I trust may prove a season tong to be remembered by us.dl.

VNOTHER HAPPY SEASON.

On Salurday evening, Oct. 22th, I had the extreme pleasure of meeting with the dear torethren and sisters of Altoona, Pa., at their tenst. Brethren Samuel Cox of Warriorsmark, G. Myers and Brice and David Sell conducted the meeting. What a lovely sight to see the orethren and sisters surround the table of the Lord! There were those present who had never before attended a inseting of this kind. Dear orethren and sisters, let us lot our light shine more brightly, that there who are yet in darkness may learn the way to desus. They, also, continued their meeting over Sabbath. They tack expected brother Quarter to be present, but are had already started westward. The house was densely crowded yet all seemed eager to fisters, and the services were conducted in a very orderly manner. May the Lard bless the church there and everywhere. Your sister in Christ. News of Ministerial Labor in Kansas

WE will give you the labor of your unworthy servant. We have to servant. We have the care of sevenorganizations, the nearest one 65 miles, from that to 150, and to visit all makes a circuit of about 400 miles, which has all to be done by private conveyance. Further, will say since the 25th of last April a year ago traveled about 1200 miles trying to preach to the isolated members, and organizing churches, and yet half of the calls are not tilled. Will we not concluddear brethren, that the harvest is great? Trul. your humble servant feels it so, and in addition to this, nearly all the members are in very limited eircnuistances linaneally. Now how many of our numetering brethren will feel to make the sacrifice of friends and nativity, and come to the great field of labor and help to keep the car of salvation moving that we may gather souls for the celestmi city?

Dear Brethren:—

THE brethren of Spring Creek Congregation held their Love-feast on the 22nd of October. Eld. P. J. Brown of Congress, Ohio, addressed the large audience upon the subject of "Sanctification. Eld. Jesse Calvert closed the meeting with appropriate remarks. In the afternoon we met for the election of officers. The responsible lot of unnister fell upon Bro. David Connell, whom we believe feels the weight of his calling. Brethren D. and E. Miller were chosen as deacons. May each go forth as the Lord's chosen, and while their burdens at times press upon them with a crushing weight, let us bear them up, having the prosperity of the cause of Christ at heart. The ordination took place in the presence of the assembly and the perfect silence gave evidence of the solemnity of the occasion.

The evening exercises were very impressive. By a large majority, we voted a change from the double to the single mode of feet-washing. The few who could not unite with us, will, we trust, see the beauty in the change after a little more thought on the subject. On the follow ing morning, larewell addresses were derivered by the brethren, after which two precious souls were aided to the fold by baptism. God have the praise. "Who will be the next?"

Sunday-School Convention.

CCORDING to appointment, the friends of Sunday-schools assembled in Convention on Thursday, Oct. 25th, 1879, at Solomon's Creek, Elkhart Co., Ind.

The Superintendant being absent, an organizution was effected by electing brother. David. Younge, Superintendant protein The Minutes of last Convention were then read. The following was then read as the programme for the present meeting.

Topic 1. What are the advantages of Sunday. schools among the Brethren? To be opened by Jesse Calvert, Daniel Shively.

- 2 Has the experiment of Sunday-school Conventions proved to be beneficial to the S. S. cause in the Brotherhood? Daniel Whitmer, John Sturgis.
- 3. Tencher's Meetings, and how to conduct them. Lewis Muntz, Sarah Johnson.
- 4. What are the necessary qualifications of teachers and officers? P. R. Wrightsman, Isaac Berkey.
- 5. How should scholars be instructed who cannot read? Isaac Early, Noah Shutt.
- 6. How can all who attend Sunday-school be induced to take part in the exercises? John B. Wrightsman, J. H. Warstler.
- 7. What records should be kept and how? Amsey Paterbaugh, Almon Mock.

8. How should funds be raised to defray the expenses? Wm. G. Cook, Harrison Elson.

Isaac Early and Noah Shutt were absent. and Benjamin Leer was chosen to open the 5th topic. Amsey Puterbangh and Almon Mock were also absent, and J. H. Miller was chosen to open the 7th topic. Sister Emma Bowman was obosen to open the 8th topic in place of W. O. Cook and Harrison Elson.

The 1st topic was opened by Daniel Shrvely, and was followed by John B. Wrightsman, Isaac Berkey, S. H. Bashor, Emma Bowman and others, all showing clearly the advantages of Sunday-schools unong the Brethren.

Bro. John Stargis was followed upon the 2nd topic by brother S. H. Bashor, with very plain and practical remarks upon the subject. There was a lively interest manifested throughout the meeting, and every topic was handled pointedly and practically. Large attendance and good order.

A committee of five was appointed to nominate officers for the ensuging year. The following brethren were elected; A. H. Puterbaugh, Supt., J. H. Miller, Assiet., Daniel Shryely, Cor See., J. B. Wrightsman, Rev. Sec.

A proposition was passed to the effect that all propositions and topics be sent to the Cor. Secretary, from which a programme will be arranged and published in due time for next Convention. Respectfully submitted,

"Misrepresented."

O'UR brother and Elder John Harshey, of Warrensburg, Mo, requests us to say for him that he has been very much imsrepresented a late number of the Brethren at Wark. He hopes the corrections will be made.— $\Gamma_{inidico}\tau_{io}$

We should be very sorry if we knew that we misrepresented any one. It is a grave thing to misrepresent. Not long smeetin "Elder" gravely declared before a congregation, that a convention had been called among the Brethres, for the purpose of "getting up" livings, and times. for children, that our present hymns and times were not good enough, it seeme! He supposed that such tunes as "Old Dan Tucker" would be adopted; that we were in a tast time, &c. Now when we heard it we wondered and wondered who had called such a convention, and where. We had not heard of it before, nor have we heard of it since, though we have made diligent inquiry about it. Perhaps brother Harshey will remember hearing this "misrepresentation" not

But about the B. AT W. misrepresentation We make this offer: If the church in which Beo-John Hurshey holds his membership will say that in my report of his trual I misrepresented him. I will most gladly correct it I go further: If a majority of the elders in Southern Mo., say that I misrepresented Bro. Harshey in my report of his trial, I will make ample correction. I tried to be impartial in my account of the trial, for should we not all labor for peace and have some forbearance, thus showing that we possess unity of tanh? Had I been disposed to misrepresent Bro. H., I could have shown him in a very undavorable light, but charity said, 'Be merciful; he torbearing;" and thus. endeavored to heed. I was present at his trial, heard what was proven against him, conversed with Elders, and learned the extent of his "schis matic" officits. It has but little sympathy in Missouri. The proposition which I have made is certainly fair and Troporable, and it I have done wrong Bro. II, will have no trouble to set me right before the public. My lave for Bro-H is yet strong, and what I have here said is with the best of feelings. May his last days be filled with great love and peace, and while we are all so poor and weak, and miserable without God's grace, O, may we drink often from the fountain of truth, so that we may know how to behave in the house of God. I rejoice that God holds judgment in his own hands. To him we commit all our deeds. He will do right; none can hinder his fairness. We repeat our readmess to be corrected by Bro. Harshey's own congregation, or the Eiders in Southern Mo. Is not this fair? Will the Vindicator please publish this fair offer?

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 2d. Baptist churches possess the Bible characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.

D. B. RAY, Athrms.

J. W. STEIN, Denies.

J. W. STEIN'S SECOND NEGATIVE.

WHEN my friend can appeal to our church characteristics in support of his affirmative arguments, he is welcome to do so, but when he quits his proposition to attack the Brethren Four friend's church"), as he did three times in his last affirmative (and as many times misrepreseated them), to divert attention from the proposition under discussion, he betrays at once the desperateness of his cause and his want of fdelity to the principles and rules of all homovable debate. Surely he is hard pressed to finish his 'aegative line"

It is not true that I accused the Baptists of "adultery, fornication, profane swearing," etc. I specified "hatred, variance, wrath" and "strite." They license these lasts whenever they engage mearnal war. Mr. H. says "Baptist churches do not engage in war on any account." If they do not as churches, they encourage and justily their members in doing so, and are therefore Jistas guilty. No church can vindicate itself from crimes which it justfiles in its members. Buptists "do such things," and Paul says, "They that do such things shall not inherit, the km2dom of God," My triend may exclaim "horrible, but these are harryl facts. How then can they be churches of Christ?

The Savior's prohibition of eaths(Matt. 5; 33) and allodes directly to caths of continuation Web, 6:16, merely states what eaths of confirmafrom are to men. It does not authorize such eaths thrist condems anything more than a simple at-Wroalion or negation, as coming train reit. Matt. 4.37. Baptists justify this evil as well as the evil of engaging in war. War is of the devil bating in it. This brings me to my Th Neg. Ain. Baptist churches are not churches of Christ because they hold that we may do evil, fight and kill, and take oaths, that good may come. Christians are to abhor evil, (Rom. 12:9,) and abstain from all appearamer of it. 1 Thess, 5; 22. "He that does he will hath not seen God." 3 John H. But Baptists justify evil.

Whatever the party adjusting Christ may have done, Christ himself did not swear. Matt. 26: 63, 64. He simply made a statement. Believers have pledged their fidelity to Christ in the solemn sacrament of baptism; therefore they cannot disobey Christ by taking oaths of confir mation to any institution unlike Christ's government, without exposing themselves to the crime of perjury. If they swear allegiance to any other institution, they put themselves nuder obligations to obey it whether it commands them to disobey Christ or not, and this Baptists do by taking oaths. My friend offers as a third argument, love to God as essential to baptsim and church membership. That "every one who loves is hegotten (for such is the true import of the passage) of God, and that this heyetting precedes birth, the haptism or adoption into the divine family we believe and teach. But Mr. R's argument assumes that justification, which is conditioned on the new birth, is contingent upon the act of beyetting. His argument is founded upon the assumption that begetting and birth are the same. But we have already shown that Baptists lack even this true love to God. Christ says, "If a man love me he will keep my words." John 14: 23. Baptists justify themselves as we have seen in disobeying some of the words of Christ and of his holy apostles.

"They profess to know and love God, but in works they dray him." "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." Matt. 7: 21. "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Luke 6: 46. I reiterate it, "The curse of God rests upon those that "love not the Lord Jesus Christ,' " 1 Cor. 16: 22. But "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can be love God whom he hath not seen." I John 4: 20. Read I John 2: 9, 11. "Because we love the hrethren," is John's evidence of transition from death to life. "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." I John 3: 14. Baptists love one another like sinners generally do, "for sinners also love those that love them." Luke 6: 32. Are they therefore born of God and justified? Nay, because they also kill those that kill them. Christians are not only not to injure but to love even their enemies; but Baptists like other sinners will hate and quarrel and kill even their brethren about political and other questions. The Baptists lack the evidence of love to their brethren and hence of love to God. They may profess and houst of love, but in the language of missionary Coan, "What is that love worth that worketh ill to its neighbor? What is the nature of that conversion for regeneration) which, under the command of a man, will split a brother's skull with a salue, drive a bayonet through a brother's bowels, send a houp of lead through a brother's heart, break a brother's bones, scatter his limbs, his blood, his brains, and his quivering flesh with an internal torpido. or a bursting shell?" Yet Baptists do the very things and are justified and tellowshiped in them by their churches. How can these be chinches of the mick and lowly Josus, who "came to save men's lives and not to destroy?" Surely they ment regeneration, conversion Such churches will never band he the diabolical spaint of war and shed over the earth the cadian cot the principal regular christianity

My friend trees to escape his difference with and yet the Baptists justify themselves in partie- | faith, by maintaining near that they are on ultimente. Therefore his repentance, which is prior to faith in its order, is a δ saying m order, and a solution

ing to his theory until it is accompanied by faith, but he minimize that repentance reaches into life, remission, &c., before and independent of baptism. John's "baptism of repentance" (Mark 1; 4; Luke 3; 3; Auts 13; 24) was not only for (ris, into or in order to) remission, but was into repentance itself. He says, "I indeed baptize you with (cis in) water unto (cis, into) reprutance." Matt. 3; 11. Was that repentimee not into life? Will Mr. R. answer? The plain, uninterpreted passages of scripture which I adduce on the subject of baptism, do not suit my friend's interpretation, hence he passed them nnonswered. But he wants to know if we should buptize children of God or children of the devil? Ans. We should baptize neither children of God need no baptism and "children of the davil" are mufit for haptism. When prople have died to Satan and are begotten of Godthen they are to be "born of water," i.e., brought forth into actual childhood and heirship by baptism. My friend's theology can discern no disunction between begitting and birth, between the process of generating and that of deliverance and herrship, between the conditions of douth and the resurrection. I will now ask ham a few questions. 1. Do you believe it right to bury a lice man? "Answer, yes or no." 2. Do not Baptists require candidates, for baptism to confess that they have experienced a change from death unto life before they bury them? "Say yes, or no." 3. Was Christ buried while dead or after he was amale alive? "Please do answer." 4. Do Baptists hold that "far the remission of sins" (Matt. 26; 28) mean, because sins harr been remitted? Please answer.

Notice, 1. Baptists hold that baptism is essential to membership in the church of Christ 2. They deny that baptism is ever required in order to remission. 3. They therefore virtually teach that the church of Christ, with all that is peculiar to it, is never made needful to the salvation of a soul. Again-1. Baptists teach that all may get into Christ, "the head of the church," without baptism? They teach that no one can get into the church, Christ's body, without baptism. 3. They therefore virtually teach that some in Christ are no part of his the pattern of the temple. True, the material must be prepared before it is put into the temple. This is like begetting before birth. Still the building process is essential to the very existruce of the temple and to each parts identity with the whole. Each part however thoroughly prepared, must be hubbled in, or it never becomes a part of "God's temple." "God's habitation." Notice, 1. Baptists teach that all must become temples of the Holy Spirit (of God). bctore baptism, independent of looptism. 2. They teach that no one can become a part of the church, "God's temple" "the habitation of God through the Spirit," without baptism. 3. They therefore virtually teach that "temples of the Holy Spirit" are no part of "God's "temple," of "the habitation of God through the Spirit." But we have shown that Baptiets need even the preparation for this building Again, 1. Baptists teach that baptism is essential to membership in the clinich of Christ, 2. They teach that the Baptist church is the only church of Cheest on earth, and will constitute exclusively the linds of the Lamb in Glory, 3. They therefore virtually feach that all, who are not taptized (though they expect to meet many of them in beaven) will never constitute a part, of the Bride of the Lomb - Lask Mr. R. to tell as what relations they will sustain to the Baptist. church in glory? COME, EVERY ONE THAT THIRSTETH.

TO doubt it is advisable to keep dogs out of little shallow pools, for the water would soon become defiled, and the cattle would retuse it; but we do not need to preserve a great river, and no one cares to put up a great notice informing the dogs that they may not wash in the sea, because there is no fear whatever that. how many dogs may come, they will ever pollute old Father Thames, or defile the boundless sea. Where there is infinite abundance, there may well be unlimited freeness. The vilest dog of a sinner that ever ato the crumbs that fell from the Master's table is invited to plunge into the river of the water of life, which is clear as erysal still, though thousands of uncircumcised and defiled lips have drunk it, and myriads of foul souls have been washed whiter than snow in its streams, "Come and welcome," is the note which sounds from Calvary, from the wounds of the expiring Savior; yea, it sweetly comes upon mine car from the lips of the glorified Christ, who sits at the right hand of the Father. "Let him that is utherst, come. "And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." No one can be an intruder when the call is so unconditional, and whoever tries to keep a sinner back is so doing the devil's work. They are trespassers who keep away from Jesus, and not those who come to him. Some are atraid that they would be presumptuous should they believe on the Lord Jesus, but presumption hes in the opposite direction; it is the worst of presumption to dare to question the love of God, the efficacy of the blood of atomement, and the saving power of the Rodeemer. Cease from such proud questions, an trust in Jesus.

Come bither, bring thy boding fears, Thy aching heart, thy lorsting tears; "Tis mercy's voice salutes thine car-O trembling sinner, come

-C. H. Spurgeon.

Coaxing the devil to support the gospel is a modern device. The primitive church knew nothing of it. When Paul was collecting funds to aid poor saints at Jerusalem, he used no ta ro. My friend's 4th argument is founded upon [festivals' "mum sociables", kissing games, or other sanctified snares, to accomplish his object. The Christians paid their own bills, and did not expect Satan to pay for the weapons which they used against him. When the devil supports a church, he does so in this lown interest He carries on his operations with a full knowledge of the fact that "a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand." For every dollar paid out of his coffers to the church, he receives full value. Church partnerships with the devil never benefit the former, but always the latter. Hands

> Unfold larm comes to the church by the use of even questionable measures to raise money for the support of God's work. It creates the impression, in the minds of the worldly, that the church is a kind of parasite, dependent for its existence on the community, that it is a -crt of genteel beggar which it is proper and tashionaide to support; that it is an object of charity or even pity and coultompt which is gradeful. I is the tolerance of the people (that lets it live). The anguilly regard such charelies as engaged in seeking money rather than souls and talos ing wealthy members more than poor saints. To stand before the world in this ignt is noimiliating and degrading beyond expression. Such churches ought to be closed or deansed, cured or killed.

LIFE'S MORNING

HEE'S morning hours soon pass away, 1 Like lines of sunset light: No vain regrets, no mournful tears, Can stay their arrowy flight, As clouds before the summer wind-With naught their course to stuy-So morning years with youthful dreams, Glide to eternity.

But will they pass like summer clouds Upon the balmy nir: No good thing sought, no good deed done. No treasure gained with care? O, what is youth but life's fair spring, Its growth and blossom hours? The time to sow the precious seeds, With earnest, spirit powers.

The wheat we sow, will surely grow, This law will never sleep: And if our hopes are true or false, Their harvest we must reap. But, if through life's fair spring-tide years We till the mellow soil: And do our work with willing hands, Through summer hours of toil.

Autumn will yield a precious store, To fill our granary; And we can sing a joyful song, In harvest jubilce. The evil days will never come No future shall we fear--But fruits of everlasting peace. Will in our rives appear.

A FEW PRACTICAL HINTS.

BY PROP. W. E. 100 KARRO

MEACH, then, the young those things that tend to promote their physical welfare, and a taste for the good, the beautiful and the true, will not be lacking. But if we attempt to cultivate, a love for beauty in the mind, in the heart and in the soul, in any other way than by cultivating a taste for the useful, we will surely fail. Whoever would love charity must decharitable deeds. Whoever would love goodness must first do good. No one with lying lips can lave the truth.

Every good impulse, every noble thought, every kind intent, every virtuons mineiple, is the result of being, of employment, of toil of the hands or the head, for the gratification, in the first instance, of solfish desires. Is it not true that if we had the power of always directing ourselves according to the rule of self interest, is it not true that the attainment of such self-interest would comprehend and include the greatest possible satisfaction of all our tendencies? Of this there can be no doubt. Expericare proves that there is a deep harmomy between obedience to the law of duty and self interest. What does the law of duty advise? That we should fulfill our own destiny, and yet not hinder, but rather aid, others in fulfilling theirs. This satisfaction of our nature is our true end - our real well-being and good, taste and the higher virtues are somehow or other disconnected with the breadcan develop the full capacity of the linmon soul. So, we insist, that herause more stress is not placed on the practicalstudies in school, and because the young are not taught that labor is the great polisher and purifier of the mind, our schools are not doing their full duty. And not only so, but they make labor adious by holding up education as a means of escape from a life of toil. This idea is the curse of our country to-day. We see the results in the thousands of lazy tramps with whom the country is filled. It crowds the professions with an impecunious mediocrity that might have succeeded well as farmers trades men, artizans and mechanics. Mechanical trades are avoided. Crowds of young men leave their pleasant, comfortable homes in the country and rush into the cities only to be swallowed up in the maelstrone of poverty, wretchedness and vice. Half educated young men and women are clamoring for places as clerks and salesmen and teachers. We lay much of the blame for this state of affairs on our public schools, and especially on the High Schools of our larger towns and villages. which, instead of laying the foundation for better workmen, foster a disinclination to manual labor. We would not say one word to discourage any young man or women from obtaining as good an education as possible. We believe it is the duty of every one to cultivate, the talents God has given him. But to all is not given the same kind of talents and we would have every one educated with special reference to some particular end some parsuit or calling.

The means by which we attain to this good we call the unful.

The attainment of good, causes agrees able sensations: the sum of agreeable sensations is hopginoss; hence, Utility is the ley to happiness.

Most of our teaching is aimless. We give our youth what is called an education not that they may have greater power to do good, but that we may have it to say that they are educated, and trust to chance or circumstances, for determine their course in life.

A young man graduates with honor from a High School or college. He has passed his examinations, and received his dijdoma. He holds in his hand the evidence of his wonderful attainments, to him the talisman at whose magic touch the ways of wealth, and position and power will open wide, their portals and make his progress through life one continual triumph. He leaves his Al nm Mater, carrying with him the benedictions of his teachers. The many predictions of a brilliant future for him have fastered in his mind an undue sense of his awn importance. He goes out into the world to make his fortune.

But labor alone He steps into a workshop and sees at a glowing forge, perhaps, an old friend, who, years ago was dropped from his list of friends because his grovelling nature chose a mechanical trade with its grime and smoke and sweat, rather than tread the sylvan shades and classic groves of Academe. His brawny arm is hammering out a comfortable living and laying the foundation of future competence and influence. Every where our hero goes he finds the same thrift and content of these workers, these Na ture's noblemen. He, the only one of all the village boys, on whom doting pa rents lavished their wealth to raise him above the vulgar crowd, now finds himself the only one of them all who has nothing to do and who knows how to do nothing. His ideas of his own importance begin to vanish. He drifts aimlessly around for awhile and finally settles down as a country school teacher, an occupation he once despised. Now indeed if he has the right kind of stuff in him, he may begin to learn—but he has lost valuable time, and when we take into account the thousands who an nually "finish" their course with no definite object in view, and who try, first one thing and then another before finally choosing their life labor, and considering the other thousands who never make permanent choice, but waste their lives in fruitless experiments, we may well stand aghast at the terrible array of blighted hopes, crushed aspirations and ruined lives that are the result of misdirevted labor. This uintess teaching is all wrong. After the rudiments have heen acquired, each child should be taught with a view to future usefulness. Teach them to discover, to invent, to put this and that together and draw their own conclusions. Make their minds workshops of thought instead of eyelopedia's of knowledge. A few sharp, well tempered tools, each in its proper place so that the workman can lay his hand on them at any movement, are better than a whole shopfull of dull and rusty tools lying around in confusion.

> To not put too heavy a load on the minds of the children, but teach them the useful little things of every day life. Cease to tell them that they are all—em bryo Presidents, Senators and Generals. Teach them that to lead an honest, in dustrious life is a greater honor than to be a philosopher, a poet or a state-man. Tell them that the influence of kind words and gentle actions will live when the names of the great ones of the world, her conquerors, (emblazoned butchers) and her statesman, (political parasites) have been sunk in "forgetfulness and mere ablivion

Teach them to be contented with their situation in life,

TY S. L. THOMASSON.

MIDST all confusion and strife the the foundation of the Lord stands sure; secure and happy are they who build thereon by an obedient faith. He knows them as his own people, and they may know this themselves by their dil. igent care to depart from iniquity, and to honor the name of Christ, by a holy conversation. Alas! how little has it been remembered that the servants of the Lord must not "strive, but be gen. tle toward all men." Numbers seem to think the reverse should be the con. duct, and that zeal for doctrinal truth is incompatible with gentleness and meek. uess; and their love for controversy is one great hindrance to recovering sin. ners; for to aggravate opposers is no way to couvince them; and to censure one another, when perhaps we do the same or similar things, is very wrong, The branches of men's disobedience are numerous, yet they all spring from the same root. Can any one judge another without at the same time condemning himself, though he may not have committed the same crime, yet liath been guilty of the same apostacy from God, and rebellion against him, and is equally chargeable with sinning against his hetter judgment. To God we englit to leave others, and be chiefly concerned to judge ourselves, and to seek mercy according to his blessed gospel. If our fellow sinners cannot stand before us in judgment, how are we who are guilty of the same thing escape the righteons condemnation of a heart searching God. It behooves us to remember our own unworthiness and falibility. We should therefore carefully judge ourselves both to our state and condition, that our confession of Christ be proved genuine by our devoted abedience to him. It is very important that we be reminded of death and judgment, and of the discrimination of character, which will soon be made. Not only immense multitudes of infidels, pharisees, and aposates are througing the broad road to destruction, but a large portion of those who appear to be followers of Christ, and are externally admitted to the communion of saints will be found foodish virgins having their lamps in their hands, but no grace in their hearts.

It is indeed to be lamented that while the heavenly Bridegroom farries Christians(!) are apt to be drowsy. At this our weak brethren may stumble. Instead of this weshould sympathize with them. We should deem ourselves honored in the reputation, success, and usefullness of our more distiguished brethran. Instead of all acting as if all were to be apostles rulers and teachers, we should remember that the most eminent now will not necessarily be the most teminent in the world to come,

A DISCUSSION.

Licensia Christia

On the time that the apostler broke brech between Dr. J. M. Ward, of the Christian Church and Eld, S. S. Mohler, of the Dunkard Church.

| The practice of the Dundard Church is to nold communion on any day of the week-1

THE WARRIES AND WELL

Mr. Mehleh:

Pear Sir. -The near approach of con amonal communion reminds me that I had not finished the answer by your last letter. The time you choose for that service, is so clearly a departure "Wisdom is better than rubles; and from the usage of the religious, world as and sustained by the evidence of sacred history, that it is no more than right to had so far departed from the primitive question your practice.

In our former letters we had reached a point where, as you said I had brought up improbabilities. While on the other hand, you had made a positive declaration, that Paul did not break bread on the first day of the week. You tried to sustain your position by the meaning you would force on the word "morrow," in the passage where Paul preached till midnight, ready to depart on the "morrow." Now if that word never meant anything but "next day," and if "next day" never meant anything but a twenty-four hour day, and had the Jewish day begun and ended at midnight then you had gained your point. Unfortunately for your position the word "morrow" don't sit in the straight jacket you prepared for it. You challenged me to show that it did not so sit, and this I propose to do, and with no indulgence in probabilities. Turn to Websters's Dictionary, (pictorial edition) 1876, and see what "morrow" means. He gives the primary significance of the word, "morrow," to be simply, "morning." Your common sense and scholarship will dictate to you, that the primary meaning of a word is the true essence of that word, and with no reference as to what may be implied in a secondary definition. Suppose, for an example, you try the word "bapto," and see if that is not true. You are well aware that the salutation, "Good mor row," that was in common use formerly meant the same as our "Good morning' of the present day. Now in Jewish times the evening and the morning made the day, or the evening and the "morrow," if you please. The day began at 6. r. M. of one day, and continued till 6. P. M. of the next, so that the evening and the morrow made a twenty-four hour day, Paul met on the first day of the week and preached till midnight. He met on the first part of a Jewish day, broke brend on the first day, ready to depart on the morning of the same day, as the day consisted of the evening and the morning according to the Bible. Webster gives the "next day following," as a sec ondary definition of the word "morrow" and his primary definition of the word "day," is "from dawn till dark," in contradistinction to the word, night, and his secondary defininition is "the whole 24 hours." So, with the above in view, you must pardon me for not hoisting on board your positive declaration, "That the Apostle Paul did not break bread on the first day of the week." The record that says that Paul preached till midnight, don't even intimate that midnight was the end of a day, for that was contrary to the Jewish division of time, and you have no right to assume it, and, on that assumption make a positive dec laration to justify your unscriptural practice. The time that the sacrament was instituted forms no data for its observance, but the time that the apostles observed it, guided as they were by the Holy Spirit, is what should guide us. That the early Christians were so guid ed is certain, for Mosheim says that, ". 1// Christians set apart the first day of the week for worship and the breaking of brend." All Christians includes the Jews, who observed the first day, and who also observed the seventh as a fes tival, from their previous Jewish educayou must confine yourself to the pracinto the church, and show where some sume that the real trouble with the Dr. [inside clean, but the outside also. practice as to meet on any day of the week, than the Lord's day. To bolster your practice by such innovations won't stand in the light of the Bible and sacred history. All that I am advocating on this point is, that we should be on apostolic ground; and, while you as a church may just as easily be right as wrong, you need not complain of what others do with water, under the name of baptism, while you so greatly violate a sacred practice.

Respectfully yours, DR' J. M. WARD. Cornelia, Mo. Ang. 26, 1879. REPLY.

The discussion grew out of a sermon preached by Brother A. Hutchison, from the text, "Diminish not a word." Dr. Ward heardit—sent me a note, charging on us that we diminish from the word and offered as proof that we break bread on others than the first day. I denied his assumption, and demanded of him to produce the command, or precept that we should break bread on the first-day of the week. I further asked of him to prove that the disciples at Trons broke bread on the first day of the week, calling his attention to the fact while they met on the first day of the week to break bread, they however, did not break bread until after midnight. This led the Dr. to assume that they met between sunset and dark, and according to Jewish time they thus met on the first day of the week; he giving as a reason for this meeting between sunset and dark to break bread, that Paul passing through Trons hastily called the disciples together to break bread. In answer to this I called his attention to the fact that Paul was seven days at Troas. The Dr. however, fell back to his pet theory again, and would have it that the disciples met between sunset and dark. Thus simply begging the matter, assumed that it was Jewish time, though Trons being a Gentile city hundreds of miles from Jerusalem, and practically plead apostolic precedent in sanction of his church practice to which was replied that if apostolic precedent, simply as such, established a church ordinance then we must hold night buptism as a church ordinance, because of the night baptism of the jailor and his house. Also we must hold community of goods, as a church ordinance since something of this obtained in the infancy of the apostolic church. Thus while the Dr. is grap pling with the problem of apostolic breaking of bread on the first day of the week, he still hangs there, and in his attempt to get clear of that horn of the dilemma, he says, "Jewish time, Jewish time!" and that the word "morrow" means a part of the same twenty-four hour day, beginning the evening before "Jewish time."

The progress then which the Dr. made toward making out his case against us of "diminishing from the Word" as yet hangs on his plea for "Jewish time" at Troas in that breaking of bread. He does not even attempt to bring forward a single precept in support of his church claims as against our practice, admitting even that he could prove his "Jew-

DISAGREEM ENTS.

BY DANIEL LONGANECKER.

T is maintained, first, that there are too many periodicals, and second that some publish things before the world that ought not be published. Third. some reject articles that were written by the influence of the Holy Spirit in childlike simplicity. No man should assume to a universal Bishop and lord it over God's heritage. No gospel article should be rejected, because it is not fashiouably gotten up, or learned according to the world. Sometimes there is a word misspelled or omitted. | Yes, we are doing it, even rewriting your article so as not to delay our compositors, Eds] The Scribes and Pharisees objected to the doctrine of Christ, saying "Have any learned men believed in him?" Cursed are they who understand not the law. Nicodemus-like they could not see the kingdom of heaven.

 Λ simple gospel taught—by—a simple preacher. Christ called fishermen, and by his power and spirit the effects were great on the day of Pentecost. The word and spirit went forth from the apostles like arrows from the bow of God. What lightnings and thunderings and shakings among the dry bones Three thousand converted and baptized, brought to the shore of salvation. Thus God chose to hide these things from the wise and prudent, and reveal them unto babes. He chose simple things to confound the mighty. David, a mere youth with a simple sling killed the giant Sampson with a simple, insignificant jawhone was chosen to slay three thousand Philistines. It has been observed by some learned men that the most fashionable and elegant preachers are the least successful in turning sinners to obey the humble commands of God. They may get the world by scores into proud and tashionable churches, but to make converts to the meek and lowly Savior they cannot.

A certain priest who could read the Bible in fourteen languages being overcome in Scripture arguments by a Dunkard, asked the Dunkard, "Where did you get your divinity?" He replied, "from the best Professor that ever walked on this earth." "What is his name?" "Jesus Christ," was the reply. "Well," said the priest, "you have a good one." If the gospel is to be the Christian's guide I will confess that the Dunkard church comes the nearest the pattern.

If the very heavy laden sinner makes use of God's Word by faith he cannot miss the way to beaven. He has two infallible guides; but without both he is sure to miss or step off the narrow way. I do not say these things in opposition to classical collection. Much worldly | come boldly unto a throne of grace. learning is like much worldly riches; it leaves to clittle time for heavenly learn ing. If it is a good servant it is also a hard master.

We have seen in our travels, through different States, that the churches which out works, is dead also," -8el. ish time" theory correct, which neither have learned men to preach to them he, or any other Dr. can prove, even then that the congregations were small, while as an apostolic precedent it would stand on the other hand where the common side by side with the right haptism of preacher was laboring, there were large tion. fruits of the spirit can be seen on the outside, not on the inside. God looks inwardly. We judge the inside by the outside. Those who wish to go to heaven should go to the school of Christ and learn their weakness and humility inside and outside. May the time never come when the old and untutered will be set aside and rejected by men who took for their salary from the church.

THE editor of the Settler's Guide, Chetopa, Kansas, says: "We have four lots to donate them (the Brethren) for church purposes when they are ready to build a church of their own in Chetopa." This is characteristic of Col. Cook, who by the way sends out a good Guide for settlers.

Hor iron welds easily, and good black-smiths waste little time on cold iron. Doctrines, opinions and disputations of men are tedious and unprofitable, but good old gospel marms. Preacher, are you putting gospel fire into your work? Call down the warming, meeting, burning power of God's great truth. Warm your hearers, then apply the hammer; melt first, then mold. It is not so much the truth as the whole truth that fashions the heart for God's service. Less clatter, less jingling, but more real solid argument, preceded by the "fire that barns," will produce better results.

GATHERING THEM IN.

N the 29th of October, we commenced meetings in the Hudson Church. Meeting each evening, and by Sunday, Nov. 2nd, four loved ones signified their desire to have fellowship with the people of God; hence after the foremon services on Lord's day, we repaired to the water where the minister went with the candidates to do God's will. The weather was exceedingly cold, yet not too severe to obey Jesus. One of the immersed was an aged woman upwards of seventy years old; the other three were young, yet brave to go forward in the work of the Lord. On Sunday evening again met to praise God, and tell the sweet old story of Jesus' love. A young man signified his willingness to unite with the land of behevers, so we went to the beautiful river on Monday, and did as Jesus communded in Matt. 28; 19. Monday evening still found us in publicossembly with the "Sword of the Spirit" as our wenpon of warlare. Another young man sought to be released from the fetters of sin, and declared his willingness to wall, in newness. of life. TRIALS OF LIFE

COME regard the trials of life as too severe and as bringing no reward. Opposition is good, and the greater the opposition the better for the opposed. What do you put on land to enrich it, and cause it to produce a bountiful crop? Then the more filth, and slander, and malignity you heap upon a man, the more he will thrive. When, you have been tried you know your own strength. You can not learn to swim by sitting on the table. You must go into deep water. Do you think the sprouted acorn is an oak tree? No; but it must endure the cold winters and the fierce storms, before it can be a mighty oak. Each trial adds strength and prepares it for more fierce ones. Heavy nfflictions are the best benefactors to heavenly affections, but he who afflicts you does not always design a blessing, but God gives it to you. The envious man adhets for an evil purpose, but he only adds strength to your moral powers. If you should undertake a journey around the world you would prepare yourself for all latstudes. So you must be willing to take life as you find it. You must prepare to go up hill as well as down. Corn is not planted, cultivated, gathered, ground, and made into bread without labor. You were created; you were only begnn. Without trials you would not now be what you are. The greater the darkness the brighter the stars. Wine is not made without the press. Bleed a vine and it will thrive the faster. Gold melted and cleared of its dross looks better than in its original state. Glow-worms glow most heautiful on dark nights. The more you tread camomile the more it will spread. The stronger the wind the more the thistle will scatter. Most are triumphant because they have overcome the trials of life. Severe trials is the rich soil of true manhood. By them the soul is refined, the affections enlarged and strengthened. Then welcome distress and calaunty as refiners and cease your fretting and complaining. Sickness, misfortune, opposition scour us of our rust and dispel the mildew from our affections. Worry not when you are pruned, but in your patience possess ye your soul. God sometimes puts you on your back that you may look upward. Whom the Lord leveth he chasteneth. Then endure afflictions and trials without a murnar, M. M. E.

LOOSE CHRISTIANITY.

UR heading is a logical absurdity. As impossible as it is would be for a man to be a follower of Christ and depart from his footsters, so it is to be a Christian at all and be a loose one. A half Christian is no Christian at all. He is a traitor in the ranks. These we will always have, and should not be surprised if they sometimes discomfit us.

A loose Christian is a peculiar and particular kind of a no Christian. While we deplore the nillneme of prolessed infidels and ungodly men, we do not believe that they hinder or retard the cause of Christianity near as much as the loose Christians do. The loose Christian is accepted as the product of the gospel of Christ, and whatever inconsistencies are in him are regarded as being in the religion which he professes. The loose christian is not a real one—he is ouly a pretended one. He pretends to favor just what he opposes. Then he is as much worse than an infidel as a hypocrite is worse-than an honest man.

Nothing will kill a good doctrine quicker than for a lot of bad men to profess to believe, favor and obey it. The more wicked men say in layor of a good thing the more honest and pious people will avoid it. Politicians under-None seemed appressed, persecuted, held back | ed. It makes no difference what you look upon,

> O how sail it is to have the sinner say, when orging him to join the church of the Brethren. "Oh I am now as much like Clinist as the ma-1 mily of your brothren and sisters!" How in-Tile are all the chorts of the minister to add 10 the numbers in the church when a few or many the members are like whitened sepalchers. That is, when they make a mice profession, but ave a prayerless, impious, dishonest and quarrelsome lee! Oh God, can mythong be more deplotable than this! Can any darkness of crime and wickedness be worse than this?

THE GRACE OF GOD.

OD'S grace is his divine favor toward man. Mercy is its handmaid, and love its father. It is sovereign because he who manifests it, is sovereign. It is the source of all the benefits we receive from God. We did not merit the grace of God. We received grace, not because we sought out the Lord, found him and volentarily submitted a plan of reconcilation to him, but because in our helplessness he patie t us and had mercy. The grace of God, therefore was numerited on our part. It was God's love, not ours, that found out redemption for us All the favors on his part are free, and not of debt. He owed us nothing; he was under no obligations even to love us, but he dud love us, and "so loved" the world that "he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." His grace abounded to the extent of sacrificing his only begotten Son. And this without any love on our part, without any lubor on our behalf. "If through the offence of one (Adam) many he dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many".-Rom. 5: 15. Now if by Adam's transgression many be dead, much more the grace of God buth adminded unto many. If the transgression of Adam was tearful in its consequences, the free gill far exceeds in its consequences. God's grace not only remnees the offense, but bestows blessings besides. Grace not only takes away the penalty of transgression but reaches far beyond, adding happiness and eternal lite to the believer.

The idea of grace may be illustrated by the following: You are standing upon the seashore, and as you look out over the mighty deep, you behold a vessel in distress. The crew are sea-drenched, cold, hungry and needy, and unless assisted, must soon perish. You are moved by pure love to aid them, hence you send your only son to their rescue. A boat is procured, your son enters it and exposes himself to all the dangers of a disturbed sea in order to save the perishing. He goes forth, willing even to lay down his life for the poor and miserable if necessary. He recoves them and they are happy. Should you now pay thear for coming to the shore? Do you think justicwould require you to reward them for climbing into the boat and thus saving their lives? Not at all! But they should rather serve you; be grateful, thankfol and friendly for the favor. Faror? Yes, it was pure favor on your part. Your love for them was great, and your grace mored you to send them assistance. So with our Father; he loved us; his grace moved him to send his Son to save us. To him we owe our allegiance, our love and obedience.

What did we do towards redeeming ourselves? Nothing: God did all the work, not because we had done anything for him, but because he loved us. Grace, all grace on his part. What did man do towards oldanning pardon or forgiveness? Nothing. What did mankind do towants securing the Holy Sparit? Nothing. It is a quit, by the grace of God. What did man de towards taking himself out at an evil state and putting himself into a better one? Noth mg. God opened the way, made the sacrifice. bestowed grace and now invites all men everywhere to accept it. More than that no one should ask. Why should any one ask God to do still more for him?

A lather possesses a beautiful home. The comforts of life, home empoyments, health and prosperity same upon him and his lovely family Peace, good will, harmony, love and obedience characterize that household. Want and distress are unknown to any member, and contendment seems to be a happy feature among them. But in the midst of all the enjoyments, the peace, identy and presperity.—the children become tired of home and yound in the world, engage in sin and wich divers until they have forfest dall claims to that beautiful home and the respect and administs and the devoted and kind parent. But the father sees the condition or his children. They have been long from home. Needy, sick, care worn, distressed, and for-aken the father finds them, his-compassion, and is moved to invite them to his pleasient home again. They have furfeited all claims to his benevolence and inheritance, but seeing their wretchedness he is moved withility to take them in. He embraces them, mystes them | ality, -. Jas. 3, 17 to partake of his bounties and be happy, all through grace. They did not curn the gifts which he now bestows upon them. Things earned are not gifts, but compassion. God's love and compassion meets us, invites us, not because we first loved or had compassion, but hecause of his abundant grace. Grace did abound, grace now abounds. But in considering the sovereign, unmerited and unsolicited grace of God as being the only source of pardon, let us not forget that we now have a part to perform. Obedience is required, and this we can do. Grace opened the way, but now we can walk in it. Let us duly appreciate the things already done for us by the grace of God, and then we may, we can appreciate the things which he will yet do for us. M. M. E.

INCONSISTENCY.

TMIS is emphatically an age of envy, selfish-1 ness and hypocrisy. None sneed who are not envied; few strive who are not selfish; and small is the number who act as they feel. So skilled are some people that it is impossible to tell whether what they say and do is sincere or not. They can say and do what they do not mean so nearly like they say and do things which they do mean that is impossible, from their manner of saying or doing, to tell whether they mean it or not. A worthy friend once remarked that it was impossible to decide who were friends and who were not. While business and social prospects are bright, persons gather around as with all the show of true fidelity that it is in the power of the word or act to indicate, but when reverses come and friends are needed, ah! they fly like shadows before a cloud. We are disappointed—they were not friends. Why then did they seek our society? To enhance selfish interests. Are these not by far more "wolves in sheep's clothing" than in their own? We can say, yes, from observation, and many can attest from expe-S. J. H. rience.

LITTLE CHILDREN.

O'R Master recognized little children, talked with them, blessed them; why should not we? Do we truly recognize the advantages for doing good among children? Have we learned how to mould their minds, and lead them to love that One who Idessed them? O whose heart is not opened to our dear youth!

On the second of November we met the children of the Hudson Church, and had a pleas ant talk with them. They have been attendmg school during the past Summer, and have learned considerable about the Bible. Dear litthermes, how happy they were! Their good conduct shows that they have been well taught, and that they are trying to live right and do good. There are some children's founds in the Hudson Church, and their triendship is bemy felt. It is gratifying to observe that in the congregations where the children are being raught and cared for, the order in public worship is good, and the young people are not rade and loasterons. "Palk and act as we will, the more gospel you put indo children's hearts and the more we get into our affectious, the better for all around us. I hope that in years to come, if the Lord shall space me to visit the Hudson charch again, Linay find many-yea all of those little lays and guls good men and women in the church. So more it be. M. W. B. AT W. TO MINISTERS tuMb, of our Brethren have isked us why we do not send the B. At W. to manisters for $100 which is fifty cents less than the regular price. It we thought that a numster who is worth from one to twenty thousand dollars descried his paper for a third less than his poor brother whors not worth as many lamified dollars, we would most readily do the favor, but as hedoes not, and we do not believe in class distinction, we cannot send the B. vi W. to a wealthy man just because he has been elected to the comstry, for two-thirds of what we charged is pror toother. We are not rich ourselves, and torus to more fitty cents, to all our wealthy ministers just because they are ministers does not look fair. We appeal to the Law and the Testimony which says that we shall do , nothing by partiality." It is further declared contribute annually to the Danish Mission that the wisdom from above is "nithout parti- On Lord's day, 0th inst, they brought then committan; and Christ is the great Shepherd.

We consider it our duty to distribute to the necessities of the poor whether ministers or not, whether white or black, bond or free; and for such we are trying to raise a fund to send them the paper free. We now have means to send about thirty copies, and hope that the liberal giver will assist us so that we can send to several hundred poor. We are willing to pay those who work for us, but so long as our voices can be raised for gospel equality we will refuse to ted for the influence of any class or race of men to enhance our own selfish interests. We will not pursue such a course knowingly, and stand here upon record as opposed to singling out officials as favorites. If the B. at W. be a benefit to the people, is it not the duty of every minister to recommend it and give it his influence, favor or no favor from its editors? Ou the other hand if it be no benefit, ought he to recommend it for fifty cents or any other sum? Further is a professor of religion who thus places an estimate upon his influence, a safe one to risk? Think of these things, beloved brethren.

SPECIAL TO SUBSCRIBERS.

WE cannot send the BRETHREN AT WORK to any one after his time is out, unless he renews. We deal with so many that necessity compels us to have but one rule for all. We shall not knowingly send our paper to parties without it has been paid for by themselves or others, and if any one should receive the paper without ordering it he need only look at the date opposite his name to see how long it has been paid for, as, for example which means that J. E. Jones' paper is paid to Januray 1st, 1881.

J. E. Jones, 1481,

To send the paper without pay puts us at too great a disadvantage. When accounts run a long time, many forget them, and when asked to settle, say they have paid, and in order to maintain peace in the family the clerk is ordered to square accounts. And then it is very unpleasaut to send "duns," and equally unpleasant to receive them. Now can we all agree to do our part, and avoid all unpleasantness in this matter? "Times are good," is the news from all parts of the land; can not each one at once remit $1.50 for one year, or $1.90 for eight months, or tifty cents for four months? Or if there is an agent hand the amount to him, and then there will be no "dans," no "forgetting" the printers' dues, and all will go on pleasantly. We want to talk with all of you next year, for as we become more experienced in the work, and learn to know more of you the better we can labor. In addition to what we have promised you in our Prospectus in No. 39, we will say that we design giving one column of "Church History" each week. This alone will be worth the price of the paper. We corduilly invite you to renew noir.

TO THE BROTHERHOOD AT LARGE.

DE it known that Dr. P. Fahrney, of Chica-D go, formerly a member of Pine Creek congregation, in Ogle Co., Ill., has been fully restored to practical fellowship in the Brethren church after a satisfactory confession. The trouble was life insurance. Reported by order the church.

COALS OF FIRE.

Will some one please explain Rom. 11: 20 which reads as follows: "Therefore if thine enemy hunger feed him; if he thirst give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. C. J. HEAD.

GREATER WORKS.

Will some one please explain John 14: 12? It reads as follows; "Verity, verily I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall be do; because I go onto my Father."

RILEY STUMP. . . TESUS came into the world to redeem mankind. He performed a great many miracles in establishing the gospel which was typiend of the great deliverance from sin which is far more destructive than any malady the flesh is heir to, as it destroys the happiness of the soul beyond this "vale of tears." When man transgressed the law of his Creator, he placed himself under the curse of a violated law of Jehovah, and the curse could only he removed by our being brought out from under the curse by the previous blood of the Son of God, and until this was accomplished there could he no remission of sins. Although Jesus could say "thy sins be forgiven thee," he looked forward to the time when he would complete the atonement. The blood of bulls and goats could not take away sins, but were typical of the blood of Jesus which cleanseth us from all

Jesus, when he uttered the above language was about to make that atonement, then he could commission his followers to go into all the world and rescue the children of men from the dreadful curse of sin which were the same works as Jesus did only greater as they had the attenument to build upon. Before this it was only a shadow, but now a reality.

ESUS addressed himself to the Jews. "Other sheep," means Gentiles and Samaritans "Hav down my ld; for the sheep" says Jesus, that is, he tasted "death for every man." Heb. 2: 9. Jews and Gentiles are permitted to enter the fold of Jesus, and as believers "are made migh by the Idood of Christ, having abolished in his lesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordina cest to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto Got in one hody by the cross, having slain the ennuty thereby." Eph. 2. We gather from these divinely-inspired words: First, the Gentiles who far off, are made high by the blood of Christ: Second, that Christ abidished the law of commandments: Third, that he did this to make one new man of Jew and Gentile. Fourth, to recomble dew and Gentile auto that in one hody, and that by the cross Figh, that in so doing he slew or destroyed the ennery that betore his death ex-bod between those nations,

If we knew what feet are weary, Climbing up the hills of path; By the world cast out as evil, Poor, repentant Magdalenes; We no more would dare to scorn them. With our Pharmale pride, Wrapping close our robes about us, Passing out the other side.

If we knew when friends around as Closely press to say "Good-live," Which among the firs that kiss us, First beneath the flowers should lie, While like rain upon their faces Fell our bitter, blinding tears, Tender words of love eternal. We would whisper in their ears

RIGHT BEGINNINGS.

WE all know how hard it is to go on pleas-Breakfast time gives the turn to the whole day, If father is stern and mother is cross; if the big brother gives a short answer, or the young lady sister frowns over her coffee, the little children catch the feeling and imbibe the infection. One discordant note sets the whole household choir jarring. One cross face repeals itself in many variations. One angry word challenges another.

Let us be very careful to begin right in the morning. Are we careful to pray? Do we open the gates of the day with a petition to the Mighty One, who guards us in life and in death? A little child once said: "I always pray to God at night, because in the dark I want him to take care of me, but in daylight I don't pray for I can take care of myself well enough then." In very much this spirit some 'grown people act. They are hurried and worried in the morning; they have overslept; business presses them with manifold vexitions and perplexities; many are the excuses they make to themselves for their omissions and abbreviations; but secret prayer and household worship are neglected and the day goes wrong.

Sunny faces at the breakfast-table and a cheerful "good-morning" from each to the other are blessed missionaries. They start everything right, and all housekeepers know the value of that. Others, who are not housekeepers, know it too, and benedictions follow the man or woman who goes down the street in the morning with a bright look and a word of cheer for every one he meets on the way .- Christian at Work,

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY.

BY PHEID A. PRANTY

WE all desire to be happy, but this alone will not make a come will not make us so. To wish for any thing is not to secure it. In order to acquire anything something must be done-some effort must be put forth. Flowers would not be beautiful nor emit any fragrance, did they not grow and expand. Birds would not be cheerful and happy did they not flutter in the breeze and tune their voices in the ecstacy of song .-Lite and cheerfulness are prerequisites to happiness, and God has wisely placed labor before enjoyment. This is a world of toil, and it is certainly a mark of wisdom in us to submit to it calmly and make the best of it. And since happiness here is alone attainable by labor and care, we should not expect it through any other source. All enjoyment consists in receiving and doing. Happiness is communicated to the soul by incress and egress, and all healthy souls will keep a proper balance between the two. We always feel happy by making others happy. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The joy we give to others will return with a brighter lustre to our own hearts. The fault with many of us seems to be that we feel more in- life beyond.

clined to receive than to give, and we complain of the cold-hearted world when the fault evidently lies at our own door. Can we expect others to treat us kindly when we fail to treat them so? Can we expect others to smile upon us while we frown? Have we a right to expect a continued glow of joy and sunshine while we lie in a passive, receptive attitude, and speak no pleasant word, and do no kind act to cause joy and sunshine to spring up in the hearts of others? The Golden Rule requires us to do unto others as we wish them to do unto us; hence it is the duty of every one that wishes to be happy, to begin the work. The great mistake made by many of us is, that that we take hold of the Golden Rule at the wrong end. We wish or expect others to do first, and then we commonly do to others as they have done to us. True and lasting Imppiness must spring from within the soul; it must find its root and nourishment there. That world of beauty in the mind must have continual sonshine. All entrance to the soul must be closed against everything from without that would mar the enjoyment, disturb the peace and obscure the light of the world within. The eye must not wander through the dark holes and alleys of society to gaze upon the faults and blemishes of mankind. The ear must not beed the taonts, jeers and scoffs of the victors, nor listen to the flatterer and insidious devices of those who would discourage or lead astray. When others would beap abuse upon us we should not carry it. When others scold and frown, fret and complain, we should listen to the music of Nature, view the world of beauty within and around us, and look on the sunny side and the hetter time coming.

All is not sunshine in this fleeting world of ours. There are seasons of gloom and disappointment; sad seasons when the heart is sick, and hopes are crushed and the bow of promise scarcely visible to the spiritual eye. How often we are disappointed in the common affairs of life, in the ordinary pursuits of business, in our long-cherished hopes, and the professions of friendship, by those who revived our warmest sympathies and kindness and have now become our enemies. These sorrows and disappointments are more or less experienced by all, and the more sensitive our natures, and the higher our susceptibilities, the greater will be the gloom and sadness they occusion. This sensitive, irritable part of our nature, this source of so much annoyance and unhappiness to us, is one of the characteristic marks of depraved nature. It is within us, and if not bern with us, or in us, is at least bred in us. Now this thing is one of the greatest enemies to our happiness and peace of mind, and it is our business and duty to get rid of it. The fact is we should have left it in our childhood days with all else that is childish. "When I was a child I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man I put away childrsh things." According to this we are not men and woman until we "put away" or get rid of, things which belong to childhood and not to manhood and womanhood. Childhood Pools. is the period of discipline to prepare us for man and womanhood. How many are the conflicts with bad temper, and disappointments in their early life before a firmness of mind, a stability of character and lirm principles are formed. or before the great theatre of life is properly realized. How many, alas, carry the tolhes of childhood into the years of maturity to perplex them through life. Notwithstanding Christiamity affords a type of true happiness, a peace of conscience, a cheerful heart and a glorious hope of luture bliss, yet a Christian's life is not without its conflicts, and a Christian's feelings and temper have much to endure. There are and reverses, and serious shocks to the cause of truth often witnessed and experienced which carries much with them that is depressing, and the serious and truly humble Christian is grieved and sad at heart, but the beacon-light of happaness is before ns,

Do all in your power to make others happy. "As much as both in you, live peeceably with all men." The union and presperity of Zion is: the joy, the life of the Christian. No one can enjoy real Christianity, who does not labor for the good of others,—the peace and union of the Church, and the cultivation of his own mind and heart. The great apostle Paul was happy even when in chains and imprisonment; and in contempdating his past life with its labors, and in view of the death which awaited him he was still tranquil and happy because he had fought a good fight and there was a crown of life land up for him and all who truly loved the Lord.

Thus shall our days be cheerful and happy, If we let the san of real religion shine into our hearts, our labors and good needs for the benefit of our fellow-man will increase our enjoyment here, and be as so many gems in our crown of

NUMBER XXXI.

From Jerusalem to Nablus.

This brought us to the head waters of Wady Bedan, a tributary of the wady on which Enon is located, called wady Farra. We struck wa dy Bedan at a point where four mills, propelled by its water, are situated in sight of one another We followed its course to its junction with wady Farra, and in doing so passed twelve mills the last situated in the fork of the two streams and propelled by water drawn from wady. Farra. These are all overshot mills, and are propelled by water drawn into races. The rapid descent of the principal streams makes it practicable to draw off these side channels at short intervals, and to build the mills close together In some instances the mill-race is so high above the principal stream that it runs through and propels two mills in making its way down. From the junction of the two streams we con tinued down wady Farra in search of a place answering to Enon. The "much water" we tound all the way, and although the season was exceptionally dry, pools well suited, for haptiz ing were abundant. We rode into a number of these to try their depth. But we wanted to find, in addition to the much water, an open space on the bank of the stream suitable for the assembling of the great multitudes who flocked to John's places of baptizing; and for several miles we found no such place. We pursued our pathless way along the slopes of a narrow ravine, with high and precipitous hills on either side. We had to ford the stream frequently, and its hanks were so thickly crowded with a jungle of oleanders in full bloom, that we could not always cross where we would.-Never, in a single day, have I seen so many oleanders. For as many as five miles their line of mingled jonk and green was as continous as the current stream which nourished them. Finally, after a fatiguing ride, during which both our dragoman and our escort became discouraged and fell behind, there suddenly opened before us a beautiful valley among the mountains, about one mile wide and three miles long. Bedouin tents were pitched in groups here and there; herds of camels, to the number of three or four hundred, were grazing, or drinking, or moving about; and swarms of brown-skinned boys, both large and small, were bathing at different places in the stream. Here, then, was the open space required, and a more smtable place for the gathering of a multitude could lot be found on the banks of any mountain stream in Palestine.

It is identified as Enon by the only man who has ever made a thorough and scientific exploration of the country, and now it is accepted as such without dispute from any quarter. We cut an oleander cone apiece from the banks of the stream, and we took a bath in one of its

Our excursion to Enon occupied an entire day. The next morning we ascended to the top of Mt. Gerizmi, to see the site of the ancient Samaritan temple, the rains of a citadel and church built by the crusaders, and the rock on which Jotham, stood when he recited to the Shechemites his celebrated fable of the trees. That a man could stand near enough to an assembly of his enemies, who had slain all of his brothers and were at the time engaged in crowning as king the instigator of the slaughter, to make to them an audible speech, and yet be out of reach of their weapons, and safe from pursuit, is most singular. Yet the locality shows that it was altogether practicable. A projecting rock on the face of Mt. Gerizini overlooks the city of Shechem. From its top a man's video can be distinctly heard in the plain below; it is too high to be reached by arrows shot from the plain, and pursuers would be compelled to climb the mountain or pass a long distance around it, while the flight of the speaker was unobstructed. See the narrative in Judges 18:

After returning from the mountain's topowe left Nablus, going north-westward, and came in two hours to the site of Samaria, the ancient capital of the ten tribes. The well posted stirilent of sacred history, will, remember that this city was never taken except by a long-continued siege, reducing its inhabitants to the point of starvation.

Its peculiar situation made it impregnable when defended by a competent force. It stood i on the top of an isolated bid 400 feet high, with a valley from a half mile to two miles in width all around it, and high hills surrounding this valley everywhere except at the west, where there is a gap opening out toward the sea. It good resulting from this traffic; or present a must have been through this gap that the Syrian army thought they heard the Egyptians. coming, when they precipitately flid by might and caused a fulfillment of Elisha's prediction, See H. Kings vi. 21-vii. 20. In the reign of Herod the Great, the city had fallen into decay, and he undertook to rebuild it. Among other magnificant structures which he erected, was a columnade of granite columns about 20 feet high all around the brow of the hill, and about 50 feet from its summit. They stood on a terrace leveled for the purpose of a chariot drive, and the circuit around which they extended is supposed to have been about 1000 yards, F_{1fty} or sixty of these columns are still standing, and in their loneliness they speak mournfully of the departed glory of him who erected them. The entire hill is now terraced and cultivated in grain, except the small space on the northern slope occupied by a little village of low huts, and by an old church of the crusading period in which it is foolishly claimed that John the Baptist was buried. Herod named the city Sebaste, the Greek for Aupastus, in honor of Augustus Caesar, and the village still wears this name in the Arab form of Sebustiyeh. We took our lunch on the top of the hill under the shade of an olive tree, and 1 meditated much on the atter desolation of a city so conspicuous in sacred history. Samaria and Mt. Zion were the two best fortified hills in Israel, and their inhabitants were wont to rest under a sense of great security when the prophets predicted the fate awaiting them; hence the well known words of Amos, "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion, and trust in the bill of Samaria, J. W. McGarvey. (Amos vi: 1.)

Topics of the Day.

TEMPERANCE VIEWED FROM A FINANCIAL STAND-POINT

DEW persons are aware of the money annually spent for intoxicating liquors. Even those who spend this money are largely ignorunt of what it amounts to in the course of a few months. It is only when a strict account of spenditures is kept that there is any conception of the enormity of the sum or the rapidity with which it accumulates. We will give some facts with regard to the money that is spent for various liquors in our day.

It is estimated that there are annually consumed in our country 60,000,000 gallons of whiskey, at a cost of $360,000,000. There are consumed 2,5000,000 gallons imported spirits, at $25,000,000; 10,500,000 gallous imported wines, valued at $65,000,000; 7,560,000 barrels of beer valued at $150, 000,000; native wines. brandies, cordials valued at $59,000,000. Here are $650,000,000, directly spent for different kinds of drink; spent to gratify passion and to destroy men's sonls.

But the liquor expense does not stop here.-Look for a moment at the expense that is indirectly incurred. There are 50,000 paupers to be supported at an annual expense of $25,000,000; 50,000 tramps, $5,000,000; 250,000, criminals $25,990,000;5,990 insanc, $50,000,000;60,000,00drunkards to be provided for at $60,000,000 capital invested in breweries, distilleries, etc. $500,-000,000; labor, enterprise, etc. lost by drink $50,000,000; indirect losses and taxation, $35, 000,000; making a grand total of $1,900,000,-000). Comparing other statistics it may be possible that even this estimate is too low. This is the bill that the American people are called apper to step forward and settle every year. I cooly ask the question, can we afford it? Here are over a million dollars thrown away. Worse than if cast into the Atlantic ocean.

The population of the globe is estimated at 1,396,752,000; of this number 711,383,583, are under non-christian government. Taking then, the above estimate, there is aurmally spent in our country, enough money to place a Bible in the hands of every heathen at a cost of over $2 yer copy. Again, there are in the South 1.381, 434 colored children—tire sons and dinghters of freedman-within the school age who altend no school, and are without instruction. Should the money we spend for liquor each year for figure be appropriated to their education, there would be enough to keep every one of these children in school the entire year at a cost of over $1,200 for each pupil. Oh how blind is man to that which is good! Oh, that he would storcand consider!

But what do we get in return for this vasl expenditure? We get each year 500 nurders. 500 suicides, 250,000 criminals, 250,000 paupers, 60,000 deaths occasioned by the sin of drunkenness, 600,000 moderate drinkers, who will be sots in ten years hence. Can any one, by searching our country throughout, find any angle reason why it should any longer be conand ? I ask again, can we afford it? Can we thus afford to waste our resources, while a heavy national debt is hanging over us? while thousands of beggars and orphans are knocking at our doors for bread? while the piteous wail of spfortunate wives and broken-hearted mothers filling the air and rending the heavens?

Moderate drinker, have you ever estimated that that ten cent dram you are in the habit of taking every day, will amount to in the course of a year? Make a little calculation and get. It will amount to $36.50, a sum that will buy you a neater suit than the one you at present have on. But what will it amount to in ten years? Only $365. Well, do you not know of a lot or small piece of ground that can be bought for that sum, or at least give you a start in paying it? Do you own any property? po you not then see how you are robbing yourelf and your family? But probably you also use tobacco. Suppose you throw in that bill, in order to make good measure. Say on an avererage your tobacco costs thirty cents a week; in a year that will amount to $15.50, which sum will buy your little boy a handsome suit; in ten years it will amount to $156; plus $365, makes $521. In these stringent times this sum will ge for to virl buying a confortable home. In some parts of the centry is will buy a good home with many improvements. These are things that every one who loves the intoxicating cup should sobjety consider.

Of all avils, we know of none that ace distray ing so many families. Of all traffics, we know of none that are making so many panpers. Amilit the many brakeuptoins that are occurring every year, we know of noue that are equal to those that intemperance is bringing to thousands to the lind. How many homes have been made desolute, how many hearts have sighed, how many tears have been shed, how many wretched orphans have trodden the cold pavements with naked feet; how many weeping widows have died of atter deprivation, because of the rabberies made by the demon intemper

We warn all, then, against this dreadth evil. Would you always be poor, and have your cluldren grow up in ignorance and squalid poverty, and after you become beggars, then coutime to drink. Would you live in shame, and de, to have your name and that of your children held in everlasting opprobium, then drink on. Would you sink your own soul and the souls of your children into eternal perdition. and bewait a misspent life, throughout eternity, hannted by the ghosts of unforgotten crimes? If so, just drink, and all these woes will be sure to fallow. - Golden Censor.

TATE are glad to report to you another visit to this arm of the church by our beloved brother Jesse Calvert. He arrived here on Saturday evening, Oct. 25th, and preached some powerful sermons to us. Saints were made to rejone and sinners turn to God. Four precious souls made the good confession. On Wednesday evening we gathered around the tables to partake of the emblems of Christ's broken body and shed blood. Our meetings were very en-MARY MYERS. juyable.

lowa Brethren, Please Notice,

I DESIRE all the olders of the different 1 churches, as well as the superintendents of the different Sunday-schools, to inform me immediately whether they would layer a Sunday-school Convention, to be held in the South Waterloo Church some time during the Winter, either before or after the holidays. All in layer of such a move will please report to me at once, and state your preferable time, so that all due arrangements can be made.

October 4, convened with brethren and sisters at Lockard's school house for council meeting preparatory to Lovefeast. We preached to the people here as God gave ability. One desired to learn more of our doctrine but other duties forbade a longer stay. Spent some time viewing Labette county, and on the 9th metagain with the sick neighbor for religious services. On Saturday was taken to Hockherry's Creek, four miles north of Indian Territory and seven miles west of Chetopa where the brethren had a large shed erected for communion purposes. Services began at 5 p. m. Ministers present, brethren Edgecomb. Martin Neher and the writer. All seemed to enjoy a happy season. Quite a large crowd assembled to witness the Brethren's first Lovefeast in Labette county. Next morning delivered our farewell address. Left for home on the following Tuesday morning.

From Ashland, Ohio,

Dear Brythren:—

N perusing your columns I see nothing from Ashland, and thinking you might be pleased to learn of us, we thought to notice of this place.

We left our home Sept. 8th, with sorrowing, yet rejoicing hearts; sorrowing to part from the loved ones and all the endearments of home. and rejoicing in the opportunity of acquiring knowledge at Ashland College. We arrived here safely and found many warm hearts to welcome us, and though we have been here but a short time, we feel very much at home. We are well pleased with the school and hope that it may be the means of accomplishing a vast amount of good in the Brotherhood. We feel like commending the brethren at Ashland for the warm welcome extended to us.

Our meetings here are always well attended, and great interest manifested. Services are regularly held each Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the College chapel. Prayer-meeting is held each Sunday night at the chapel and these meetings, to us, are very interesting. The Sunday-school, though lately organized, is growing rapidly, both in number and in interest.

Brother Quinter was with us a few weeks once and we were glad to meet him again, as well as hear him preach. Brother John Stodeb acer has been with us also, and told us of the greatness, the goodness and the love of God. Bro. Studabaker, though he is growing old, is still the dear, warm-hearted brother of our younger days.

Administratively profess, well located city and entirely free from malaria diseases. The College is beautifully situated, and as a school is all that we could ask, considering its youth, There are now quite a number in attendance and all seem to be fully satisfied and pleased

Notice to Duty.

(M) the brethren of Southern Kansas, and all others interested in missionary labor: We are all aware of the fact thid it was decided to select two tried brethren to travel and preach in Southern Kansas. Two such have been appointed and are ready to do their duty just as soon as sufficient money is paid into the treasury. There ought to be two hundred dollars to begin with. I do not think much over onefourth of this amount has been raised. The quota is not heavy when divided among seventeen organized churches. Some of the churches have responded liberally, and if there are any not willing to contribute, they wight to make it known. I hope there are none such in Kansas. I know Cedar Creek church will do its duty, for we know how it is here in our own district; we can't have meeting at one fenth of the places that there are calls, and it is the same all through Kansas. There is a great demand for preaching by the Brethren, and they can win many souls to Christ il all dotheir duty. We have taith in the missionary cause, and now let our taith be accompensed by works EPHEATM STUDEBAKER.

Next visited Bryan, Williams county Ohio, to enjoy the feast in Lick Creek congregation, where John and Jacob Bowman are the elders. Preaching commenced on Saturday at 10 o'clock. After forenoon meeting a choice was held for two deacons, and the lot fell so that the church ascepted four; the elders seeing that they were needed. Jacob Brown, Jr., Jacob Garber, Jacob Rocky and John Mark, were installed to perform the duties of deacons. Simon Long was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. The ordinations were attended to on Sunday before the forenoon services .-Had three meetings at Bunker Hill Church, belonging to the Reformed Church of said place. Love-teast on Tuesday, eighteen miles north in the Silver Creek Church. Our company all along were Jacob Gump, Jerry Gump and wife, Isaiah Horger and Leonard Hyer. Had a good meeting; one baptized on Tuesday, also one on Wednesday. On Thursday the company returned to Corrunna, where, the same evening, in the Cedar Creek Church, the ordinances of the Lord's house were observed, and the brethren managed things in such a good and quiet manner that we all could learn; were through with all the services a few minutes after 8 o'clock, and over one hundred members communed. At all these places the single mode (so called) was observed. Reached home safely Nov. 3rd, and found our family well.

From Southern Mo.

Dear Brethren:—

AOMPANION and I left home on the 7th of October on a mission of love. Attended a conneil in the Mineral Creek Church, Johnson Co. The difficulties were adjusted, and things apparently set in order again. Next went to Bates county to a council meeting with the members of the Mound Church. Business was not found in proper shape, so we did not do anything but make arrangements for the annual visit, and a church meeting for the 13th.

We once had our home in this church, and we greatly enjoyed ourselves with our dear members and old neighbors, and regretted that we could not stay longer with them. This church has been hadly neglected, and but very little preaching done for them since we moved from there. But the members have been steadtast and brother John Knisley is a zealous deacon. He has done much to hold the church together there. They were re-organized last Spring; had two more chosen to the office of deacon, and two to the unnistry; and those young brethren need to be encouraged. There are twenty-two members and prospects for more. Next attended the District Meeting which was held with the Brush Creek Church,] in St. Clair Co. There was not much business. before the meeting but what there was passed in conneil and continued until the 16th,-then off pleasantly. We formed many new and adjourned until the 20th. In the afternoon pleasant acquaintances. Among the number was brother Abram Crumpacker of Virginia, and brother M. M. Eshelman of Lanark, 111. On the 1st and 2nd of November we attended a communion meeting with the members in the Walnut Creek Church, Johnson Co. It was one of the linest meetings that we ever attended-a meeting long to be remembered. The most profound attention that we ever witnessed was manifested. Brother A. Hutchison, the Elder of that church, said to us that time passed as he never had it to pass before. Our ministerral force was rather small. It consisted of brethren Hutchison, Dr. A. Reese, F. Culp and myself. There was one applicant for baptism, and one desired to be re-instated. This church is without a resident minister. They have a fine country, a good meeting-house, and unustering brethren who contemplate going West abuild do well to visit this church.

STABLED AND

A SERIES OF MEETINGS. AST evening, Oct. 26th, we came nine indes In to attend services this morning at the long Memlows meeting-house, of the Beaver Creek congregation, Waryland. Upon arriving. Norther 22nd of October, wife and I left home; we learned that this morning there would be for our former home in the English Pros. 6:14 the first of a series of incetings. Brother place for the least. Sunday morning brother rie Church, Lagrange Co., Ind. Enjoyed then Silas Hoever, of Somerset county, Pa., who had M. M. E. preached to the children. At 11 least of love on the 23rd. Had a good meeting trees called for the creasion, announced his o'clock regular services began. Three were and good order for such a crowded house. Here, Leet in Luke 1:79. He spoke of Christ's first the Gospel and establish peace between them and God.

We have since learned that several were baptized and thus added to the church during the meetings.

HOLD PAST GRACE.

Attended meeting in town in the evening where hrother Oller spoke on Heb. 12: 28. Yes, "Let us have grace." The marginal reading is more clear-let us hold fast grace. The apostle gives a solid reason why we should hold fast grace. It is that "we may serve God," how? 1. 'acceptably," 2nd. with "reverence," 3rd. with 'Godly fear," So it seems we may serve God not acceptably, not with reverence, and not with Godly fear. Let us be honest, earnest and faithful in all things, and especially labor for oneness among us, for it is painfully evident we ought to think and act more alike. Let us labor and pray patiently for such a glorious end. Why are our practices of our religion so often different? Why do we notice brethren and sisters contending with each other-some for more strictness, and some for more liberty? Our only liberty should be in Christ, and surely he would have us, members of his body all of one mind." Why contend for liberty to follow the world? May our freedom he in Jesus, to do his will and love the Church.

Dear Brethrens-

COME of my friends have complained because I have been so quiet, especially because nothing appeared in print from my pen. only apology is, there were reasons for it.

On the 27th of September I attended the Love-feast in the Bear Creek congregation, Ill Had an enjoyable meeting. There are some tice workers in Bear Creek. On the 30th, attended the feast in Hurricane Creek congregation, Bond county. Had an excellent meeting; good order and much love seemed to be manifested. On the 4th of October attended a Lovefeast in the Salem congregation. Marion county, III. Had a crowded house and good attention.

My wile accompanied me to all of the above meetings. Her health had improved some but as we had to travel in private conveyance it worried her and she seemed to fail some. On the Sth of October I bade adieu to my family and boarded the train for lows, to meet the Annual Meeting committee. Met in council with the Middle Creek congregation in Mahaska county on the 10th. The whole committee were present; heard the grievances and considered them in the fear of the Lord, and made our report to the members which was unanimously accepted. On the 12th was taken to South English to fill an appointment. On the evening of the 13th, brother Enoch Eby addressed a large and attentive congregation in the same place. On the 14th, met the church went to Deep River congregation, m. Powesheik county. On the 17th met the church in council, and on Saturday night between eleven and twelve o'clock we made our report, which was manimously accepted. On Sunday morning met at the same place for preaching. Had a very interesting meeting. Was taken to South English in the afternoon, 20th, met again in conneil and on the 21st, made our report. After some explanations, this report was also unanimously accepted by the members. May God bless the untiring real of our dear brethren and sisters, and where wounds were made by the enemy sowing discord among them may the halm of love heal all, and may a double guard he set so the enemy may be kept at bay. On tire 22ml, was taken to Middle Creck, had a meeting at night and next day bade a final adien to the loved ones in lowa. In the afternoon left for Hudson III., to attend our District Meeting for Southern Illinois. I here male a number of acquaint nices, whom I shill remember with pleasure for their great kindness. The meeting passed off pleasantly. Bro. Lishelman soning present, I hope he will give a report of the meeting. I arrived home safely on the 30th, after an absence of twenty-two days. Found my wite in improved health. Thank God for his goodness. Many thanks to the dear brothten and sisters for their kindness to me while among them. May God's chonest blessings rest upon all, and may we all so live, that when lite's sorrows are ver we may meet in our Pather's house of many mansions. JOHN WISE,

From Somerset, Pa.—Since my last report, held a series of meetings in D. F. Stonffer's congregation, about three miles from Henry Gerstarm's, Maryland. There are many mem bers in that arm of the church but our meetings proved a success. Closed with twenty-two applicants. I hope they will adorn their profession with a godly walk and conduct. Others have promised to come before long. I return my thanks to the members in general for their Shas Hoover. kindness.

From Antioch, Ind.—On the first Sunday in this month there were services in the forenoon at Antioch, and in the afternoon at Dora. At the close of the services five came forward and desired to unite with the church. The multitude then repaired to the river side where prayer was wont to be made, where two sisters and three brothers were received into the fold, and where the church was made to rejoice.

WHITE ROBES.

A choice collection of Songs, Quartets and Charases for Sunday-schools and Devotional Meetings. By A. J. Armey and M. J. Munger. Published by Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston, Mass. Price, 35 etc.

This is a neat, well-bound book with a pretty cover, and a suggestive name that prepares us for something extra sweet inside; in which are expectations we shall not be disappointed — There are 125 songs and hymns of the kind that may be termed "winnowed," since they have been sharply criticised and "reviewed" previous to publication. This, by the way, is the best method of criticising, and secures a select collection, from which all second-rate matter is removed. The following verse, taken nt random, will give a hint of the character of the poetry:

"I have rend of a Savior's love, And a wonderful love it must be, But did he come down from above, Out of love and compassion for me?"

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 2d. Baptist churches possess the Bible characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.

D. B. RAY, Affirms.
J. W. Stein, Denies.

RAY'S 3D AFFIRMATIVE. E did not "attack the Brethreu," unless stating the differences between us in such an attack. Mr. Stein did accuse the Baptist churches with granting "legal license" to gratify the "lusts" "of the flesh" Gal. 5:20, 21. He must prove or withdraw these foul charges, or stand as "the accuser of our brethren." Mr. S. states his fifth negative accusation thus: "Baptist churches are not churches of Christ. because they hold that we may do evil, fight. and kill, and take oaths, that good may come"! What Baptist church ever uttered such a sentiment? He knows that this charge is utterly untrue. Baptists follow the example of Christ and the Apostles in making no laws to exclude members for being subject to "the powers that he," by aiding in the punishment of "evil doers." Under the law as well as the gospel the com mand reads: "Thou shall not kill;" nevertheless the best men on earth were commanded, as citizens, to punish evil doers with carnal weapons. And in the present dispensation the political "powers that be are ordained of God."

The political ruler "is the minister of God," who hears the "sword," as a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." Rom. 13: 1-4. Christians are commanded to submit to these kings and governors, "as unto them that are sent by Him for the punishment of evil doets, and for the praise of them that do well." I Peter 2: 13, 14. As God has ordained the civil governments to hear the sword against transgressors, and Christians are required to act as obtdient citizens in such governments, there fore, it is right and proper for christians to obey the ordinance of God by the support of the prohtical powers in the punishment of transgressors. Cornelius, captain over the "Italian band," was a "devout man, and one that feared God with all his house." In answer to the prayers of this soldier an angel of God came down and instructed him to send for Peter. Acts 10: 1-5. Under the sermon of this apostle this "just man" with his "devout soldier" servaut, with others, received the haptism of the Holy Spirit and spake with tongues. Neither the angel nor Peter demanded his expulsion from the army.

What a pity that there were no Dankards in those times to instruct Peter concerning "the diabolical spirit of war," and the extreme wick edness of being a soldier. As John the Baptist was preaching the gospel of the kingdom and baptizing, "The soldiers likewise demanded of him saying, and What shall we do? And he said unto them. Do violence to no man, neither occuse any falsely; and be content with your wages." Luke 3:14. Why did John, who was filled with the Holy Spirit, instruct soldiers to continue in the service, and receive wages for the same? The instruction to do violence to no man evidently refers to those individual acts. of violence to which soldiers are liable. As christians and church members we are to "do violence to no man" and "resist not evil;" but as citizens we may aid in the punishment of evil doers. Shall all civil government be abandoned? and the whole country given to be plundered by thieves and robbers? such would not be according to godliness. Our accuser, without proof, charges the Baptists with "the crime of perjury"! Was he guilty of that crime while a Baptist? What is his word now worth?

Our accusing friend has admitted that only"regenerated" persons "are required to enter Christ's church by solemn oath of allegiance."
Therefore, he contends that gospel ministers are to administer a solemn oath to "regenerated" persons. Under the law a person was required, as an individual, to "perform unto the Lord thine oaths." But now, in this sense, one must "swear not at all." Nevertheless, under the gospel, in baptism, one is "required to enter Christ's church by solemn oath of allegiance."
Also, under civil authority in obedience to the political ordinance of God, we may end strife by an "oath for confirmation."

Instead of attempting to answer our Bible arguments proving the Baptist doctrine, that spiritual life must precede baptism and church organization, Mr. S. occupies his space with unsustained accusations against Baptists. We answer his questions as follows:—(1) Yes, the repentance, Matt. 3: 11, was "into life" and the "baptism unto repentance," was baptism to declare the repentance which had already borne fruit.

2. It is right to bury by baptism those who tare dead to sin;" "For he that is dead is treed from \sin ." Rom. 6: 1-7. Of such it is said. 'Ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God." Col. 3: 3. One most be dead to sin and alive to God before the burial in haptism - 3 Yes, Baptists certainly demand that the cambdate for baptism have the experience of having 'passed from death unto life." We know this because "we love the brethren." - 1 John 3: 14. 4. As Christ was sinless he did not die to sin prior to his burial in baptism; therefore, he was spiritually alive when baptized. 5. Baptists believe that "for remission," (Matt. 28: 28 means to procure the remission of sins. (i) We are of the opinion that the redeemed that have not become members of "the Bride, the Lamb's wife, will, in glory, be happy guests at the marringe of the Lamb Mr. Stem answers cour important question thus:

But he wants to know a new should toppier children of God or children at the decide. Xoo We should haptise mither—children a God need no baptism and "children of the decil" are a relit for baptism. When people have died to Sotan and are hopeful at God, then they are to be "born of water" view horought tootherate actival childhood and harship by baptism.

It will be observed that our friend quotes no passage of scripture to prove that accountable persons are neither the children of God nor the children of the devil. He has divulged this silly stuff to escape the terrible ductrine of his church, that the children of Satan are to become the children of God, in the act of baptism. He should have known that the terms begatten and born are translations from the same original word. There can posssibly be no intermedinte space or timo between spiritual death, and spiritual life. "You hath he quickened who were dead in trespass-s and in sins." Eph. 2; 1, Mr. Stein will please miswer the following: 1. Can one be "negotten of God" and "regenerated" and still be without spiritual life? Do answer! 2. How long may one romain in a "begotten" and "regenerated" state without being born of God? Don't forget to answer, 3. If one of these "begotten" "regenerated" persons who are "neither the children of God nor children of the devil," should die in this condition, will they go to beaven or hell? or will be go to purgatory, if there be such a place? 4. Is the water of baptism the real mother of all the specitual children of God? Yes or no. 5. How many plans of salvation are there? Was the timef on the cross (Luke 23:42) saved or lost? If you forget to answer these questions some of our readers will think that you are unable to answer.

Mr. S. attempts to pervert our argument from 1 John 4:7 partly by suppression and partly by a false rendering. John says, "Every one that leveth is been of God and knoweth God," but Mr. S. changes it to read "Every one that loveth is begetten of God," and leaves out "and knoweth God." Does any one in his senses conceive, for a moment, that one without spiritual life or the new birth, "knoweth God," spiritually? How grossly absurd and blind is the theory of our friend! I. Every one must love God prior to baptism and church membership. 2. But one that loves God is "born of God, and knoweth God." 3. Therefore, every one must be born of God and know God prior to baptism and church membership.

We base our 5th argument, for spiritual regeneration and life prior to baptism and church membership, upon the fact that Jesus made disciples before he baptized them.

"When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John. (Though Jesus himself haptized not, but his disciples.) Inc. 4: 1-2.

"Disciples," made such by Jesus Christ, are pentance, Matt. 3: 11, was "into life" and the "baptism unto repentance," was baptism to declare the repentance which had already borne fruit.

2. It is right to bury by baptism those who "are dead to sin;" "For he that is dead is treed from sin." Rom. 6: 1-7. Of such it is said, "Ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God." Col. 3: 3. One must be dead to sin and alive to God before the burial in baptism. 2.

"Disciples," made such by Jesus Christ, are the children of God. "Jesus made his disciples before bapt sm and church membership. 3rd, Therefore, Jesus Christ received the children of God to baptism and church membership. But our friend would, baptize those who are not the children of God to give them spiritual life! This makes a Savior of the administrator!!

We base our 6th argument for this first tondamental characteristic upon the fact that men must be "dead to sin" prior to the burial in bentism and reception to church membership. Read Rom 3: 1-7. In the sense of this scripture, "he that is dead is freed from sin". 1st, every one must be "dead to sin" prior to maptism and church membership. 2nd, But, in this sense, every one "that is dead is freed from sm. 3rd, Therefore, every one must be "freed from sin" prior to baptism and church membership. We defy the power of men or demons to overthrow this argument. But Mr. Stein, with autichrist, would pretend to Implize one, and a child of God and without sparitual libe to hem from sm! What blindness!

Our ith Arg for this characteristic is the component for fact that the new high home was never near the will at man, but is of God, or the vect product of the Holy Spirit We mare as our proofs:

(a) "He came to his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."—John 1: II-13.

Any one not blind, can see that this power to become sons, granted to those "which were born" already, does not mean power to be horn, or become children, but the "privileze" of becoming sons in the sense of receiving the inheritance. The new birth is not "of the will of man but of God." Buptism cannot be performed without consulting "the will of man," to act as the administrator. Therefore, haptism is not essential to the new birth. According to our friend, no one can be born of God without securing the will of some Tunker to perform the act of the new birth!!!

(b) "But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of our Lord Jesus, and by the Spirif of our God." 1 Cor. 6:11.

We "are washed" from sin "by the Spirit of God," in the new birth; but our friend thinks that the literal water secures the spiritual washing! "That which is born of the Spirit, is spirit;" but Mr. S. would have the body—the flesh—born again.

The peculiar Baptist doctrine, that spiritual regeneration—the new birth—and spiritual life must precede baptism and church membership, has been established, as a Bible characteristic, by overwhelming testimony.

MOSES' HORNS.

BY HOWARD MILLER.

"An old Bible is now in a bookstore in Albany that was picked up by a Union soldier in the streets of Fredericksburg on December 14, 1862. The soldier gave it to his chaplam, who forwarded it to Albany, and there it has been ever sing. It is a Latin Bible that was printed in the year 1500. The first person of the Godhead is represented in it in the semblinee of an old man with the Papal crown on his bead. The flood is pletured—Noah and Lis wife with their heads out of the window looking at the flight of four birds. Manna is represented about the size of a bread cracker. Moses is invariably pictured as having horns."

THE above extract the writer noticed in the Philadelphia Times of the 15th instant. The last sentence I wish to call attention to. In an old Bible in my possession the same occurs. In Habakuk the expression, "He had herns coming out of his head" is found.

The original Hebrew in which the Old Textament was written has peculiarities perfectly characteristic of the language, and one is that the word for a ray of light preceding from a common point, or horn shaped, and the word for a horn are one and the same. Thus Moses, when he came down from the Mount, had light coming out from his head, and the old transferors rendered it horns and all the old artists picture Moses with horns. In every place I remember, except in Habakuk, as quoted, the word has been changed. So much for critical scholarship.

The significance of a human hie is determined by its angle of elevation. To sweep the stars the telescope must be directed upwards. To make the most of life a man must have a high purpose. That he will attain a higher point than he aims at, is contrary to the everyday experience of men. We are constantly falling below what we intended; it would be quite unusal to rise above it.

In the Christian course this is more necessary as the gospei places the standard so high. It is not natural to man to use to the Gospel segmement. He must be lifted there by grave, and in order to that at concent its aim must result of a nature. It soon is to marrisighted to old diese high a view.

THE PAST.

WOULD not dig my past Upon its grave of weakness and regret, Up from its hopes, which glimmers. But to set Its dreams that could not last.

Yet I can look before And profit by the lesson sadly learned, As children playing with the fire are burned, And tempt its glow no more.

I would not if I could. Live o'er again this dark uncertain life, This slipping backard in the daily strife, Of reaching after good.

I would not open out The half healed wounds of other years long fied Twere better they were numbered with the dead. Better than forever doubt.

Yet I can truly say. Let the dead past, bury the dead. We go So swiftly around to life's sunset glow, And then their is no day.

Life is too short to waste In vain repinings, or in weak regrets, The strongest heart endures and never frets, O'er joys it may not taste.

And so I would not lift Up from the grave the slindow of the past, The clouds that all my sky overcast Into the night may drift.

For their's enough to fill Each hour and moment of the days to come Then wherefore woo the shadows of the past, Which we can never undo. Selected by L. T. C.

CONCLUSION.

BY PROF. W. E. LOCKARD

WE hear it said of a man, who deals only with the hard, plain facts of existence, that he is a utilitarian; that hisaims are low and grovelling; and people of supposed culture and refinement look down with mingled pity and contempt upon those whose efforts are directed to the bettering of the physical condition of man. They contemn the physical and would dwell above the dull and heavy dirt, amid the dim and distant realms where fancy flits from fetters free; where spirits, pure and radiu t hover on the confines of another world, delving deep in mystic lore and drag ging from the abysses of the brain, con jectures vast and thoughts profound!! For them the things of earth contain no charms. Tis true they cut a little at times, but rather deplore the necessity that compels them thus to pay tribute to their grosser nature. "Tist rue, they love in a certain sense, but not in the warm gushing manner of ordinary mortals. Their love is purely platonic. There is nothing sensual about it. It is rather a mingling of joire spirits, than of warm sensuous beings. All the conditions of life are but clogs to the at tainment of their transcendental theories. They would improve the spiritual condition of humanity while ignoring the only means by which that object can be attained. This is how they do it; they pray for the homeless, send tructs to the Lungry, sympathize with the cold and for the solace of the friendless

They seek for goodness and beauty and praity and truth outside of their connection with material things. But their search must be vain for these are all attributes of created things. They are never isolated and possessed of an associated with something else through rated from which, we cannot conceive of

If there were no created things there could be no truth. We must understand that to cultivate a love for the good, the beautiful and the true we must first cultivate a love for those things that are good and beautiful and true, viz: all of God's creation. Let us then hear the conclusion of the whole matter and bring these desultory thoughts to a close. A proper education must be the drawing out of the mind—the development of the faculties and germs in man and the train ing of them into harmonious action in obedience to the laws of reason and morality; must favor and direct the growth of the divine ideal implanted in every man—the type after which he was created, the germ of a perfect person.

In this work we should make haste slowly. The course should be shorter and more simple and conformable to na ture. There are no hot houses in nature. Every thing comes in its season. Each tree and plant and flower sucks up from the earth and from the air just the kind and quantity of nourishment suited to its nature. There is no lack, no waste. In the long procession of things to be learned nothing should appear until the child is prepared to grasp it without difliculty. We should proceed slowly according to the laws of nature, the teacher exciting the child to activity and rendering but a limited amount of assistance. But it is hard to be conservative in an age like this. Dare to suggest that the "word method" of learning to read is like an alphabet of a hundred thousand letters, and somebody's feelings will be hurt. Such systems are the result of the love of change which is the chief characteristic of our present intellectual condition. The love of change denotes a desire for something which we need. What we need now more than anything else is greater simplicity and a more rational methods of development. It is in the future, only, that, we can expect to find them. Hence our age is looking with hope and love to that future and gives itself up cheerfully to the change. We seem to be living not so much in the present as in the future, and receive each novelty with rapturous enthusiasm, as it because new, it is that of which we feel the want. The secret and unconscious longing of our hearts is for something yet untried, as if it alone could satisfy our desires." May it not be that in our passion for revolution we have lost sight of its object, and so unconsciously passed the point we wished to attain! and will have to allow the wheel to to make another balf turn to being up that for which we were striving; but which, in the rapidity of the revolution. eluded our clutch. Let us get back to first principles. Let not the personality of the child be subdued by a too. rigid adherence to a mechanical reutine which merges the individual into the school, making the school the entity on which all the teacher's resources are lavnaked, and point of the Friend of man ished and making a nomentity of the iron rules that are binding in fetters and | in it shall not only have a future exisholding to a common level the minds of lance, they shall not only live, but they our children. Let their minds follow | shall live and reign with Christ a thoustheir natural bent. Do not lop off the and years, and it is said, Rev. 20: 6, kinds of fruit, would allow it to bear none. Each one having been taught that to be useful is to be good, let his mind follow its natural inclination and do not spoil a good geometer to make a poor poet, nor ruin a good mechanic to make an indifferent artist.

"THIS IS THE FIRST RESURREC TION."

Rev. XX. V. VI.

HY JUHN FORNEY.

THE resurrection of the dead is truly a subject that should deeply inter est every mortal on God's footstool, for if there would be no resurrection there could be no hope for the Christian beyond this life. But because of a glori ous resurrection there is a hope of fu ture life; and there is something more sublime in the subject than simply a hope of a future existence, because we learn there is a difference, 1 Cor. 15: 23, "But every man in his own order, they that are Christ's shall rise at his coming, twenty fourth verse, then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God even the Father.' The end of what will come when Christ will deliver up the kingdom to the Father? I answer, the end of this order of th∈ resurrection of which Paul_reasoned with the church at Corinth. Here we learn from Paul, of a beginning of the resurrection and of the end of it, as also the order of it, and we see that that order is a beautiful order. But Paul does not tell us the period of time that subdivides the order of the resurrection, nor does he tell us how long Christ shall possess the kingdom before he gives it over to the Father, or how long it will take to bring down all rule and authority and power until he puts all enemies under his feet; neither does Christ himself tell us. John 5: 28, 29. But Christ tells us positively that all shall come forth in the resurrection; and he also tells us something about the order, and in that order he says some will rise unto everlasting life, and others for damna-

God, also, by his prophet Daniel, 12th chapter tells us something about the or der of the resurrection. He says "many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. But Daniel does not say if this awaken ing of the two classes shall take place at the same time or not. And our text heading this essay says "This is the first resurrection," and where there is a first there is a second, or more than one, for the word first implies a second.

Let us notice the language carefully. "This is the first resurrection." Speaking of those that sat upon thrones and of the souls of them, that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image, and they lived and reigned with Christ. Model schools will not make model there lyeth the subline principle of the hildren. Let us break some of the cast first resurrection. Those that have part told by Christ and his apostles. In the New Testament we are told of one res. urrection called the first fruits, which took place when Christ arose. Matt. 27: 52-53. Here we are told many of the hodies of the saints which slept arose and came out of the graves after his res. urrection and went into the holy city. Rev. 14: 1-3. John saw them afterward in number with the Lamb on Mount Zion, an hundred and forty and four thousand; and it is said of them they were redeemed from the earth. That this number constituted the Bride the Lamb's wife is quite satisfactory to my mind. It is said in Rev. 19: 7, "His wife hath made herself ready." Rev. 21:9, 10, "Come hither I will show thee the Bride, the Lamb's wife, and he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that city, the holy Jerusalem." Just the very place was shown to John where it is said by Matthew that they appeared that rose after Christ's resurrection in the ho. ly city. 1. That a resurrection has taken place called "the first fruits" is very clear. 2. That one will take place nt the coming of Christ, called the first resurrection, in the which only those that are Christ's shall be resurrected, is equally clear in the Scripture. 3. That a second resurrection will follow, at least a thousand years after the first, cannot be denied of which I will speak more of in my next essay. Now dear reader, let us look to our.

selves that we forfeit not our right to the first resurrection and the marriage feast of the Lamb. For it is said, Rev. 19: 9, "Write blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb, and he sayeth unto me, these are the true sayings of God." Therefore let us be wide awake to this all important subject; for his wife has made herself ready, and we are the invited guests to the marriage feast of the Lamb, and it is required of us to be ready and have on the wedding garment, least we be rejected, and have to remain under the power of death a thousand years longer, but that we may be the blessed and holy, and have part in the first resurrection, for upon such the second death bath no power, and they shall be priests of God and of Christs Brethren and sisters, what must it be to be there when this mortal has put on immortality, and we shall bear the image of the heavenly; when our Savier, the Lord Jesus Christ shall change our vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his glorious body, as Paul says, Phil. 31 20,24. Look forward with me, dear fellow laborer, with joy and patience for the time when we shall meet together with our leved ones, with our Jesus and be like him, and see him as he is, where there is no sickness, no sorrow, no pain, no crying, no death nor parting, but life, joy, and peace unspeakable and full of glory. Do you not all with me long to be there? I know you do. May God help us all to meet there, is my prayer-

That is ery brother and sister should make that a deings there could be no virtue, cause his garden would not produce all the distance that is yet to take place for a garden bis study; the whole of it can be found in the Scripture. Sister Thomasson, please give us more such reading. The heading of the other is "Position and Ability," selected, I presume. I read it with mingled feeling of joy and sorrow. If it is intended for church officers I am glad that some one had the courage to express in writing the things that are too often practiced, which talks londer than words and touches the feelings much harder. Wherever there are subordinates there must necessarily be superiors. Now the question arises, who are the superiors and who the subordi nates? We fail to find anything in the Scriptures that would favor the idea of subordinates and superiors. Read Matt. 23: 11, "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant." Mark 9; 35, "If any man strive to be first, the same shall be last of all and servant of all." Luke 22: 25, 26, "And he said un to them the kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors. But ye shall not be so; but he that is greatest among you let him he as the younger, and he that is chief as he that doth serve." We could quote much more Scripture of a similar nature, but the above is enough to show that the Lord did not consider one above another, but contrariwise such that would be great should serve, hence the Lord teaches no superiority; or do we understand the article without signature to mean that one officer is superior to another? We fail to find any Scripture to support that idea; we even fail to find the first, second, and third degree of the ministry, but rather that each one shall serve in the vocation wherewith he is called. We are taught that we are Breth ren, even the Master will own us as such if we do the Father's will; and not only Brethren but sons. "Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." John 3: 2. John does not say the superior shall be like him, neither the subordinate. The Lord the head of the church at no time called his apostles subordinates; the nearest he comes to it was when he said, "ye call me Lord and Master, and so I am." There is one hody and one spirit, even as ye are call ed in one hope of your calling." Eph. 4: 4. If we are one body and one spirit, where does the superior or subordinate come in, or does the writer of the unsigned article consider the bishop the superior and all other officers subordinates? If so, has the bishop authority to call meetings and deal out commands, tell one to do this and another to do that? Or has he the authority to issue proclamations? We think not; we can not learn that the bishop has any authority independent of the church. The officers have always been considered the servants of the church; hence the church must be the superior, and the officers the subordinates, but that is contrary to the inclination of big "I," and brings the spirit of elevation to a level with the bumble.

HONESTY.

BY H. P. BRINKWORTH.

THAT every one who professes an interest in the saving blood of Jesus Christ,our Redeemer from the curse of sin, and who by covenant relationship with him, has entered a membership on the church roll of his choice, should be in every sense of the word a strictly honest, upright man or woman, none I pre sume will dare question; but that there is a manifest declension in things pertain ing to honesty of purpose and integrity of character must be admitted by all engaging more or less in the business af fairs of life. Job of old, who sustained his integrity even to the last, is a noble example to modern. Christians that God will not forsake his chosen ones, and that of Annanias and Saphira is a sure manifestation of the displeasure of the Almighty in matters pertaining to Godliness, to honesty, to integrity of purpose and to formation of character.

We have then before us two plain cases, pro and con, and from the same as a basis for our remarks, and a criteriou by which we may judge of the worth of character, we deduce the following:

1st. That honesty forms a part of the character of every true born soul.

2nd. That a lack of the same betrays the grand fundamental principle that holds Christiantiy above the world.

3rd. That by being dishonest we laring reproach upon the cause of Christ, and therefore are no longer fit subjects, claim ing a visible union with the church be low, nor vital union with Christ our

First, then, as to the characteristics of a true born soul. The Scriptures assure us that it becomes our duty, if we wrong our fellow-man, to restore tour-fold; now if it had not been wrong in general principles, this could not justly have been actually transpired, whilst the person interested was in an unregenerate state. whose own heart owned his guilt, confessed the same, and promised retribution.

Again, we find the young lawyer whom Christ addressed regarding the inheritance of eternal life. If honesty had strictly followed the propounded question, there would have been no reason for going back. But upon examination it is clearly seen that there was a lack and it occasioned an entire failure, so that no longer was there any desire manifested for the important point in view.

The Pharisees tempted Christ as to the Roman coin, but our Savior plainly shows that honor to whom honor is due. The apostle Paul in speaking to his Roowe no man anything, but to love one another.'' the Devil, becomes no one, and consequently should receive its just punish. ment at the hands of the highest tribunal, who sees not as man seest not as man secth, who regard the heart, and requires that the regenerated heart be void of these things.

Thirdly. By being dishonest we bring reproach upon the cause of Christ, and therefore are no longer fit subjects, claiming a visible union with the church, nor vital union with Christ our Head.

That a reproach upon the cause of our Master will invalidate our faithfulness and thereby bring upon us the condemaation referred to in the first verse of the eighth chapter of Paul's letter to the Romans, is in my mind a matter of no doubt, and that this will destroy the vital union that unites our inner, spiritual life to God, is conclusively seen, and thereby endanger our union both visible: and vital. To separate ourselves from the influence of wicked men, to lay aside all malace, deceit, envyings, hatred, wrath, and in fact, all of the lusts of the flish, as evidently the imperative duty enjoin ed by the apostle, and the denouncements upon the same ever received their just deserts at his hands; yet in the face of the same how often do we see the man of influence or wealth carried as smoothly over the turbulent waters of dishonesty, as though his character assumed an angelic nature, seemingly destroying neither visible nor vital union. required, for the illegal transaction had But oh, dear reader, God sees the heart, and with him perhaps the crime, (for erime it is) is not passed by; among the Take for instance the case of Zacchens, | things treasured against us, may prominently stand, a dishonest reputation. If the article needs an apology, which is so loudly and magisterially called for, let the editors give it by all means. My review was put into their hauds with the request to return it if not on the whole productive of the cause of Christ. If blame there be, and they bear a part, and Brother Hummer another and I the larger share, all the wounds inflicted will probably heal by the first intention, to use a surgical phrase. If all the others refuse to shoulder part of the responsibility, I will be the scapegoat for the whole offence. But the truth will find lodgement in many hearts, even if given in a sharp, prickly setting. And as for the "bombast," and "cheap fame," and "empty declamation," and "brotherhood scandalizing," and "infidel making" of which I am so hotly accused, oh how little am I moved by all such ebullitions of littleness. Subject personality I employ without compunction, because unavoidable; but with the petty personalities of chagrin and ill will I am disgusted. If my article contains any thing not philosophically educed from the essay reviewed, tear it out and I will be the first to put on my heel.

Come, brethren, let us all clasp hands around the Cross, and pledge ourselves anew to the discovery and exemplification of "the truth asit is in Jesus." Here Brother Hummer is my hand. Roll the tide of love round the Heaven-formed circle. "What is written is written." God defend the right.

GOD'S PROMISES.

OH! that we did always meet Satan with a promise from one Cod promise from our God. His promises are firm as the everlasting hills. Trials bring us into sweeter commnion with our Lord. They cause us to flee to him for aid and support. We find great pleasure in telling our trials to him. and in the consciousness that his eye sees the emotion that moves our hearts, that his ear is ever open to our cries, and above all treat his own tender heart is throbbing in sympathy with ours. Tired and weary pilgrim, clasp his promises more closely to your heart; leau on them more firmly, for if you have accepted. Christ as your eternal portion, all things will work together for good. Our sky may be clouded, disappointments may come, yet trust; for the Blessed desus, who sufferd and died for us, will bear us up in trial's dark and glowny hour. For this we know that we shall not be tried above that which we are able to bear. How precious to our souls are the moments of sweet communion with our Savior, when we have a strong and realizing sense of his presence in our souls and a sweet assurance of our acceptance with Him. There are no more precious moments given than these. Then we can say, "Jesus. I'll endure all this for thee, and even more, if it shall be thy will, and count it joy thus to suffer, when I remember what thou hast done for

. NOYEMBER 24, 1879. LANARK, ILL.

D. M. MILLER and M. M. ESHELMAN left on the morning of the 22ud inst. for Ripon, Wisconsin, to hold forth the word of life.

Now ready; "Infidelity: Its Cause and Cure" -a tract that tells the truth holdly. Price forty cents per hundred. Send for some and hand them to your neighbors.

Up to the 18th inst. one hundred and fiftyseven students had been enrolled in the Mt. Morris College, forty-nine having been added since the beginning of the second term

BROTHER HILLERY reached Hudson, III., on the 18th inst., and expected to remain there a few days. We hope the bord will bless his lahors to the good of his people.

ALMANAC's published by Quinter and Brumtough Bros., and by H. J. Kurtz are both ready to send out. We have a lot of each, Price per copy, ten cents; per dozen, $100.

A SISTER writes: "I am one of the isolated members. O how hungry we get for the preached word, but when the paper comes the hunger is appeased! How eager we are for our maileach week."

WE had a pleasant call last week from Brethren Samuel Budger, of Dullis Center, Iowa, and Wm. Miller, of Polo, III. Bro. Budger is a young minister, and is much concerned for the cause of his Master.

Writes a zealous brother: "Send me a Prossectus and I will do all I can for the B. At W. It is for the good od souls that I labor. We -hould do all we can be win people to Christ, for one soul is worth more than the whole world."

BROTHER R. H. MILLIE IS Still in proof health. We hope he may soon enjoy such blessings as will enable him to go forth in detense of the eternal principles of truth. We shall be glad to welcome there to our assemble tion here at any time

WE not long since received an article, pleadring in Strong terms for reform and conprovement, and the paper was so strongly scented with tobacco that we seem compelled to close car musal organ white realing it. Official near long must the people suffer

BROTHER THOS. D. LIVON, of Hudson, Ill., writes: "One of the prettiest sights I ever beheld was on last Sounday, (3th mst) when I called for the contribution from the little ones to send as a Christmas gut to Bro, Hope's children. WE have been much strengthened in the Lord by the numerous visitors the past week The Committee of Arrangements held a two dny's session in the Lanark Church; and besides these, we had the pleasure of associating with Brethren S. T. Bosserman, Samuel Badger, Isaac Rhodes and wife, and Geo. Brumbaugh and wife of Muntingdon county, Ps. Bro. Brumbaugh is on his way to Kansas.

On Friday evening, the 14 hunstant, Bro. W C. Teeter, of Mt. Morris, preached an interesting discourse in Lanark, on the "Love of Gad." Saturday evening, Bro. S. T. Bossermon, of Dankirk, Ohio, entertained us with "What is Man?" and on Sunday morning and evening Bro. J. C. Lahman, of Franklin Grove, 111, gave us some excellent soul-food. Many thanks to those who have so kindly remembered us. Come again Brethren.

An earnest worker in the cause of Christianity writes: "It seems as if nothing but thunder and lighting will awaken people and even that tails in many cases. I do not know how it is with others while laboring, but as for myself I must work hard. It seems to me that I must study and read more than any one else in order to know what to say. Sometimes I think I should quit preaching until I know more, but that will not do, for the barvest truly is great. I dare not throw away my one talent or else all will be lost."

WE have the following from Jesse Calvert: I have just closed a series of meetings at Arcadia, Hamilton county, Indiana, with eleven additions by haptism; and one restored. Wm. Pierce and Eli Caylor are Elders here. Things are pleasant and many more promised to come. Hope they will and that God will bless all. I commence meeting here at Eld. Hiel Hamilton's to continue a week. The 27th will be in Importe county, and the 16th of December will be in Wells county, Ind."

the mailing clerk knows none of our subscribers. Some have told us not to stop their paper when their time had expired; but the clerk does not know who they are, and we have no way of telling him. We instruct him to send a notice to each subscriber one mouth before his subscription expires. If the subscription then is not renewed within the month the clerk understands the paper is no longer wanted and promptly removes the name from the mailing list. We hope our readers will all appreciate the circumstances and do what they can to accrumodate themselves to them.

THAT MISSING "E"-It is an old, old story. God said, "Ye shall not cat," but Satan artfully dropped the three letters n-a-t and sin wonthe victory. Leaving out often leads to terrible results. For the want of a horse-shoe mail, a battle was lost, a nation vanquished, and the destiny of the people changed.

The missing "a" makes fasting instead of feasting. In the last issue, which gave notice of Thanksgiving Day by the Governor of 11hnois, we expressed the hope that the day would be spent in giving thanks instead of feasting and light-mindedness, and not until several thousand copies had been jointed did we see that the want of an "e" made us speak against Wie call attention to Bro. Balsbangh's article on third page. He have heard no complaints brother Christian, but on the contrary consulerable satisfaction with your "Shipwreel; at Exon Gaber." How any one can expect to be more prous, more intelligent, or more Christlike by applying the term "ernel," "abusive," and "mean" to you for speaking out leddly your sentiments, is a mystery that needs clearing up. To such we have no apologies to ofter, her they would not profit by any limiting on our part; but if there he any "meek and lowly in heart" whose spirits were grieved by your "Shipwreek," we most gladly step into the arena with your as "scape-goats" (Lev. 16). 10) and cheerfully do our part;

THE PRICE OF OUR REDEMPTION.

1) EDEMPTION means deliverance from sio. 11. Zacharias when filled with the Holy Ghost, said; "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people."— Loke 1: 68. Paul also declares that Christ gave "himself for us." What for? That "he might redeem us." Redeem us from what? "Froin all miquity."-Titus 2: 14. Here it is expressly stated that Christ gave himself, and for whom and for what purpose. The grand idea was, to redrem us, and that from all iniquity. No augel could be found that would answer the purpose. Angels could not purchase us. Dead suints could not purchase us. Living men were not of sufficient value to pay the debt, but he who is full of grace and truth was abundantly able.

But why was the Pure One sacrified? "In obedience to the law." Without sacrifice there can be no life. Look at the beautiful flower in your garden as it exhales its rare perfumes, and then ask yourself the question, "How does it do this? and the only answer will be, by the sucrifice of dew, and air, and earth, and sunlight." The mighty oak came up through its years of existence according to the great and immutable law of sacrifice. The ear of corn was formed and matured according to this law, The cattle upon the hills are there at the expense of other matter. So Christ, in order to redeem us, and develop that higher life, must needs be sacrificed. Before reaching this, however, he had to pass through all the stages of development, so that there might be no infraction of law. God does not break any of his laws. He cannot; for his very being is in harmony with law. All things, whether animate or inanomate, are governed by law, and any infraction of that law by which animate things are governed will entail distress and misery in proportion to the extent of the infraction. When sin laid hold of man, the law of his being was broken, and nothing less than the sacritice of God's Son could repair the brench, That which was conceived by the Holy Ghost was called the Christ. He was the first begotten of God by the Holy Spirit, hence the Onlybegotten. Every intracle, every good deed by this Christ developed his power and mission. His works availed. All his works were meritorious, because he had broken no love. God could and did accept all the work of his Son. Such work possessed merit; because it came from a sinless being. Let us turn and behold what "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air nosts, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head."-Matt. 8:20. This expresses his poverty for our sakes.

"For ye know the grace of our flord-lesus Christ. that, thoug a he was righ, yet for your sakes he became goor, that ye through his poverty might be

The beasts of the forest were provided for, the birds of the air were not neglected, but Jesus the Son of God, for our sakes, was compelled to sacrifice even home and its attendant blessings. This is a part of our price. Now turn to the courf-room where Judge Herod presided, and see what Jesus suffered for us.

"And when he had thus spoken, one of the othcers which stood by struck Jesus with the pain of his fond, saying. Answerest thou the high priest so 2"-dalar 48: 22

Struck for us!a part of the price. () what indignity; but Jesus hore it meekly! Here stood the only sinless, perfectly pure and holy inhabitant of the world before the rulers, received their indignities, their mockings and scourgings—all as the price of our redemption. law demanded sacrifice, and only Jesus could supply the demand. Given over to the multitude by Judge Pilate, he was crowned with thorns, smitten with bands, mocked, roled in purple like a criminal, and hurried away to Calvary bearing his cross. On the way ride men and boys line the streets offering insults and jeers. What for? As the price of our redemption. He reaches the place of execution. The men appointed, extend his arms, grasp the rugged banamer, and with a strong hand drive the mails through his to ely hands and feet. But this is not enough. Strong arms lay hold of the large cross and rudely plant it so that it will stand. Ah, behold him! See the blood frickling down from that cross! Behold the quivering flesh, the saddened look, the doing teatures! Wicked and hard-hearted men derble Line AP this as a part of the price of our redemption. But the end is not yet. The Savior thirsts, and desires a sip of water. Even this is denied him. The cruel, unfeeling soldiers dip a sponge in vinegar and place it to his lips. He exclaims, "It is finished!" The price is given! The debt is paid, and mankind is free. Glory to God in the highest, the great Sacrifice is made, and Life now appears. The gloom and sorrow which so long hung over man now disappears and the glittering sunlight of eternity looms up to lighten the pathway of mortal man. "We are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

HELL.-INGERSOLL CONVERTED.

TDHE articles which we now present on infidelity are not given as the best that can he produced in favor of Christianity; they are just such as are given in favor of infidelity, and as they have had an influence to make infidels we hope that when their purpose is reversed that they will have an opposite influence. We have carefully read every word Ingersoll has yet had put in print and, in so small a compass, we have never found a greater number of absurdities and misrepresentations. How then does he obtain influence over people to convert them to infidelity? Wholly by his rhetoric and sophistry. Ingersoll will not debate. Why? Because his fallacies would be exposed, and his rhetoric shown to be only sound. Those unskilled in logic are carried over his most apparent fullacies by the powerful and brilliant wings of oratory, Thus with his rhetoric be clutches his prey rises and soars along till he has escaped the bounds of the cloudless regions of reason and judgment, and with the mighty momentum which he has gained in his long flight plunges into the blackest clouds of skepticism, unbelief and doubt uptil he is far beyond where rays from the suns or stars of science or logic ever pierce their way and shed their light,

The idea of infidelity was born of revenge and brutality on the one side, and cowardice on the other. In my judgment the American usople are too brave, too charitable, too generous, too magnanimous to believe in the infamous dogma of infidelity. I have no respect for any human being who believes in it. I have no respect for any man who will pollute the imagination of childhood with that infimous lie. I have no respect for the man who will add to the sorrows of this world with that doleful dogma. I have no respect for any man who endeavors to put that infinite cloud, that infinite shadow over the heart of humanity. I want to be frank with you. I dislike this doctrine, I hate it, I despise it, I defy this doctrine.

For a good many years the learned intellects of Christendom have been examining into the religious of other countries in the world, the religious of the thousands that have passed away. They examined into the religion of Egypt, of Greece, the religion of Home and of the Scandinavian countries. In the presence of the ruins of those religions the learned men of Christendom insisted that those religions, were baseless, that they are fraudlent. But they have all passed away.

While this was being done Christianity was applauded, and when the learned men got through with the religions of other countries they turned their attention to Christianity. By the same mode of reasoning, by the same methods, by the same arguments that they used with heathen religious they established the religion o Jesus Christ, Why? Because Christianity is the work of God and not of man. Every book has been printed and bound by man, that is the author but not the printer and the binder of the Bible. Men existed before the Bible but not before its author. What could be more absurd than the idea of a sacred volume before there was any one to read it.

In my judgment man has made every religion which has any thing more or less in it than is tuught in the Bilde.

There is another thing to which I wish to call your affention. Man never had an idea, except it was supplied him by his surroundings or revelation. Every idea in the world that man has, came to him either by his surroundings or revelation. Man cannot conceive of anything, the hint of which he has not received from one of these two sources. You can imagine an animal with the hoof of a bison, with the pouch of the kangaroo, with the wings of geagle, with the beak of a bird, and with the all of the lion; and yet every joint of this monher you borrowed from nature. Every thing tou can think of-every thing you can dream is obtained from revelation or your surroundags-everything. And there is nothing on his earth known in any other way whatever. yan is the author of every religion in the world Because each pperatum bodes forth the knowledge and the elief of the people at the time it was made, and no book is there any knowledge of God exgpt the Bible. Barbarians have produced, and wave will produce a barbarian religion. It mmined for Jesus Christ, the only begotten son of God, to produce a religion which would not only make man happier and better here,but which would fit him for an eternal home begood this "vale of tears." Man-made religions re changing every day. They are changing might. That is to say we are changing them and the religious of to day are not the religious one year ago. What changed them? The Bible has done it; science, education and the growing heart of man has done it. They will ot bear the test of Gospel light. New relig ons are forming every day, but just as soon as hospel light is thrown upon them they wilt and ade from our view. If intidels and professors Christianity can commune together now. what will they not do in a thousand years?

If true religion continues to mark still more and more distinctly the exact similarity between man-made religions and infidelity which it has been doing the last twenty-five years, what will the fifty years from to-night? In my judgment every religion that is not substantiated by miracle is a fraud. Every religion in the world has announced every other religion as a gaud. That proves to me that some of them must be mistaken. Why? Sappose Mr. Smith hould tell Mr. Brown that he-Mr. Smithaw a corpse get out of the grave, and that shen he first saw it, it was covered with the sorms of death, and in his presence it was relothed in healthy, beautitui flesh, and then appase Mr. Brown should tell Mr. Smith, "1 on the same thing myself. I was in a gravegard ouce, and I saw a dead man rise." Sujose then that Smith should say to Brown, You're a liar," and Brown should reply to South, "and you're a liar," what would you mak? You'd think they did not talk very nice, wouldn't you? Smith having seen it simself should have believed Brown; and Brown having seen it should have believed Smith. Now since Smith had really seen it ad Brown had seen it too, then Smith should have regarded it as a corroboration of this stog and should have regarded Brown as one of is principal witnesses. So when a man says Twas upon Mt. Sinai and there I met God ind another man says "I was upon a mountain, and there I met the Supreme Brahma' and Moes says "That's not true," and contends that the other man never did see Brahma, and he contends that Moses never did see God, that is my judgment, proof of nothing, because they did not both see the same thing and could not be witnesses to circumstances they knew withing about.

Every religion has charged every other reagion of having been an unmitigated fraud; ad so most of them are. Some of the men The were eye witnesses of the miracles recordd in the Bible were just like the infidels of tolsy. They said, "It is a frand," although they new better. Whenever a man appeals to a biracle which is an established fact he tells what is true. Truth relies upon reason and be undeviating, unchangeable laws of God.

Now, we have a religion—that is, some peodehave—I pretend to have religion myself. I Plieve in living right in this world, in living wre, now, to day, to night as we ought to live, blo good to our fellow-man. That is thristisuly. And when we reach the shores of the ther world, oh, how ready and anxious we will 8 to meet the dear ones who have presided us the spirit hand,

Now, we have in this country a theory of inblify which the devil and men possessed with is spirith we tried to teach almost ever since teation, and just in proportion as intilelity as been believed have men grown mean and bulked; just in proportion as they have reased believe it men have become just and charitaben believed no minister in the city of New then you will have our idea as expressed in the joy of heaven (2 John 1 4). In order to

York would dare to preach the Gospel. Now we have an infidelity. What is it? They say in the first place that all the vast universe was created by a nobody. I know it was not. They say, too, there is not and never was a devil, that death is not the result of sin-Adam's transgression. All this they say, but really know nothing about it. Infidels ought to have lived at the same time or before their parents so they could have instructed their parents what they should do. These infidels further say that Christ never made a sacrifice of his lite to redeem a lost and ruined world, that he did not give us a Bible that we might know the way to eternal salvation. Whenever these infidel ideas have been read and believed, men have immediately commenced cutting each other's throats. Wherever it has obtained the power they have invented inquisitious and instruments of torture, and they commenced hating each other with all their hearts. The Bible is the foundation of civilization, but infidelity is the foundation of bell, and we never shall get rid of it until Satan is bound and cast into the bottomless pit,

Deur Brethren:-

NCLOSED find my mite * * for the L Tract Fund. Ever since I received this notice I have been wishing to respond to it, as I never turn any away empty-handed when it it is in my power to contribute.-Luke 6: 30. Except one year, for several successive years, I have only succeeded in placing our papers and tracts before the people entire ly at my own expense; and that all carned with earnest efforts and much delicate health,

Thanks be to the Fountain of strength, comfort, counsel, light and life, when I am physically weak then I am spiritually strong. is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble "—Ps. 46

In B. at W. No. 45, under caption of, "A Veteran's Remarks," I noticed this: "Thelieve in progressive religion, but not in the progressive christian.' The progressive christian is the result of the progressive religion, hence not a matter of faith. The aged brother is correct."—Ens. 1

This paragraph is such a puzzle to me I write to ask your explanation through the paper. I understand the aged brother to say he wheres in progressive relation, but not in the mogressive christian,

With my view of the words, and of disinterested readers around me, we could only conclude they are one and the same thing. One could not possess the progressive religion withont resulting in a progressive christian.

I understand you relators to say these things or names-nature are "not a matter of faith. Closely following this you say, "the aged brother is correct." Do you mean the is correct it these things are "not of faith?" "What is not of faith is sin." Over and over I examined to understand the meaning of the parties; for they seem to conflict.

As to my part, I care very little about names The nature is what my whole heart is set upon. The "will of God" I find to be the all important concern of Christians. To perform it for His highest glory and honor, a daily, prayerful and impartial searching of the Scriptures is atterly indispensable.

Then we can find much remi sness of duty to God and man, Fuith and works must go hand and hand. Oh! what a resolution is need. ed in this direction. In this day, truly the Savior might ejaculate: "O ye of little faith."

May Almighty God so unstop deat ears, open blind eyes and touch hard hearts that many may be moved to be about my Father's husi-In various ways it is sadly needed. Your sister in Christ,

TRIENDLY RESPONSE.

Thanks, dear sister for your "mite" to Tract Society. May many "go and do likewise." Bro. J. S. Mohler, in this issue presents us a definition of the term "progressive." We do not say that definition is the best or the poor est, but suggest that all read it carefully.

The aged brother nor any other person is not required to believe in a "progressive charstian ' in order to be saved in heaven, but in the derine principles of salvation. The Christian is an exponent of the principles of Christianity. and not Christianity itself. The Christian is only the effect of Christ's work on earth, and not the cause. A man is not required to believe in man, but in the Lord Jesus, who brought "mumortality to light through the gospel." And more; a man is not only required to believe the principles of religion, but to alway "from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered into the saints." We say amen, to the union of faith and works, and works will follow all true! faith. Please bear in mind cause and effect, the | in love and harmony and walk worthily in the And if they beleived to-night as it has thing itself and the result of that thing, and truth as it is in Jesus in order to be blessed with your quotation. If we "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3: 18), we will be moving onward, and this is characteristic of a Christian. A Christian does not go downward, but upward. The term does not mean going backward, but forward. Is not this a fact? If so, can any adjective, strictly speaking, be used to qualify it? Does not the term "Christian" include all that is meant by the term "progressive?" Can a believer be more than a Christian? Can be be less than a Christian and still be a Christian? Is there such a thing as an unprogressive Christian? Let us have some light shed upon this,

SUCCESSFUL GOSPEL WORK

f T is apparent to the observing mind that the Christian is desirous of the success of the gospel of Christ, in the conversion of the sin ner. Various are the methods adapted by them to accomplish their designs. Aid from neighboring ministerial force is secured, means subscribed, house of worship in readiness, announcements made, the people assemble and the work is commenced. Notwithstanding the means provided and the effort made, the success attending their efforts does not meet their expectations, and in many cases evinces a signal failure, and in consequence of this, disappointments follow.

The prospective meetings are now a reality. The brethren and and sisters with their neighbors and friends assemble together in the sanctuary of the Lord. The saints pray, the minister labors hard, the meetings cease and small, if any, is the success of the labor and means expended. Brethren expected their neighbors converted. Parents looked forward with painful anxiety for the conversion of their children and having them safely anchored in the arms of Jesus. Husbands or wives who were believers in Christ longed for the happy hour when they could give, to the guide of their youth or the solace of their declining age, the embrace of toving reconciliation, or to them, extend a christian recognition. But their fond hopes and expectations proved futile. They wonder. They inquire what is wrong? Sorrow instead of joy fills the heart. The unconverted feel to say, their power is gone, and with feelings of surprise at this non-success they yet remain in sin. What are the causes producing those almost or entire failures?

1st. Perhaps we place too much confidence in man, too much is expected of the minister. A circumstance of this kind occurred sometime ago in the State of Minnesota as related by a Baptist minister. In the city of Minneapolis, the society of Baptists called a meeting; all the necessaries were provided for the minister, Dr. Buckley, was called to preside. A weeks prayer-meeting was held prior to the arrival of the Doctor, and all his petitions to Almighty God were centered on Dr. Buckley for his protection and safe arrival &c. Great was the gossiping among friends "when Dr. Buckley arrives the meeting will be a great success and sinners will be converted." The time of his arrival approached, a committee appointed to conduct him to place of meeting. The people assembleil, all anxious to see and to hear the great orator. The committee arrives, but where is Hr. Buckley? Ah! the disappointment, the tears, that tell from many of that congregation, "our meeting and our week of prayer is a fail ure." At this time an aged veteran arose and observed, "we have been trusting too much inman, let us trust in God. We also have a work. to do and now let us set our minister to work and let us hold up his hands and labor with ham trusting in God and the blessing will follow. At this juncture he called for a season of prayer, the work commenced and great results

2nd. It may be the church is not in harmony and in good working order. It such is the case we need not look for much success. Our brethren and sisters call for meetings, anxious for the conversion of their friends. Oh this is a holy desire! But to insure success there must be a united effort, unity of action and sentiment mean the part of the members. Must be work in the glorious cause of our blessed Master more successfully and to insure the blessings of beaven, I would offer the following plan as already suggested to me in part, by an humble follower and earnest disciple of Jesus.

When a local church desires a series of meetings: 1st, Let the house-keeper counsel bis members as to whether they want a meeting.

2nd. Are you in love and union, peace and harmony so that you can stand united in defense of the gospel and support this meeting with your prayers and attendance,

3rd. Whom do you wish to preach and conduct this meeting? If the decison is for your home ministers or foreign, then stand by them and hold them up before God and success will inevitably be the result. For Jesus has promised to be with his children wherever assembled in his name, and if not in union and peace we cannot meet in his name, and the consequence is we cannot receive the blessing. If this course were pursued by the churches generally, the evangelists could go to their fields of labor with a lighter heart, knowing that all is love and union among the saints and all needed help readily offered. Then brethren and sisters let us not trust in the arm of flesh, but in the mighty God who will ever help us in all our

BOOK OF JASHER.

Please explain where the book of Jasher is to be found? John 10: 13. HANNAH KARNS.

PHE sentence referred to reads: "Is not this written in the book of Jasher?" or as the marginal has it, the book of "the apright," Also in II. Sum. 1: 18 "behold, is it not written in the book of Jasher?"

Commentators are very much divided on this. Some think that it was a commentary similar to Casar's on his wars with the Gauls, while others think that it refers to the book of remembrance prepared by Moses for Joshua's private use,-a sort of directory how to proceed in war. To this latter opinion we are inclined. M. M. E.

GREATER WORKS.

Will some one please explain John 44, 12? It reads as follows: "Verity, verity 1 say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because Ugo unto my Father."

RILEY STUMP.

I EllE Christ gives his disciples a promise II of enducing them with power, which we see folfilled in their speaking "with tongues" in the conversion of three thousand at one time, healing the sick by their slindows, &c.

These were greater works than Christ him-because I go to My Father.

It was through the Holy Spirit that they did these things. Christ said, "If I go not, the comforter (Holy Spirit) will not come unto you; but if I go away I will send him unto you. Thus we see they did these things through the Holy Ghost and the Holy Ghost came by Christ's going to the Father.

Will some one please explain Matt. 12: 40? It reads as follows; "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the son at man be three days and three nights in the H. L. FADULY. heart of the cartle'

This is a prophecy that was attered by Christ, and fulfilled while he was in the grave. Although Christ was not three days and three anglets in the grave the was part of three days.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

There is many a rest on this road of life. If we only would stop to take it; And many a tone from the fietter land, If the queralous heart should wake it. To the sunny side that is full of hope, And whose boant ful trust pe'er falleth, The grass is green and the flowers bright, Though the wintry storm prevailette.

Better to hope, though the clouds hang low, and to keep the eyes still lifted; For the sweet blue sky will soon perp through When the omin are clouds are rifled. There was never a night without a day, Nor an evending without a morning: And the darkest hour, the proverb goes, Is the himr before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life, which we cass in our life pleasure. That is richer far than the jeweled crown, Or the miser's hearded treasure; It may be the love of a little child, Or a mother's prayer to beaven, Or only a beggar's grateful thanks For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life A bright and gold in filling, And to do God's will with a ready heart, And hands that are swift and willing; Than to snap the delicate silver threads Of our curtous lives asumler; And then Heaven Idame for the lang ed ends And sit to grieve and wonder. $\leftarrow Golden\ Censer.$

TRUE STRENGTH.

WE must measure a man's strength by the the power of those who subdue him. And hence, composure if often the highest result of strength. Did we ever see a man receive a flugrant injury, and then reply calculy? That is a man spiritually strong. Or, did we ever see a man in anguish, stand as if curved out of solid rock, as if mastering bunself? Or, one bearing a hopeless, daily trial, remain salent and never tell the world what cankered his home peace? That is strength. We too often mistake strong feelings for strong character. A man, who bears all before him, before whose frown domestics tremble, and whose larsts of fary make the children of the household quake, because he has his way in all things, we call him a strong man, The truth is, that he is a weak man; it is his passions that are strong—he, mastered by them, is weak.

SCOLDING.

M/ITH some, scolding is chronic, says Zion's Herald. Life is one long fret. The flesh is feverish, the nerves unstrung, the spirit perturbed and in a state of unrest. The physical condition and the material surroundings may have a strong tendency to disturb our equanimity and to exasperate our feelings; but we should bear in mind that scolding never did anybody any good; and withal grows to be very uncomfortable to the party who indulges in it. Inappropriate to anybody, scolding mpears most hateful in parents and ministers.-Set to be dispensers of kindness and love to those with whom they are more especially associated, it is horrible to see gall distitled instead of charity that blesses both parties. Scolding turns a household into a paudemonium, and a church into an inquisition. Bear in mind that kindness and gentle speech are a great deal easier to practice than their opposites. Why practice the worse thing when harder? Arrest yourself in the indulgence of this bad bubit right here. Begin now, and put yourself under bonds to be good-natured.

THAT UGLY RUBBISH!

[4, ompiled for BESTBESS AT WORK] "DUBBISH!" exclaims the maid as she 11 sweeps the room. Perhaps only "matter out of place," and not so had as one might think. What we think worthless is often exceedingly valuable. From the slimy, silvery sediment found in the bottom of the vessel in which the fre-h water bleak, a small fish about four inches in length, has been worked, beautiful artificial pearls and beads are made. Old glass is hought op, remelted, colored, and moulded into flat cakes, which are in turn broken into fragments and used to ornament buildings. In the manofactore of gas, a lequer is produced which for a tar is made pitch, benzole, crevote and carbolic nhum, green vitriol, and sulphuric acid are made. From old sails bank-note paper is made, and oal of old ropes large quantities of brown paper are manufactured yearly. Out of coaltar the most delicate perfumes are made such as woodruff and metilot. What is rubbish to us is often in its altered condition very valuable to others; and some of the sweetest luxuries are profused from things which in themselves are exceedingly repulsive.

SIMPLICITY.

DERHAPS simplicity in its various developbegasge, that medium through which spirit talks with spirit. The reason for this is obvions; nine tenths of mankind are struggling, as the swimmer that breasts the waves. for a subsistence. Such are not thinkers; they have not time to be. They take thought as others have coined it, and in an hour's respite from the daily routine of labor; those who seek mental culture are too fatigned for metaphysical investigations, even should they possess the capacity to comprehend them. The remaining moity of readers, though gifted with more leisure, have seldom mental energy for abstruce investigations. There is something in man's medice indolence which revolts against severe mental Jabor, and we are not quite positive that there is not a certain instinctive impression on the minds of the common sense masses, that obscurity on the part of a writer or speaker arises. from his own want of clear comprehension of the subject.

Some communicators of thought labor under the impression that there is an inelegance, a want of dignity in simplicity. Is it so? When Muses inquired of Israel's great lawgiver by what name he would be made known unto that people, his reply was, "I AM THAT I AM: I AM hath sent me unto you." Is there not a mujority in these simple words? Can we by multiplying add to their strength? Later on in the world's history, under the Christian dispensatinn, man's great exemplar left, in the simplicity of his teachings to his disciples, a model for la instructors. The Lord's prayer, given from his own lips to his followers, is a pattern of comprehensive simplicity. Are we not to learn this that essential truths are simple, and that these are they which are best grappled to the soul? To make the application of this grand truth still more universal, we learn that the King of heaven, who built the mountains, who spread out the curtains of the skies and garnished them with gems-He, before whose glory the angels well their faces, came to this world to bearfit humanity, and in His intercourse with men he spake unto them so that the common people heard him gladly. This sublime fact teaches us that they who would impart best to others, should have their own spirits robed with the beautiful garments of simplicity. and then go forth, freely giving of their own treasures of thought in the cloquent simplicity of words and works, for the noble purpose of elevating our common humanity.—Sel.

TIED AT HOME.

MANY a wenry mother, with little ones elinging around her, has sighed to think she was so "tied at home." With the restlessness common to humanity, with a desire to hear and know and enjoy what is going on outside of her little circle, she finds her wings elipped. and herself year after year confined to the narrow circle which she calls home. Often too, her toils seem not appreciated, and her sacrifices seem poorly rewarded, and sometimes there are few rays of sunshine on her weary, lonely

There are several things to be considered in making up an estimate of the case. And first, the home life is, under God, the foundation of everything worth having in this world. Blot out the home, and with it goes religion, morality, liberty, order, peace. The healthful and orderly existence of the human race, depends on the maintenance of the family life. The woman who holds this fort may think she is doing hut little good, but neither she nor any other mortal knows how much evil she is preventing. The little boy who stood wet and dripping all the night long, stopping with his chilled body the opening in a breaking dyke, and thus saving the whole country from a deluge which threatened to overwhelm it, was not more heroic normore useful in that supreme moment of his life, than the woman who opposes the bulwark of time was regarded as worthless, but now it is home against all the surging madden sees that | put through a proces by which salts of ammo rock and toss the world, and who gather within ma, far naptha are manufactured. From this in those that under her kindly guidance grow up to be an honor and a blessing to the race, acid. From the "slaty shales" that are found but who for her care and the sheltering refuge among coal and the waste liquor of gas works, which her loving hands prepare, would be turned forth as wild beasts to devour society and to destroy each other.

The mother thinks sometimes as she muses on her weary lot, that another mother has done the very same things for her. Her memory gnes back to the time when she was a clinging child; when hands that are now crossed in death's slumber toiled to care for her; and when a heart that now is silent in the grave, throbbed with love and thrilled with anxiety for the brood of little ones of whom she was one. She is doing for others only what others have done for her, and as she blesses the memory of those who have shirbled her in her early ments is nowhere more agreeable than in days, so she labors with renewed zeal so to perform a mother's duty that her children shall arise and call her blessed at the last.

She who feels the bondage of home, nevertheless cannot fail to rejoice in its safety. The gny butterflies of fashion flit on every breeze, but the wintry blasts find them without a shelter. There are dangers away from home; there are phantoms that lare and snares that entangle; there are sins and woes unnumbered that lie in wait for those who cut loose from wise restraints; but the mother in her quiet home life with her hitle ones around her, has her heart steadied in its supreme affections and d sires, and feels a nearness to that Christ who blessed the little children, and who shelters those who trust in him, from every foe and

We may cliafe at the confinement of home but what of those who have no home, drifting on the wide world, waifs upon a stormy sea, lost children in a desert land? To be without a home is next to being without hope and without God. The true mother has her home, and what is more she expects to have it; for when her hands have grown weak, the little ones which she clasps will have grown strong; when her steps shall falter, theirs shall tread firmly; when she can no longer guide the erring and support the helpless, they who have grown wise beneath her teaching, and strong beneath her nurture, shall hear her up amid the sorrows of life's closing hours and lead her gently to her rest in peace.

O, mother, thank God for a home, and remember though it may not have beauty, it need not be void of blessing. That which makes home holy makes home happy; and though the not be humble and the roof, be low: though there be in it no pomp nor splendor, though it may not echo with the witchery of music or shine with the adornments of art, yet if there he tender love and unfailing kindness, and faith and zeal and fellowship with God, then shall the home, bullowed by such influences, and crowned with the divine blessing, be sacred in the sight of God and angels, and ever sacred in the memory of those who there abide. The years шау come and go, the little feet may walk their weary paths on distant shores, but however scattered abroad, whether tossed upon the waters or wandering upon the land, the sweet influences of home shall never be forgotten; and there shall come from day to day to the heart of your boy or your girl the recollections of a mother's love, the memories of the twilight hour of prayer, the remembrances of sacred communion with God, and the solemn utterances of his Word repeated by maternal lips; and these shall weave around their wayward hearts bonds that earth can never break, and shall link them in all their wanderings to mother and home, and through these, draw them gently toward that home where sorrows shall not enter and whence joys shall not depart.-The Christian.

FROM PALESTINE.

NUMBER XXXII.

From Jerusalem to Nablus.

(From the "Obristian Standard" by special Arrangement.)

TROM Samaria we continued our course to the north-west, until we came to the ruins of Cassarea. Not a human being inhabits this city, once the political capital of Judea, and the chief commercial point on the Syrian coast. Built by Herod the Great, thirteen years before the birth of desus, it was firmly destroyed in the year 1265.

Its walls are still traceable, and in some places they stand 20 or 30 feet high. They englose about 4:0 acres of ground. The rains of an old church, with parts of the wall retaining ! south-eastern part of the city, and on a ledge is to be and to do good.

of rock extending 250 yards into the sea, are the roins of an old ruadel, once an apparently imgregnable stroughold. But all of these walls and buildings belong to the period of the crnsaders, during which the city was several times destroyed and rebuilt; and there is nothing left of the city known to Peter, Philip, Paul, Felix, Festus and Agrippa, except the granite columns which were taken from smid the ruins of the earlier city, and built crosswise into the more recent walls. Many of these are seen in the city wall; I counted seventy-five in the walls of the old citadel; and a still greater number of them lie, like rafts of saw logs, in the shallow water north of the citadel, where some similar structure stood, but has crumbled away, and let drop these imperishable columns. The disintegration of the sofe sandstone of the shore and of the walls of these citudels, has gradually filled up the harbor, which was made at great expense by Herod, and now no ship touches where once the commerce of this entire coast was centered. We rode into the city through its gateway, and finding a shaded recess in the wall not far from it, we spread there our noonday menl and took our usual rest. A monraful stillness pervioled the place, interrupted only by the arrival of some shepherds with a herd of small blick cutile, who came through the same gate and wat rid to-ristock at an ancient well of good water.

From Casarea we followed the sea coast to Mt Carmel. We passed several ruined cities not mentioned in the Scriptures, and completed by this ride, our survey of the plain of Sharon, We had now crossed the plain which begins at Mt. Carmel and extends southward to Gaza, four times; and had rid len along its coast for numy miles. We had seen almost every square mile of its surface.

Mt. Carmel rises from the sea as a promonotory about 500 feet high, with a narrow heach at its foot, around which the road passes close to the water. Thence it stretches away to the south-east about twelve miles. It rises to a hight of 1800 feet about eight inles from the shore, and then descends to 1600 feet at its further extremity. On its top near the sea is a Roman Catholic monastery, from which is obtained a magnificent view of the surrounding country. The bay of Acre hes under the northern slope of this part of the mountain, with the town of Kaiffa, on its southern shore and that of Acre, or Akka as it is now called, on the opposite side. Of these places I cannot speak particularly for want of space. After spending the Lord's day at Karffa, and attending the meeting of the German colony located there, we went to the spot at the southeast end of Mt. Carmel, where Elijah called down fire from heaven, and gave the death blow to Baal worship in Israel. The place is identified beyond reasonable doubt by its complete correspondence with the details of the Scripture narrative. We sat upon a bare rock under the shade of an oak tree, and studied the scenery before us. Mt. Gilboa, with the town of Jezreel, where Ahab and Jezebel resided at its foot, was in full view to the east, with a plain sixteen miles between us and it. Across this plain we could trace every step of the course along which Elijair ran before the chariot of Ahab, when the heavens were growing black with clouds, and the rain for which he had prayed was about to

We could also see Shunem and Nain; and the summit of Mt. Tabor towered conspiculously above some hills which hid its base from our view. The plane before us was the celebrated plain of Jezreel, as it is called in the Scriptures, and of Esdraelon, as it is now called. It has witnessed more battles than any other spot of equal space in the world. The river Kishon winds its crooked way through it, and we could trace its course by the line of verdure along its banks, made more conspicuous by its contrast with the yellow surface of the fields of grain just yielding to the sickle.

From Mt. Carmel we went to Migdol, where king Josiah was slain in battle; thence to Dothan, where Joseph was sold by his brethren; ilience to Jezreel, the summer residence of Ahab and Jezebel; thence along the toot of Mt. Gilboa, where Gideon routed the Midianites. and where Sant and Jonathan were slain; and theuce to Bethshean, now called Beisan, on whose walls the dead bodies of Saul and his sons were gibbetted by the Philistines after the battle. Here the present letter must close.

MANY young people fall into error from the idea that it is smart to be fast or wicked. They should be taught from childhood, "line upon time and precept upon precept," that the smartest thing in the world, that which requires the almost their original hight, are seen in the greatest effort and the most heroic self-sacrifice.

Many could not find seats, yet all were very quiet. On the 15th, I commence a meeting in Whitley Co. Remember us in your prayers, for our labors are arduous.

From Washington, Iowa,

Dear Beethren:-

UR communion meeting, held at brother H. Etter's, is now past. We had a feast for the soul. Although there were only a few to labor in the ministry, the word was preached with power. Brother John Fritz was the only strange speaker present. One soul was added by baptism. I never saw better order. May God bless the word spoken that it may bring forth much fruit in honor to his name.

Mission Work in Southern Iowa,

Dear Brethren:-

100UT seven years ago the Southern district A of Iowa inaugurated a plan of Mission work. A few of the churches took hold and did their duty, but the work met with much opposition, and at the next District Meeting was entirely overthrown. At our last District Meeting the work was again set on foot with a few changes dictated by former experience.

I hope the members of the district will now take hold and aid the cause as it justly deserves Let us now throw away our little quibbles about idans and give it a fair trial, and then we may be enabled to see where we can improve in the future. Let each ask himself, What could Lafford to give to save a soul from death? and give accordingly, and then pray God to bless G. B. Replogue. our united efforts.

Dear Brethren:-

LLOW me to express my heart-felt grati $oldsymbol{A}$ -tude for the papers you have so kindly sent me. Brother Harader visited as last Angust and remained several days. Three were haptized. Our little church consists of nine members. We are in working condition, havmg two ministers and a deacon. There is some interest here, and we hold meetings every two weeks. Our church was first organized by brother George Barnhart last Winter.

Dear Brethren. -

WE have a very nice and suitable meeting-house limit about two will seat seven hundred people, and is situated four unles north-west of London. The church here was quite weak in number previous to the feast, which came off on the 24th of October, there being only fourteen members, but during n series of meetings held by brother Oliver Yount of Minmi Co., before and after the feast, seventeen persons were added by haptism, and three were re-instated, making in all an addition of twenty members. Brother Yount be bored difigently and successfully in these meetings proclamming the Gospel truths with clearness and fearfulness. In vindicating the doctrines of the Brethren a favorable impression has been made on the people of this community. and we believe that still more good from these meetings will yet be realized. Others have expressed themselves well satisfied with brother Yount's "reasons why we do these things" and we verify beheve are "admost pershaded."

A mumber of beethren from a distance, prinopacly from Donnells Creek, Clinich, attended our Love teast. Several ministers were present but brother Fitzgeradd of Darke county, did the preaching in the alternoon. He spoke with power and earnestness. On the evening of the 20th, the sacred ordinances commemorating the suffering and death of our dear Redeemer. were solemnly, but cheerfully obeyed. The house was comfortably filled some being urable to gain admittance at all.

Dear Brethren:-

W E have just passed through a glorious season. About the middle of October brother Edmond Forney came to us and zealously held forth the Bread of Life until the 25th, when brother John Wise also came and preached for us and left many lasting impressions. On the 28th was our District Meeting which passed off so very pleasantly. The busmess was all transacted in love and harmony, which has left a very deep and lasting impression on our vicinity. Many old brethren present thought it one of the best meetings of the kind they ever attended. Not one unguarded word was spoken nor an nnkind look given, but all was peace and union. Then brother M. M. E-bleman remained with us and preached the word with great power which resulted in the conversion of five precious souls, and among the number was our own dear brother Otis. By this time brother Eshelman's health began to decline, but he labored on until the 6th. when brother D. B. Gibson came to our assistance. Then came the sad time of taking the parting hand with brother E-helman, for he rendered good service and his stay was so pleasant. May God bless him. Then our beloved brother Gibson zealously labored with us until the 10th, which resulted in the conversion of four more dear souls, (nine in all), among this number our "baby" brother Frank. We must confess that we have been greatly blessed and that the Lord has been with us and strengthened us in the good cause, and that we have enjoyed one of the most pleasant seasons that we ever had. Although we have had one or two meetings every day for about three weeks, we feel both to close as it seems many more are almost persuaded to become Christians. Our meetings closed last evening with many good impressions, but now we are called to part with our dear brother Gibson. May we all one day meet to part no more. One of the most endearing times of our joyful season occurred last Sanday, when all the little children of our viemity contributed to the Danish Fund. God bless them, "for of such is the Kingdom of IME churches of the brethren are celebrating the occasion with meetings for thanksgiving which are being well patronized, not only by our members but by many others outside terest. This is as it should be. Surely it is little enough that one day in a year should be set apart for a juddic manifestation of gratitude. to our merciful and benevolent Pather. List Saturday while our congregation assembled for this purpose, and, as I am informed, had a good meeting, I being called to attend to some important business with the church in Montgone ery comply with which I have been belowing as provisional older. Church torsmess buying been attended to in the foremon, the Harvest Meeting came off at 4 r. v. The attendance was very good, the frequent showers of rain notwithstanding. After preaching a young girl of less than lifteen summers came foculard. conducted by her mother, who was weeping for pay, and asked to be received into the divine taunly.

The particular business of the meeling was to restore the former Eider to his charge, he having been suspended in consequence of the extreme agitation of the beardquestion, who h tech convalsed our district for some fweevens or more, which was brought to an issue at our late A. M., as you and many of your readers will remember, calling forth the necessity of the appointment of a committee of five brethren. Before leaving the place of meeting, how-The fareweil aldresses, on the morning of ever, the more conservative and printent from was finally acceded to by all present, and so the matter was adjusted so far as those present was concerned, and the committee was relieved of the duty assigned them. But of course it was necessary that the church involved should be consulted and accept the conditions before it could be effectual. This was done at the meeting above named, the articles of compromise were read and explained, the vote was then privately taken and resulted in a unanimous vote for the restoration of the suspended. Elder, and he was again installed into his office and received in the regular way.

I then gladly resigned my charge as provisional elder with an invocation for a blessing upon the elder and the church, and judging from the cheerful countenances of all, and the expressions of some, and the fraternal feeling that seemed to pervade the whole congregation. I concluded that all present was glad that it was now disposed of, and which makes me indulge the hope that all who have taken an active part in this useless agitation will learn wisdom by experience, and that questions engendering strife and heart burnings will no more disturb the peace of our Brotherhood unless there is a cause, for surely there was an cause for this trouble because if it had been left on the basis of the present compromise there would never have been one word said about it and ever since it has been a question, at any time it could have been settled upon the same terms and no one hurt. How much better if we would use our energies in improving our talents and employ them in trying to recover lost and ruined sinners, and promoting the glory of God.

On my arrival home from the above named meeting I found a letter from Rockbridge Co., some forty-five miles distant, informing me that there were six persons in that vicinity that wished to unite with our church, and that the time was set for their baptism, and that there was a desire by all classes, including a Methodist minister, to have an exhaustive sermon on the peculiarities of our church, especially on trine immersion, and desired me to be there. The doctrine of our church has only quite lately been introduced in that vicinity, a tew brethren moving in and a minister visiting them and preaching occasionally. The work, we may suppose, is of the Lord and I hope we may have a good report from that field of labor, B. F. Moonaw.

From Fairview Church, Ohio,

THIS church was erected and recently completed by the brethren of the Wyamlott congregation, Wyandott Co., Ohio. On the 5th mst, the writer arrived to assist the brethren in holding a series of meetings at the above named place. The church was dedicated by brother L. H. Dickey of Fostoria, Ohio on the 2nd inst, who, with brother Gideon Bollinger, continued the meetings until our arrival on the 5th. We remained until the 10th, when we returned home leaving brethren Dickey and A Brillhart in the field to continue for a lew days. The meetings were of growing interest and we hope ere the inceting closes many may he added to the Church of Christ. The brethren and friends here have erected a fine house 30x40, a good, substantial brick structure, and have it neatly finished and in good order. Their membership is not very large yet, numbering with whom these meetings are growing in in- about fifty members under the numsterial care of brother Isaac Ankeny. They now, by concentrating their efforts to one place (the church) af regular intervals, hope to increase faster in numbers, and as all good Christians do, advance more and more in jointy and holiness.— They desire aid from the traveling intrusters and request that they, when passing through, store off and labor for them. Please address brother Look Herstand at Seal, Wyandett Co., Oluc, who says he keeps a "Preacher's Hotel" and will, at any time, convey you from Nevada, Ω , to place of meeting.

On returning home, we found that two of the Swihart brothers of Bourbon, Indiana, were in this vicinity, visiting their relatives and presched for our brethren at the old church (Eagle Creek) over Lord's day. This evening, (Monday) we went over and had the good please are of listening to an able discourse by brother J. H. Swihart. Were highly enterfained by he sermon and pleased with their visit and would say, dear soldiers of the cross, please ome again. Yours in the faith of Jesus. S. T. Busserman.

Dear Brethren:-

DEING requested by many to write to them when we got home from our journey West,

I thought I would do it through the press, hy which means I could write to all at once.

We arrived homeon the 8th of October, and found the family all well. My companion was quite sick for over a week before we got home, and has been under the Dr.'s care nearly ever since. She was confined to her room for about four weeks and the greater part of the time was not able to be up. She has now so far recovered as to be up a good part of the time, and I fondly hope, by proper care, she may soon be restored to her usual health.

We spent about two weeks in Gage county, Nebraska, found the brethren generally well, and earnestly contending for the faith. Five years ago when I was there, there were only four members in what is now the Beatrice church, without a minister, now there are about one hundred members and ten ministers. We attended six meeting while there, including one council meeting. We attended three Lovefeasts in Iowa, one at Iowa Center, one at Dallas Center, and one near Marshalltown. Also spent some time with the brethren in Powesheik county, and had four meetings. The meetings were quite largely attended, and good order and attention. Two were added to the church at Dallas Center, and three at Marshall-

We enjoyed our visit very well, met many old acquaintances and formed a great many new ones, which I trust will not soon be forgotten. If, through the providence of God, we should never be permitted to meet again in this world, may we be so unspeakably happy as to meet beyond the river of death where separations will be no more. D. E. PRICE.

To Elder Isaac Price, of Schuylkill, Pa.

Dearly beloved brother:

TOUR letter was received, read and re-read with much pleasure. It brought words of comfort and much encouragement.

Dear brother, I rejoice to learn that you, in the extreme East of the Vineyard, feel so much interest in the welfare of the Church here in the far West. I wish you could be with us. We need your presence, your preaching, your words of advice, but since the frosts of seventy five Winters have whitened your locks, we cannot expect you to make so long a journey, so I will try to tell you about the welfare of Zion here on the phins of Nebraska.

I, with others, often read the calls for ministers on the frontier, but seldom heard of them being answered, and finally I was moved upon to try to answer one of these calls. We moved from Carroll Co, Illinois, came to this place on the 3rd of last May, and located here where there were several families of members already hving. We settled in a good and pretty country and began to hold meeting in the schoolhouses. Our meetings are well attended by a very quiet, orderly and intelligent people, and apparently the labor bestowed upon them is not altogether in vain. Three have been baptized since we are here and several moved in so that we now number twenty-five souls, and with Samuel of old, we say, "Illitherto hath the Lord helped us," and in him we trust for the tuture. About one week ago a man came to our place on foot, upwards of forty miles, having heard of the Brethren, who baptize by trine immersum and keep the ordinances of the Lord's. house as he had read in Scripture and in ancient history. After asking some questions be desired baptism. He is a Swede by birth or nationality. On last Sunday he was baptized and then went on his way rejoicing.

I have lately visited several adjoining churchs, a distance of sixty or seventy miles. I found them enruestly contending for the faith. We live among very quiet and orderly people. I have not heard of a drankard since we live in the S a e, and many other vices by which the E st ern people are burdened we here know nothing about. The country is new and we are deprived of some things. The truit we miss very much as most trees are too young to bear, but all trees grow very luxuriantly here, and in a lew years we expect to epjoy fruit too. All things considered, I believe we are as happy here as we would be anywhere, and yet have no reasons to regret the move we made. We know that to reign with our Master we must disc suffer with him, Joheving he will sustain as in our trials. We still teel to put our trust a him, and try to watch and pray until our abor on earth closes, when we hope to meet our Master and many with whom we labored together here in this world in the same cause, in that height world above where there is no sin. I hope and pray you with us, and all tood's tailtil children, may ever alide under his idessing. We send greetings to you laid tamdy and all that love the Lord Josas Christ, Can you let us hear from you a, an?

PROGRESSIVE RELIGION AND PROGRESSIVE CHRISTIANS.

BY J. S. MOHLER,

PROGRESSIVE religion is the CAUSE, and progressive Christians the RESULT of ohedience to the doctrine of Christ. There can not be a progressive religion without a corresponding progressive Christianity. They are inseparable.

Progression means to go on to perfection in anything we undertake to do. The pupil progresses in literary attainments to the ripe scholar, the mechanic progresses in his trade till he masters it, the traveler progresses in his journey till be arrives at his destination. Progression means excellency; retrogression means disgrace. The Christian progresses in Christian warfare and Christian perfection until Ood calls him bence. The "progressive Christian" is the outgrowth of progressive religion. Progressive religion means the principles of the religion of Christ lived out more faithfully every day. We do not mean that we can improve upon the moral precepts of the Gospel, but we can improve ourseless by living more religiously as we are passing down the stream of Life. By progressing in the religion of Christ, we progress as Christians. There can be no other result, hence the plirase, "Progressire Christian" is eminently proper as applied to the faithful follower of Christ, who is constantly striving to press forward towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; is aiming to arrive at Christma perfection by adding to his faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly-kindness, charity, and to ABOUND in these virtues. The phrase, "Progressive Christian" has been misapplied. Sometimes, instead of saying "The progressive Christian," we ought to say the "anruly professor." For this class the church has little use, but we hope that all who have named the name of Christ will strive to be progressive in the Christian graces and virtues, and never become weary in well doing nor lay their armor down till the victory is won and eternal life is

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 2d. Baptist churches possess the Bible characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.

D. B. RAY, Affirms.

J. W. Stein, Denies.

J. W. STEIN'S THIRD SEGATIVE.

IIY friend is evidently conscious of bad work M in his "negative line" as he persists in misrepresenting the Brethren. I will first nolice his questions. 1. I believe that every one begotten of God has spiritual life in embryo. 2 That one hegotten may become abortive and never attain to true hirth and heirship. 3. "How long" one may remain in such a state is best known to God. 4. One begotten, who neglects the divine commands and hence becomes abortire by "making shipwreck of faith," has no promise of salvation in death that I can find. (Matt. 7: 21-22). 5. "Born of water is figurafive and does not indicate that "water is the real mother" of any one. 6. There is our plan of salvation. Christ "locame the anthor of etcenot saturation to all them that obey him." (Heb. 5: 9) 7. I think the thief was saved, but had be refused the requirements of Matt. 28: 19, Mark [6] 16, and Acts 2; 38, as many do who make a talse use of his example, he would have tallen under the curse of John 3: 30. "He (aprilhon) disabiliting the Son, shall not see life," &c., Grymetar (Lifohn 4: 7), is rendered by Drs. Campbell, McNight, and Doddridge, and by the Emphatic Diagnott "has been logatten" "Every One who loves God has been begotten by trod and knows God." Just as the low and knowlelge of a government qualifies one, who has been a rebel, for induction into citizen-hip and pardon, or the knowledge and love of the bride groom is lagalten in a woman before the ordihance of marriage introduces her into the wifely relation privileges and heirship, so a know! tily and love at God prepares for baptism and [ pardon. But to know and love a government as its citizen, or a man as one's own husband, or God as our Futher by adoption, follows the legitimate processes of induction into these several states. True, "the terms hegotten and horn are translations from the same original word." But that word "gennuo" is umbiquous and its meaning is to be determined by the connection, e. g. "Abraham begut (vycunese) Isaac," Matt. 1:2; and "Moses was born (egennethe)," Acts 7: 12, represent very different events. Mr. It's demunciation of the intermediate states between begetting and birth, death and resurrection, &c., "silly stulf," by no means makes them so, Christ's literal havial in the tomb to which Baptists appeal as a figure of Taptism had no reference to his spiritual life. It fullowed his literal death, not his literal resurrection. But Baptists destroy the whole design of burial by burying a man after he professes to be really resurrected. I ask Mr. R. again to tell us plainly if he believes it right to hary a line man after he has been resurrected? He thinks that baptism "unto (cis, into) repentance" (Matt. 3: 11). only declared repentance. It no doubt did declare their metermeleian, a word translated by repentance. (see its use in 2 Cor. 7; 8), but it did not declare their "metaninian." Matt. 3: 11. They were baptized (cis) into metanoian, and Mr. R. admits metumoia was into life, (see the use of both these words in 2 Cor. 7: 8-9.) Did the sorrow "to (eis, inta) repentance" (metamian) 2 Cor. 7: 9), only declare repentance? Does repentance into life only declare life? The repentance vis. zoen, into life." (Acts 11: 18) was metanoia, and John haptized into this. The fruits which John required were qualifications for induction into this metrinoan, which involved practical reformation.

The Baptists do not baptize as John did into repentance. They believe that "for the remission of sins," Matt. 26: 28, means to procure the remission of sins," but teach that the very identical language in Acts 2:48 means simply to declare remission, &c. Who can depend upon such interpreters of God's word?

Mr. R.s 5th Arg, is based upon the priority of discipleship to haptism. He first assumes that all disciples of Christ are children of God, and concludes that since they must be disciples before baptism that they are therefore God's children. His premise is a failure. All of God's children are disciples, but all of Christ's disciples are not God's children. A disciple is simply a scholar, a learner. Judas Iscarnot was a disciple of Christ. Luke 5: 13, Matt. 10: 2, and yet "a thief" and "a devil." John 6: 70; 12: 6. Was he a child of God? Was not Simon Magus a disciple? Was he a clubb of God? Acts S: and see a description of the character of God's children, Matt. 5: 44, 45; Luke 6: 35;

True, that death to sm should precede haptism, but when Paul says, "He that is dead is freed from sin" (Rom. 6; 7), he expressly alludes to haptized believers who after dying to sin had been haptized into Christ's death where his blood flows "for the remission of sin." Mark how he limits the application: "so morny of as as were haptized into Jesus Christ, were hoptized into his death," &c. Rom. 6: 3-4.

In noticing Mr. It's 7th Arg , we know that spiritual larth is not of, i.e., is not the offspring of the human will, nevertheless, it does not or our without man's will. He is the willing subject of God's grace. In John 1: 11, 13, vgcnmthesan is correctly rendered by some translators "were begotten," see Emphatic Diaglott. Such as received Christ, believed in him, and had been begetten, were given the "anthority to become (genesthar) children of God." And it children they were also herrs. Rom. 8: 17 Yet Mr. R. degmatically denounces there as "blind who cannot see the unscriptural inconsistemy. sons," but is the consequence of sonship. Lask their rules of procedure's their provision for ap. Scholing the riena

Mr. R.-1. If Christ's blood was not shed in his death?" 2. Are believers not baptized into Christ's death." "Yes or no?" He is of the opinion that the redeemed who are not members of the Baptist church will be happy guests at the marriage of the Lamb. We would like to have his Bible authority for this. 1. Will they ever become part of the Bride? Please answer? What relation will the old Petrobrussians (whom Mr. R. claims as brethren, Baptist Succession, pp. 111, 133, 448; whom he endorses as "the ancient Waldenses," Idem. 4, 366, and hence as "the church of Christ," who baptized in order to the remission of sins, Faber's Enquiry into History and Theology of the Aucient Vallences and Albigences, pp. 169, 181,) sustains to the Baptist church in glory? Please answer. I have shown that the Bantist clouches lack the evidence of true regeneration, and hence all Mr. It's theorizing Poses its application to his proposition. I have nothing to re-Tract when I say Baptists "do such things" as "hotred, variance, wroth and strife," whenever they engage in carnal warfare. This truth is no doubt very grave to my triend, nevertheless, it will abide "against the day of judgment" and perdition of angodly men."

Paul says, "They that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." How then can they be churches of Christ? Lask Mr. R. plainly, if Baptists can engage in war on any account without encouraging, developing, and doing those lasts of the flesh, viz., "hatred, variance, wrath, strife?" Do answer "yes or no."

"The powers that be," to which we are to "be subject," are such civil authorities as Gigl approves; and the "sword" for the punishment of evil doers is the sword of civil justice in the hands of civil officers. We do not forbid the civil police to execute their office any more than John did the soldiers; but we understand that this belongs to worldly governments, all of which more or less violate the gospel, and are to be judged at last by Christ and his chosen. These things are not for true christians whose lives and characters are purer than any civil government requires. I ask my friend plainly if "the powers that be" include all political and civil authorities? and if to "be subject to" them requires christians to do everything they may ask? Please answer. When christians were brought before kings and rulers (Luke 13: 11), and commanded to disobey; Christ, and stall persisted in their course as did Peter and John (Acts 4; 18, 29; 5; 40-42), did they violate the injunction to "be subject to the powers that he?" Are not nations as truly under obligation to obey Christ as individuals? Will not national sins be as surely jourished as undividual sins? Will the Judge of all the earth acquit as somer for helping our country to sm than for sinning ourselves? Will Mr. B. answer the following plain questions? If he tails, readers will certainly mark the failure.

1. Ho Baptists accept Cornelius, the proof centurian, as a christian when God first dieard his prayer and answered him by vision? 2. Was the habitual conduct of Abraham, and the old Bible worthies generally, a suitable pattern for christians, in all things? 3. Have not all the wars in which Bajdists, have engaged unbridled carnal lusts and passions r 4. Were their spirif and passions not rapacious, cruel, fieldish? 5. Were they not the legitimate offspring of avarice, ambition, envy, anger and pride? 6. Were their motions, conduct, and consequences Christ-like? 7. Had all those connected with them, who professed to be christians, followed the example of Christ and his apostles, would there likely have been any such wars? Were they not all instances of haroarism? 9. Were they authorized by a single chapter. or verse in the christian Scriptures? which? of his idea that God's children have XEL to 16-4 10. plying the law? their investigation of charges and administration of justice? 12. Did they appeal to an imparlial umpire, or decide their quarrels as mobs and outlaws generally do? 13. Did they not multiply losses, wrongs and grievances, rather than recover and redress them? Did they not impose their heaviest burdens upon the poor, more innocent, and hard-working classes, wasting their property, destroying their confidence, corrupting their morals, and making sad havoc of their lives? 15. Were all the Baptists right who fought and prayed against each other on both sides of those contests? 16. Are Baptist churches free from the wrongs which they freely justify and fellowship and apologize for in their members? 17. What relation will the Novatians and ameient Waldenses and Albigenses who would not bear arms on any account, sustain to the Baptist church in glory?

My 6th Neg. Arg. is based upon the pretension of the churches represented by my friend twan unbroken, personal, neganic, succession from Christ and the apostles to the present trac, through a people just like themselves, Will Mr. It deny this? I now call upon him to mention one denomination for the first fifteen hundred years of the gospel dispensation just like the Baptist church. They suspend their church claims upon this issue-a fulse pretention. How can they be churches of Christ? If Mr. R. fails to point out such a people, his church claims will prove a hopeless failure.

An aged minister said to a young brother Speak short. The brethren will tell you if you don't speak long enough." The counset is good; good for speakers and good for hearers; good for writers and good for readers. Length without breadth and thickness is a very poor recommendation in a sermon, a prayer, or a newspaper article. The power of condensation, abridgement, and elimination of useless matter is greatly to be coveted. When a man has five minutes in which to speak, he will usually consume one of them in telling the people what he is going to say, or in informing them that he has "been thinking" of something which he proposes to relate. If men who have sometiming to say would say it, if those who have had thoughts would speak them, and those who had something to write would write it, omitting prefaces, introductions, and useless and unmeaning remarks, much time and space we dd be saved with no loss to any one.—The Chers-

LARGE LIBRARIES

D Y far the largest library in the world is the D National Library at Paris, which in 1874 contained 2,000,000, printed looks and 150,-000 manuscripts. Which is the next largest it is difficult to say, for the British Museum and the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg both had in 1874 1,100,000 volumes. The Vatican Library at Rome is sometimes erroneously supposed to be among the largest, while in point of tast it is surpassed, so far the number of volumes it was, by more than sixty Europeans, collections. 1: contains 150 000 printed books, 25,000 manuscripts. The National Labracy at Paris is the of the very oldest in Europe, having been to anded in 1350 while the British Museum dates from 1753, or a time more than 400 years later. In the United States the largest is the Interry of Congress at Washington, which in 1874, ontained 261,000 volumes. The Astor and Mercantile, of New York, are next, each having 148,000. Among the colleges at Harvard's Library comes Yule's with 100,000. Dartmouth's is next with 60,000, and then come in order (Carnell with 19900), the University of Virginia with above. TRIALS ARE BLESSINGS.

F adverse winds arise and blow Around our floating bark, May we not then begin to know That light succeeds the dark? And tho' the drend, tempestnous waves Do waft us to the strand, May we not know that God is there, To hold us in his hand?

May we not think and feel and know. 'That if we rise or fall, The soul can never backward go, It both its purpose all; And the thunder-crash may come And for a time o'erwhelm, Tis only working up the sum, For God is at the helm!

If lightnings flash and storms arise, And guests unwelcome come, Let us keep traveling toward the skies, Move on and give them room; And the the mildew casts its pall O'er all the golden grain, Be not dismayed at it at all, But nobly try again.

Trials are jewels to the soul, And never come in vain-They shine around that final goal, Where pleasures banish pain: Then if they come, should we repine. And dread them us a foe? O, if we ask the Great Divine, The answer will be no!

The stalwart oak that often bends Will surely live the longer, Tis only help that nature lends, To make its roots grow stronger. And so with discipline to us-No part of it is vini-And therefore let us fulter not, But rise and try again.

We will! Ab, yes! We're going on Like true and earnest men. Our earthly work is not yet done, But will be, if we can. Our sails are spread, we're outward bound On life's great trial trip, And if we're wrecked we may be found Still clinging to the ship!

THE SECOND RESURRECTION.

BY JOHN TORNEY,

"But the rest of the dead fived not again until the thiorsand years were finished." Hex. 20:

N the second and last resurrection all the prison houses of the dead will he opened, and the rest of the dead all have to come forth, whether, buried, in the earth or in the sea, whether in death or in hell. Jude even tells of some, he colls them angels that are in reserve in chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day; they will also be of this great number that John saw stand before God.

That this second or last resurrection will not take place until a thousand years after the coming of Christ is a trittle revealed by the Billie equally as elem as the first. Look at the text at the head of this essay. But the rest of the dead Feed and again until the thou san't cars were finished." Bur John did a a say of the cas he did of those that have part in the first resurrection, 2 to them the great procise. But John Franch Williams Callinated Committee even

It seems that this little season of Satan's loosing, when the thousand years are fulfilled will be a trying time; for those nations that shall now live again when the thousand years are finished. not again until the thousand years were finished." The word of inspiration here plainly implies that they now shall live again, and Satan at the same time is loosed, and now is among them to deceive, How much he will accomplish in this his last effort, we cannot say. According to John's record he will make a bold effort on these nations to deceive them, so that a great number will fall in line of battle with him. "And they went upon the breadth of the earth and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city." It looks to me as if Satan, in this his last assault to deceive the nations, to have them believe by their assistance he could yet overcome Christ, and the inheritance shall be theirs, and we would possess the kingdom and the heir of the world, instead of Christ the Son of God; for this he worked his deceitful plans since the creation of man, and will so continue till his final overthrow which will be the result of his labors of this little season of tempting and deceiving the nations; for we are told in the tenth verse, "And the devil that deceived them was east into the lake of fire and brimstone where the beast and the false prophet are; and shall he tormented day and night forever and ever." Here is the end of Satan's work. Now all nations are ripe and ready to he arrayed before the great white throne, to be judged according to their works. "And the hooks were opened and another look was opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the hooks according to their works. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

Now, dear reader, you can see how important it is to live a true Christian life. For they that are Christ's shall be resurrected at his coming, while all the others are held in bondage of death a thousand years longer under a fearful waiting of judgment to come, while all this time the saints are in the greatest > njoyment of life and glory with their Lord and Master to enjoy the marriage feast of the Lamb of fat things a thousand years. Paul says, J. Cor. 71, 2, 3, "They shall judge the world, year and gels." Be ye therefore also ready for the first resurrection.

It will be realized when too late to return to tell the nutold story. My text says, "the rest of the dead lived | Then will mortal life appear to us a dream. We repeat the assertion, that unless we be earnestly and actively engaged in the great scheme of religion, we will realize it as but visionary. While on the other hand if we spend a life entirely devoted to God's service, (for he wants a living faith), we have the promise of an endless life, and it will afford us solid comfort when we die, the reality of mortal life.

> Have you ever thought of the momentous, and intensified meaning of the word die, also the opposite line, which is no less significant? Let us consider with a feeling of sobriety, the office each performs in its frequent uses. Die, we all know, signifies to cease to exist, to pass from the shores of time. When we examine the mighty frame-work of man, which death falls heir to, this house (as referred to by Paul the apostle) in which we live, how grand, how magnificent an edifice, how lofty and how majestically is it formed! Of all the different parts necessary to the construction of this stately mansion, is the tongue, also most wonderful. Solomon says, "in it is vested endless life and eternal death." It is that organ the accents of which vibrate through the serial region, dis tinet and clear to our memory, though it has long ago been laid silent in the tomb. Should we not therefore always strive to have our last words loving words, for they may be the last? Now to contem plate upon the inevitable fall of this structure, which will ultimately take place, and must through the process of death, he replaced the dust from whence it came, tends to excite our utmost sym pathy for those who paid the debt of na-

Having considered the body, the mortal part of man as being subject to death, we will next observe the spirit, the immortal part as relative to life. Life, is more lofty in its signification. It affords to us a world of intensified thought. The language is in its spiritual import indicative of a continued existence in a state of glorified bliss with God's obedient children, or in perpetual torment among him. Slowly the chest began to rise the spirits of the damned. In view of the vast import of these two great sule | heat faintly, the corpse was alive! THE SOUL OF MAN.

THE Church Advocate gives the fol. lowing interesting experiment: "It has long been an axiom of a certain class of visionary enthusiasts that that which we call soul is nothing more than a high. subtle developement of life. The mys. tical and proofless character of this proposition, or its opposite, has so far eluded the demonstration of the keenest analy. sis. With the aid of revelation, attend. ed by the most patient scientific investi. gation, candid men of all classes have voluntarily admitted the difficulties and mysteries which shroud the origin, char. acter, and destiny of the spirit. A late scientific experiment in the city of New York will go far toward settling this controversy by the literal demonstration of facts. A man had been caught by a circular saw in a planing mill, and one of the large arteries of his arm was severed, and from this wound he bled to death. This body was taken by Prof. Doremus, Drs. White and Chambers, and in the presence of a number of students from Bellevue and Roosevelt hospitals actually restored to life. Blood was taken from two living sheep, incisions were made near the heart, and tubes inserted through which the vital fluid passed, galvanic batteries were attached to nerves; a small pair of bellows was inserted in the month, and at a given signal each operator began to act the part assigned and fall, respiration began, the pulse pulse gradually grew stronger, the man equiped his eyes, and in a few days was able to go about the room, on the testimony of Dr. Bigelow, who witnessed the experiment. But the strangest part is yet to be told. When pressed to tellall, Dr. Bigelow said: "Well, the man eats and drinks; seems to be afraid of other people, or more curious than afraid, and is strangely affected by the heat or cold-But he can neither read nor write, does not know the use of bunks, plates, knives on feels. NOW TO OBTAIN REGENERATION AND SALVATION; AND HOW TO PRESERVE IT.

BY DANIEL LONGANECKER.

DEGENERATION is a change of the K understanding and of the will; a change of nature made in the soul by God's Word and Spirit. But some say, God regenerates first and then repentance and faith follow. But others say God works in man both the power to will and to do his good pleasure. He gives them grace to repent and believe the gospel. He gives them grace to hear, to see, to feel, to pass from death unto life, from Satan to God. He that does these by the power of God's Spirit is a new creature, is born again, is a child of Godregenerated, born of God. Now we may call all this the power of godliness in the soul. Now as every kernel must have a shell, so the power of godliness in the soul must have an outward form of god liness which may be called one baptism,a cavenant made with God, the Father who draws the sinner and of the Holy Ghost who guides the child of God into all truth. Now he is in the kingdom, born of water and the spirit.

Now to preserve his salvation he must keep Christ's commands and not walk after the flesh, but after the spirit. Now. to say that the sinner must keep all the commands and ordinances of the gospel before he can obtain salvation or pardon or pass from death unto life or be born a child of God, is a great mistake. Sinners unconverted are dead and cannot do the will of God. He cannot see, hear nor feel; neither can he make himself alive, but God by his grace and convict ing spirit draws the sinner by showing him his danger, gives him grace to repent and sends him in faith to Christ for rest, pardon, life and salvation. Being made alive he can and will do the will of God to preserve his salvation. This will show that we are not saved by our own good works or morality, but by faith in Christ as a Prophet to teach us what to do and what not to do; as a Priest to make satisfaction to an offend ed God for our sins; and as a King to reign over and protect us until the end of the world.

But no one thinks that our repentance. faith and conversion will give us a pass port into the triumphant kingdom if we refuse to observe all things whatsoever Christ has commanded, if we knowingly and willingly offend and repent not, we are guilty of the whole law. There is a present rest and a future rest, so a present salvation and a future salvation, Let us have both.

STARS.

BY MARY LOUISE HOPWOODS

N clear and cloudless nights when the stars of heaven are all marshaled in bright array, as we look with admiration upon them, the mind is led to compare with them the earth stars, which, since the early dawn of time have shown forth with such brilliancy. As those of lieaven were not all of equal lustre, so those of earth vary; some emitting rays of dazzling splendor, while others are but feeble, their rays apparently almost ale surbed by the dazzling meteors by which they are surrounded. Of those which graced the moral firmament anterior to the deluge, our record points to but two. which attained to the final degree of magnitude. The first post-diluvian star. whose peculiar brightness has been adlike a fair gem. There followed in its filling them up with vain repetitions, der the barner of King Emanuel must took its life, without prayer, wake many beautiful to look upon, but none so fair as the star of faith, until there arose that one which guided by God's own hand, brightened the pathway through the wilderness for his chosen. So radiantly beautiful it was, that when its mission was accomplished, the hand of man might not find for it a resting place, but that of the most High, by Nebo's lonely mountain, laid it to rest, and he by whose command earth's great huminary stood still, walked in the footsteps of the great Law-giver of Israel.

After the Mosaic dispensation came the kingly. 'Twas then the star of wisdom and knowledge arose, of which it was said, "There was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any be like unto thee." Then too like unto the sweet singer of Israel broke forth in strains of heavenly music, which even to-day thirsts the soul of the believer with transports of joy. Others too there were, among them the sublime synonym of patience of which the world has never known a parallel. But fairest and most beautiful of all, far surpassing in radiant splendor, all of its predecessors came the Promised One; the sceptre had not yet passed from the hands of Judah, when Bethlehem's star appeared, dispersing with its effulgent beams of heavy clouds which overshadowed the firmament, its mission to enlighten the sindarkened minds of all who would behold its brightness and acknowledge its power. Having accomplished that whereunto it was sent. It returned again to its home beyond earth's confines, leaving a light brighter than the noon day sun to guide its followers. Its influence was rapidly penetrating the dark abodes of men, but they, loving darkness rather than light persistently refused to it admittance. Ere long, forms of heathen and idolatrous worship concealed from view the pure light. The candle-stick seemed forever removed. Many groped in terror through thick gloom and pagan darkness, trampling beneath their feet the priceless boon of eternal happiness. Ages rolled away, and darkness yet prevailed. But the word of the Infinite had gone forth that all nations should know and feel its power; and his Word shall not return to him void. The bright est star of the sixteenth century arose and came forth at his bidding. Man may not estimate the results which now, and ages hence will be felt as having sprung from the seeds of Reformation sown in dark

While time endures its fairest records will bear them in grateful remembrance. It has been said that the sixteenth cen tury was the epoch of a great separation, and the nineteenth must be that of a great union. In his own good time the end will be crowned. Slowly, but surely the ages are rounding towards the grand results foreshadowed in the morning of time. Never in any age of the world's history has the light shone so brightly as now. A heavier weight of responsibility rests upon this generation than has been known to a former. Pun gent indeed will be the arrows of re morse which will enter the souls of those who fail to improve the brightness of the light which God has given them. Stars in our crowns of rejoicing should be many and brilliant. God speed the light.

LONG OR SHORT PRAYERS, WHICH?

BY B. R. MOON,

This is forbidden in Matt. 6: 7. It tends let their light shine, in order to let world. to destroy the life of a meeting. The people get weary and uneasy, and are be led to honor and glorify God. We then in a poor condition to receive benefit from the word spoken. Many a good brother in his zeal has unthoughtedly hindered the good cause in this way. We belief, that they in their turn may behave the example of Christ in favor of come the "light of the world." short prayer in public. Behold him at the tomb of Lazarus when he was about remitting labor. He has never promisto call him forth who had been dead four days; he prays as follows: "Father I thank thee that thou hast heard me and I know that thou hearest me always, but because of the people which stand by I said it that they may believe that thou hast sent me." John 11:41, 42. We may infer from the language used in this prayer that he had previously went to his Father about this matter. and most likely in secret. Jesus says "But thou when thou prayest enter into thy closet." Matt. 6: 6. There is the place for our long prayers; there we may pour out our very soul to our heavenly | Father; there we may agonize and wrestle mightly with God, and the promise is we shall be rewarded openly. Again, at the garden of Gethseman when his soul was "exceeding sorrowful even unto death," his prayer was short. but his agony was so great that he continned to repeat it unto the third time when he found relief. He has also given us an example in what is known as the Lord's prayer, he says in Matt. 6: 7. "After this manner therefore, pray ye." Then follows that perfect prayer that he taught his disciples; it is short and complete. The longest prayer that he ever uttered that has been recorded is found in John 17. It is not likely he occupied more than seven minutes, in delivering it.

BEAR THY BURDENS.

DEAR the burdens of the present. D Let the future bear its own; If the morning sky be pleasant, Why the coming night bemoan?

If the uncovered heavens lower, Wrap thy cloak around thy form. And though the tempest rise in power, God is mightier than the storm.

Steadfast faith and hope unshaken, Animate the trusting breast; Step by step the journey's taken, Nearer to the land of rest.

All unseen the Savier walketh By the toiling servant's side; Comfortable words he talketh, While his hands uphold and guide.

Grief, nor pain, nor any sorrow, Rends thy heart, to bim unknown, He to-day, and he to-morrow. Strength sufficient gives his own.

Hely strivings herve and strengthen, Long endurance was the erown; When the evening shadows lengthen, Thou shaft lay thy burden down.

WHO ARE THE MISSIONARIES

EY TENSIESE MSTINE.

THE gospel is missionary in its very nature. The command to every child of God is, "Go," Go out into the highways and dark places of the earth and bring guests to the gospel feast; and it is not enough that we go sometime when it is most convenient for us to go, but we must go out quickly. "Go and preach the gospel to every creature.' Is there a soul who has not felt the full force and mentang of this command that is not ready to obey (Nor to the preach er alone is it given to convert the world, THOSE who indulge in long prayers but all are servants and missionaries of are liable to fall into the habit of the Lord. Those who have enlisted nures of the soul cannot preserve the Lord.

ly persons see it, that by this they may must not put our light under a bushel, but be guided by him that we may lead others out of the obscurity of sin and un-

Christ demands constant, zealous uned ease and wealth; he invites us to no gayly bannered bark floating on still waters 'mid fragrant flowers and a cloudless sky; but our bark is to meet adverge gales and brenking waves. The star of Bethlebem is our only guide 'mid the wave washed rocks that lie on either side. "Go!" is the nrgent, ceaseless missionary spirit of the Gospel. There is no middle ground. Each soul is fighting for God or against him. In order to be true missionaries we need not have the elequence of this or that great man, but we must have the zeal of Paul. Onr words can be of the simplest kind if we only speak them with the intention of doing good, and in such a way that they may have the desired effect. Various influences may bring people into church relation; but we have the problem yet to solve how each one can be made to comprehend and appreciate the mission to which he is called. Christ says, "men must work out their own salvation with fear and trembling," and while we are thus engaged, we must make our faith a working principle; reaching out loving arms to gather in the erring; and while we are doing this, we are build ing up the cause of our Master. Ob, may we all be thus busily engaged. There is, there can be no rest for the soldiers of the cross. What a great pleasure it is to know that we are laboring for our crucified Redeemer, and that after our labor is ended here we will rest with all the redeemed. The love which "beareth all things" will make the Christian a wise friend and a zealous missionary, though he may suffer the ridicule of an unbelieving world, yet he is willing to work on for his Master. While Christ bids us "go" and proclam the truth for which he gave his life. his hand is still ready to guide us.

Oh, sthat all professed Christians would become missionaries of the cross; teachers of his holy word, cease to scatter tares, or show forth darkness for light. Jesus was faithful to his mission. He is our example, and we must be faithful to ours, follow the steps of him if we would gain admission into that city of Pearl. We must feel the importance and necessity of the work which is entrusted to the children of God. Why should we live for the things of time, for earthly pleasure or honor? Can these satisfy our longings or fill our soul; Brother, sister, cleave to Christ, hold fast to the ordinances of the Lord's house) they will aid you in living for luty, for heaven and our mission.

Turns, are two things that always pay working and waiting. Either is useless without the other. Both united are invincible, and inevitably triumphant. He who waits without working is simply a man yielding to sloth and despair. He who works without waiting. though ever faithfull in his strivings misses results by impatience. He who works, stendily and waits patiently may have a long journey before him, but at close he will find his reward.

Those who never change their opinions, and never correct their mistakes, will hardly have sufficient charity to excuse the mistakes of others.

From a card of 26th alt, we learn Bro. D. B. Gilson has been holding interesting meetings at Urbana, Ill. Several have been haptized and the meetings continue.

We have before us a well written article, with out the name of the writer hence are compelled to send the essay to the "waste-basket." We must have the name of every writer as a guarantee.

NEXT Sunday evening, (7th), Bro. Moore will preach in the Brethren's Meeting-house in Lunark, from this text: "Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Services to commence at seven d'elock.

From many parts of the Brotherhood comes the welcome tidings of brekling on the armor for the conflict. Ministers, young and old, are going forth to "prench the Word" so that people may learn to know the way of life and live.

He expresses the hope that all may still do better. It is certainly gratifying to look back over the year's work and see such glorious results.

FORMERLY we believe it was the custom of all publishers to issue but fifty numbers of a weekly paper in a year, but now a great many have depurted from this venerable Holliday costom; and, had we looked at this matter as we now do, we should have printed fifty-two numbers ourselves. But as we arranged to print but fifty this year, it is now too late to change. Next year, if the Lord will we shall print the full fifty-two numbers

Some of our subscribers are renewing for sixteen months, this makes even change two dollars. Those who do this will see that the date after their names is changed sixteen months ahead. We would like if all would see within three weeks after they have renewed that the date at ter their names is right. Where any mistakes occur, it will be to your interest to correct them, and we shall thank all who will take the trouble to show us our errors. A true friend is always ready with a kind heart to show us our mistakes and help us correct them.

There seems to be quite a "coming out" from the "Winebrennarian" or "church of God" of late. In Northern Ind. quite a number left the "church" on account of its tolerance of masonry; and recently about 60 have withdrawn in Southern Kansas and organized a new Eldership. The Christian Intelligencer charges "one-man power" as the cause of these divisions. Evidently secretism lies at the root of the tranbles; and it is not at all strange that bitterness and separation are the results, for masonry is not calculated to prepare men for eternal happiness. "Come out of her" is the only remedy when the church refuses to give up the wicked things.

A macritum, sixty years of age desired that his congregation should have a house in which to worship; so he began to work by subscribing $2.00. Others followed the example, the necessary means were obtained and the work become. The workmen, while preparing the frame, destroyed some of the timber, so the add brother took his tools, went to the grave, felled the trees and hewed out new pieces. Such an example on the part of a minister will go on speaking after he is dead. Thank God, there are still some who are not ashamed to work with their own hands, while thousands of professing ministers, band-box like, stand around waiting for others to fill them. "I glory in necessaries" is Paullike.

On resteemed Brother Josse Y. Heckler says: "We baptized a Swede last Sunday—a well educated intelligent man. There is a large settlement north et us. Originally they were lastherans but many turn and fall is with the Bapti 4s, so did this one. He thinks many might be pursuaded to the truth, but for want of introdien. He would translate tracts into the Swede which is different from the Danish, if the Tract Society would be able to print them I am sonewhat acquainted with them and find them about as honest people as Lever met. Expect to go up, and preach for them, the last week in this month. What can you say to thes?"

Their Brother:—We cannot answer your question, the Brethren can answer it by donating to the Tract Scenety. This is the only way that we know to supply the demand.

di seems that our Brethren in 1780 ten a n acy to look after children, for in the Carbersecond that year they advised thus: "Inusconcluse many of our children and young peole tail acto a coarse life, and a great occasion dut seems to be a want that there is not suffiand deligence used in instructing the children e conduct to the world the Lord $0 \sim 0$ the opinion that there should be used more diligence to instruct our dear youth, and chilcommother word of truth to their substitution, and that it is the special diesy of dear parents, is well as id the jeistors and reachers, to be anraged berein as the apositic teaches. Then the thick of God winch is among you, taking the wersight thereof." This is good advice, and his an old "landmark" that we would do well wheed in this fast inneteently century. Parnts, pastors and teachers were advised to make probabilities to teach the children. And the sistors were further fold to bring the word of Fod Thearer to the hearts of children in a simbe onversation or catechization," and fluc this course would be better than a long ser onen. This sounds very much like Bilde school work; they favored questioning or conversing and so do we. It is a good method, ble to address individuals through the B. AT W.; but when a letter may be of general interest, and may be food for all Christian believers, we cheerfully insert it in your paper. To be intolerant, despotic and "wise above what is written" is one thing, and to exercise the wisdom that is from above is another thing. We teel that on holy and divine things we should all have liberty to speak through the B. AT W. but when any of us abuse this liberty we need to be checked. We are willing that you should watch us for good, and as editors we will, by God's grace, endeavor to extend the same watchful care over contributors. How it cheers our bearts when a friend writes to us and tells us of our errors! The soul is enriched by the kind and brotherly words of those who seek the good of others; and as we are all laboring in a common cause, may we labor together in the Spirit of the Lord Jesus. We all feel better when we agree.

CITY MISSION'S.

NOTHER D. M. Miller and the writer ar- rived at this place on Saturday, Nov. 22nd, and the same evening addressed an attentive audience in a public ball. We continued our lahors during the following week, and think we now have a little experience in city mission work. Let me first say that we were not sent by the "City Mission Board," but come here as volunteers on the call of Bro. S. H. Swigart who lives in the city. He, wife and son are the only members in this part of the State, and joy fills their hearts because of their Brethren's presence. They are devoted to the Muster's cause, and long to see a church built up here so that they may enjoy the associations and fellowship of kindred hearts. This is a city of three or four thousand inhabitants.

Our observations are that to do effective work in cities, a good and comfortable room most be engaged for at least one month, and ministers put to work who will exercise good judgment, and who will fearlessly declare the whole truth. To aid them, hand-bills, stating subjects to be trented, should be distributed each day. Posters, stating where the meetings are being held should be just up in all public places, and a notice given in the local papers. City people rely very much on advertisements, and unless the missionaries pursue this course, they will and likely have very many to listen to them. Nor should the common people be forgetten. The hand-bills should make special appeals to these; and the laboring class, should be told that, as a people we are common; that we welcome them to the fold of Jesus, and that among us there can be no social distinctions. This class of people in the cities might thus be reached, but unless special efforts be made to call them forth, they will regard us as they do others, and remain away. The wealthy are so wrapt in pride and display that it is hard for them to come down from their lofts positions and just on the yoke of Jesus. Those of them that profess Christianity, are so cold and formal, that it is exceedingly difficult to move their bearts. Occasionally one may be fouched, but rollles, rildons, tacks and laces, abound in such profession that the legic of Paul, and the shapenes of Apollos can scarcely move them to pily themselves. One need only go into the mist cratic churches to ascertain the want of that warm and sympathetic love that must characterize the Christian. Pride shows itself very where. O this engudly display! How long O Lord, must these things curso the sons of men! Our beart- go out after these people, out when they will not hear, our work is done and their blood will not be upon us. Then in order to accomplish good in cities the common people must first be gained. The preacher will give up these readily, for they are no profit to lame. Only such as can supply his pantry. ore crip, and his tashionable garments will be hold firm in his grasp. It is important to him wheels rich in theces. The poor who can concobute but little to the preacher's support, are sten left to seek other pastures. We know vicer of we affirm, for we have heard manisters a an and arrange how certain rich, men should be caught in the net. Why? "Because they see do much for our support," say the preach-

But the poorer classes may be gained by the Brethren. It wasy to stand off and imagine that county clerks, judges, lawyers, doctors, a pelyants, brokers and traders can be caught

As a rule we do not think that it is profitate to address individuals through the B. AT I.; but when a letter may be of general intert, and may be food for all Christian believers, or cheerfolly insert it in your paper. To be interest, despotic and "wise above what is ritten" is one thing, and to exercise the wise on that is from above is another thing. We do not say that some of the "noble" may not be gained, but we do say that it is useless to rely on this class out of which to build a house unto the Lord in cities. Arouse the common people, persuade them of the advantages of the whole doctrine of Christ, and truth will have a hold upon their hearts which will be a monument in that community.

OIL FOR ANOINTING PURPOSES

T often happens that the calls for elders to anoint the sick come upon them suddenly, and they are unprepared to furnish such oil as our holy Christianity demands. We do not beheve that a religion so pure as the one revealed from heaven, requires impure material in the furtherance of its work in man. We therefore suggest to the churches the propriety of purchasing the very best and jurest olive oil for anointing purposes, and have it put into the care of the elder or overseer, so that when it is needed it may be on hand, ready. The leading druggists of the country will furnish it. We make this suggestion for the good of our holy religion. Sometimes such oil is used as emits a very unpleasant odor, thus making it disagreeable to the sick and all who are present. There is no occasion for this. The best oil should be used, and the better way is, to keep it constantly on hand. The ancients were very particular as to the kind and quality of oil used; and well might they be, for the Lord required pure olive oil on occasions of anointing. We should be no less particular when engaged in the work of our Master. M. M. E.

BRETHREN, WHY IS IT?

E hear much said in favor of paying ministers, of Tract Societies, of missionary work, with the City Mission: all right when said according to gospel. Much money is being raised, or called for at this time, but why is it when a call is made for the afflicted family in Missouri, that the small sum of $8,00 can only be raised. It ought to be $800,00 instead of $8,00. Brethren, you who have large houses, and have quiet children think of this poor family in Missionri, and open your purse.

Ellen Spickler.

REPLY.

We do not want to discourage any one in giving, for the Lord knows that our over-cautionsness often makes us withhold our sympathies from the poor. But while in Missouri we made some inquiry in the case alluded to, and while no one doubted the needs of the brother, yet it was thought that it might have been better to have made the appeal to the adjoining churches as per advice of General Conference which [is as follows: "Tuasmuch as members have been imposed upon since in a deceitful manner, therefore we have concluded in this present great-meeting unanimously, that bereafter no member shall be allowed to go himself to another church; but if there should be found a member in want or distress, the overseer in the church where such members live, is to hold counsel with the church, in order to see whether they would relieve the want, and if so, it should not go any farther; but if not, then the oversoon, with the counsel of the church, hould send a letter to the adjoining church with a brother of his church, and if there the want can be relieved, it shall go no further: but if the want be redress then according to the finding of that church, it should be procreded in the same manner from that to the next climich, until relief is obtained; so that our loving brethren and members, who, accordring to the doctrine of Paul, are willing to do good unto all men, especially indicathem, who are of the to is chold of faith (Gid. 6: 10) may a clouger be imposed apon in such describble commer. This is not to be understood that or should not do good, also, to those poor withour the church."

For this reason we did not large our renders to respond to that call, dear sister. M. M. F.

BROTHLE ESDEEMAN when last heard from a se in Minnesota. Bro. D. M. Miller was with our. We expect him home this week.

NUMBER II.

THAT does the Bible teach? I am not going to talk about what this minister that minister says it teaches; but what does Bible teach? The only way to find out is to it; and a very few people do read it, and that plains partly why so many do not believe it, Fit is difficult to believe what we never saw heard. The Bible is the book to be read schools in order to make our children honscharitable, and good; this is the book that we of read in order that we have ideas of mercy. anity, and justice; it is the book we must read dearn our duties to God and to our fellowand to learn the wisdom and power of God nd ignorance, stupidity, arrogance and deendence of man.

In the Bible we learn that God is of purer res than to behold evil, and cannot look on boundary. Hab. 1: 13. To impart His hatred sin, God must tell us what is his punishment orit. We understand the degree of a crime of the punishment inflicted for it. We do not ansider stealing as bad as murdering, although oth are heinous crimes, and we express this ifference by the junishment we inflict for the gine. If God punished sin lightly, would we not feel that he had very little objection to it? But infidels take the punishment for sin as annishments for virtue, and then ask you whethgyon think a God of mercy would do so. They will take such scriptures as may be found Deut. 22:42, Ps. 78:23, Deut. 7:23, 24, Josh. 11: 7-23, Ex. 32: 29 and pervert them and shout in mad declaration that a God of percy never would wreak his vengeance on the weet blossoms of innocence and helplessness. god is said to be plenteous in mercy, and so be st but one of his attributes never lives at the expense of another. His mercy does not make him unjust, nor does his justice make him un-

Infidels say the Bible does not teach political freedom. Does the Bible teach that one man has the right to tyraunize and oppress another? poes the Bible not teach man to love his neighfor as himself? Have infidels a rule by which men could live and be happier than by this? Does the Bilde teach man to be ernel, laseivpars, valgar? Does the Bible teach him to lie, steal, hate and murder? If all men were Christisns-like Christ-would there be any wars? any quarrels? any misers? any slanderers? and adulterers? any defranders? Would there beany evil of any kind? Did Christ ever do wrong to any man? Did he not suffer the utmost cruelty and ignominy as a transgressor when he was the most innocent person on the face of the earth? Although Lord of lords and king of kings and he ever manifest any diposition of pride, arrogance, or tyrauny? hid he ever attempt a scheme by which he could get clear of paying his honest delds, or by which he could reduce the poor and humlde to slavery, beggary, and want?

Infidels say the Bilde does not give woman her rights. They say she is not treated as she ought to treated. Now let us read the Bible and see whether this is true or not. "Whose findeth a wife findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favor of the Lord."—Prov 23: 22. Is there any depree dion of woman in this? "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh,"-Eph. 5: 31. The question is here brought to a focus. It tells exactly in what estrem woman is held by man. It is here said that a man shall leave father and mother, break the nearest, dearest, tenderest he of relationship—for what? to get a slave? It in we confess it is a high encoming on the common sense of man. No: Tthe Bible does not say so. Does the Bible say a man shall be joined unto his wife and she shall be his show? Not quite; "they two shall be one flesh." This makes it impossible for a man who lives by the law of Christ to enslave his wife. Whatever be mides of her he must make of himself, because they are "one Hesh." We have no Supathy, however, for that doctrine that woman is man's great superior house-plant—something to be watered, to be set in the sun in the Winter and in the shade in the Summer. We would cust no such reflection on woman as to announce bor unfilness for the realities of life. A woman (we don't mean a butterfly) has strength as a m m has. She is not an ethereal the paper is good for the elification of one subtance-all spirit. She has real powers of hody, mind and soul, and we certainly pay her no compliment to prepare a shelf for her in life and stow her away as a web of muslin. We believe woman to be possessed with the same powers, same desires, the same aspirations and the same passions with which man is. This accords with the history of her creation. Adam said she is "bone of my hones and flesh of my flesh." So it would be utterly impossible from this account of ber creation being the bone and flesh of man to make her either inferior or superior to him. Paul in 1 Cor. 11. expresses the true relation of man to woman. He says neither one is without the other, yet each, in the economy of nature, operates in a realm peculiar to his adaptation. But never does the Bible give man the authority to make woman a slave. Paul in this same chapter teaches man to have the same regard for woman that Christ had for the church. This ought forever to settle the question as to whether the Bible degrades woman or not. We challenge any man or woman to produce any scripture which authorizes a man to enslave his wife. It does not teach it. And so far as we know there is not even oue single church making the profession of Christianity that teaches that man has a right to enslave woman. One of two things is absolutely certain; either infidels do not know what the Bible does teach, or they are untruthful.

The Bible in defining the liberties of woman says, "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth, but if her husband be dead she is at liberty to be married to whom she will." Ought woman to have more liberty than this? Are her rights too much abridged? Does any infidel believe that his wife would be better if she could marry again and again while "her husband liveth" "to whom she will"? "All the language in the world is not sufficient to express the infamy of polygamy; it makes man a beast and woman a stone. It destroys the firesale and makes virtue an outeast. It takes from our language those sweetest words: father, husband, wife and mother, and takes us back to barbarism, and fills our hearts with the crawling, slimy serpents of loathsome lust."

The Bible says, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it."-Eph. 5: 25. Now hear in mind this is what the Bible feaches man, not what some minister or commentator says. What claim can a woman make that would require more than this? What more than this have infidels to grant woman? Who has ever known a Christian, I mean a man truly like Christ, not a miserable professor only, who will lie, and steal, and cheat, and quarrel with his neighbors, but a man who abounds in every good work-who, we ask, has never known such a man to abuse his wife, or make a slave. of her? If the world was only full of families where the father and mother were both consisteut and devoted Christians, this earth would be a heaven and every home would be a paradise. Birds would sing, flowers would bloom, and sums would never set. Oh, imagine such a

COAXING SUBSCRIBERS.

III III LE we desire all our subscribers to renew, and will welcome the new ones, too, yet we do not wish to say much alcout it. We are confident that our readers are abound untly able to determine what will do them the most good, and will act accordingly. We might invite you constantly to subscribe yet if you did not regard the paper as edifying to you can invitations would avail nothing. Then, too we might often tell you that we are trying to give you a good paper, and you might reply, well just quit trying and qin the quot paper, "This is like the man who praved, "Lord we desire to ask thee for thy blessing," and a devoted saint wondered why he did not ask for the blessing, instead of telling the Lord, that he desired to a-k. So with journalism; we should not sunply try to produce an acceptable paper, but produce it. A Brother writes; "Give us a good paper and we will read it. I recently took up a paper and found fourteen invitations to subscribe, and this disgusted me so that I would not." There it is: too much invitation; and we recognize the force of the Brother's objections and the justice of his suggestions. We may sametimes be too anxious; yet, we feel that if ministry.

soul, it would be for thousands, hence wish a large circulation; yet we think there may be even too much coaxing in this matter. Occasionally we must say something about our husiness; but our readers understand this. They see the difference between a matter of necessity and an over-dose. We shall soon complete our agreement with you for 1879 and stand ready to make another for 1880. As already observed, we shall most gladly welcome you all to come and help along the good cause during 1880, yet we are not inclined to coax and persuade you against your will. Do what seemeth good to you; and may the Lord not only enrich you and us with grace in the present world, but may his tender love and abundant goodness be given unto us in the mansions of etern al bliss.

GOOD THOUGHTS FROM OTHERS.

WE rejoice in the good, hence with pleasure commend the following from our exchanges as being fatness for the soul. We regret that our limited space forbids a more extensive gathering of pearls:

"What if men of the world, or worldly-minded men in the church, should stigmatize us as enthusiasts or even fanatics? This should not discourage us. If there is damnation to the ungodly, unless they repent, should we not be instant in season, in endeavoring to save them? If you wished to rescue persons from a burning building, would you pause to consult your neighbors in reference to the matter? No; you would go to work in earnest, with love to those exposed to danger, and you would not allow any interference; and if in your cuthusiasm you should smash a window or a door that might have been saved, every one would excuse you for it. So there should be enthusiasm in religion—in saving souls; and little informalities in the execution of the work will be excused."—Progressive Christian.

"From one of our most wealthy localities we have a lot of complaints like the following: Too much begging for money; too much blow-Well now there may be a ing, &c., &c., &c. little too much of all this and then again there may not be. At any rate we do not believe we blow half as much about our paper, as some of our brethren do about their farms, their houses and their fine stock. If any of you have a fine horse you do not generally forget to tell it, not only once, but many, many times, and it may not be a much greater wrong if we tell our patrons that we are going to give them good reading matter. At any rate it may not be much more wrong to glory a little in a sermon or religious article, that has the cross of Christ in it, than in a farm, or even a house, or cow. Now we are not going to say that we are doing just right; we are liable to err, but some brethren see only one side of a question, and then too, the mere mention of money is a terrihle thing. They don't think that they themselves handle it every day, and that two thirds of their time, talents, and energies are spent to got it, and if they, like the rich young man, were required to sell all they had and give to the poor, they would go away sorrowful. We certainly have a right to ask for what is honestly coming to us, and to our knowledge we Wa baya asked for na e done nathing more. money to help our missionary, and all other laudable enterprises, and it this is referred to, we have no apology to offer. We would much rather be the beggar for such enterprises than the fault-finder.

SISTERS PRAYING AND PROPH-ESYING PUBLICLY.

TIWO Brethren recently held a little written discussion upon this subject, and us it may be of interest we give it to our readers under the names Hermas and Nerens, for we believe they possess in a measure the characteristics of these early lovers of truth.

Nercus. Does not 1 Cor. 11; 5 teach that a woman may pray and prophery publicly?

Hernuts. It don't say publicly.

N. Does it say, prinately?

H. No; therefore there is no proof in that text either way.

V. But 1 Cor. 11. 5 must be obeyed: where? H Paul is here giving order in keeping, the ordinances. Prophesying foretells future events. The ordinances joint like a compass with two needles; one points back to the cruemixion, the other forward to the second coming, a future event, and it is shown by an act.

A. Then woman is to pray and prophesy when the ordinances are being of served, is she?

H. Yes, because to him is given the public

V. Then on any other occasion man may the anti-type.

pray and prophesy with his head covered? H. By no means, for Paul here lays down a Gospel order, which I understand applies to man either in public or private administration. N. But does not apply to woman either publicly or privately, does it?

H. Surely not; for she is not entrusted with the public ministry.

N. You assume that: now 1 Cor. 11:5 is either a public or private duty or both. How can this be evaded?

To this Hermas made no answer, hence the correspondence necessarily ceased.

Will some one please explain the 5th and 6th verses of the 6th chapter of Revelations? It reads as follows: "And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see, Ami I beheld, and lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say. A measure of wheat for a penny, and three amusures of barley for a penny; and see thou burt not the oil and the wine.

A. NELSON GRAYBILL.

IN this chapter the different spirits of God are set forth as in Zech. 6: 5. In the second verse the Revelator says, "I saw and beheld a white horse." White is an emblem of peace, and typifies the era of success attending the early preaching of the Gospel. In the fourth verse the red horse denotes war and desolation, and refers to the era of the world's history when Pagan Rome became Papal Rome upon the conversion of the Emperor Constantine in the sixth century. Rev. 12: 4-7, and 17: 6.

In the sixth verse the black horse denotes wrath, or in other words the vengeance of God as mated out to the oppressors of his people. Rev. 16: 2. The balances typify justice. equality—a fit representation of the era that dawned upon the world through the reformation, when millions who had been the dupes of those who falsified the balances and bought the needy for a pair of shoes, (Amos 8: 4-6), threw off the yoke of bondage and asserted the freedom that belongs to the free-born.

Will some one please explain Matt. 12: 40? It ends as follows: "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's helly; so shall the Son of manche three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

In this Jonah was olestmate in the first calling, but took ship for Tarshish; and in consequence of this, the sea became boisterous so that they could not sail. But Jonah must be east overboard into the sea. "Now the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow Jonah, and Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights."-Jonah 1: 18. Read the entire chapter.

The above is a combensed history of Jonah in the fish's belly. Now for the explanation.

"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he may bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Sparit; by which also be went and preached unto the Spirits] in prison."-1 Peter 3: 15, 19. Christ being put to dath in the flesh, but was made alive by ithe Spirit by which (the Spirit) also be went and preached to the Spirits in prison, I understand that while the loady of Jesus lay in the tomb (not in the heart but in the surface of the earth) three days and three nights, his Spirit went out and preached to the Spirits in prison-to the antediluvian world, and those that believed his doctrine were released from that prison. "For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to Gol in the Spirit" (1 Peter 4: 6), those ante bluvnins that were shut up in that prision were not only "dead," temporally, but also Sparitually-dead in tresspaces and sins, for H. OVER THE RIVER.

SELECTED BY W. A. CLARKE.

This beautiful poem by an American writer, Miss. Priest, has commanded the admiration of all readers during the many rounds it has made of the newspaper and Magazine press in the last tenyears. To those who have lost intimate friendsand who has not?-some of the allusions are inexpressibly affecting. Many a moistened eye will follow the lines:

Over the river they becken to me, Loved ones who've gone to the other side, The gleam of their snowy robes I see, But their voices are lost in the dashing tide. There's one with ringlets of sunny gold, And eyes the reflection of Henven's own blue He crossed in the twilight gray and odd, And the pale mist led him from mortal view. We saw not the angels who had him there, The gates of the city we could not see; Over the river, over the river, My mother stands ready to a cleane me,

Over the river the Bostman pale, Carried another-the household jet Her bright curls waved to the gentle gale-Darling Minne, I see her yet! She pressed on her bosom her duopled load. And ferrlessly entreed the phonoton back, We watched it glate from the salvery sands, And all our sunshine grew strangely dark, We know she is safe on the other side, Where all the ransomed and angels be Over the river, the mystic river, My children's idols are waiting for me.

For none return to those quiet shores Who cross with the londinum endd and pul-We hear the dip of the golden ours, We catch a glean of the anany sail, And lot they have passed from our heart They cross the stream and are gone for aye. We cannot sunder the vail apart, That hides from our vision the gotes of day We only know that their barks no more Shall sail with ours on life's stormy sea, Yet somehow I hope on the unseen shore They watch and becken and wait for me

And I sit and think when the sunsel's gold leflushing river, hill and shore, I shall one day a and by the uniter cold, And list to the sound of the boatmon's our; I shall watch for the gleans of the flapping rad, I shall hear the best as it pains the strand, I shall posse from sight with the bantonne pule, To the better share of the spirit land? I shall know the loved who lacee grain terfore, And joyfolly sweet shall the meeting be, When over the river, the peaceful river, The migel of death shall earry me-

A WAYSIDE COURTESY.

WAS once walking a short distance behind a handsomely-dressed young buly, and thinking, as I hooked at her beautiful dothes, "I wender if she takes as much pains with her heart as she does with her hody." A moor old man was coming up the walk with a loaded wheelbarrow, and just before he reached us he made two attempts to go into the yard of a small house; but the gate was heavy, and would swing back before he could get through, "Wart," said the young girl, springing slightly forward, "I'll hold the gate open." And she held the gate open till he passed in, and received his thanks with a pleasant smile as she went on, 'She deserves to have beautiful clothes," I thought; "For a beautiful spirit dwells in her breast."-S. A CHEERFUL FACE.

MARRY the radiance of your soul in your U face. Let the world have the benefit of it. Let your cheerfulness be felt for good wherever you are, and let your smiles be scattered like sunbeams "on the just as well as on the unjust," Such a disposition will yield a rich reward, for its happy effects come home to you and brighten your thoughtful moments. Cheerfulness makes the mind clear, gives tone to your thought, adds grace to the countenance, Jou. bert says; "When you give, give with joy, smiling." Smiles are little things, and cheap articles to be fraught with so many blessings both to the giver and receiver; pleasant little ripples to watch as we stand on the shore of every-day. life. They are the higher and better reponses of Nature to the emotions of the soul. Let the children have the benefit of them-those little one; who need the sunshine of the heart to edseate them, and would find sympathy for their

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A MOTHER?

BY SARAH C. MILLER.

YEAR reader, have you ever experienced what home is without a mother? Indeed there is nothing so sad in this life as to part with a kind mother; no earthly friend is as near to you as your own mother. My dear mother has been dead over six years, but she often comes to my memory, and then I think how disobedient I was to her sometimes, and am made to feel sorry for it, but I always was ready and willing to wait on her when she was sick, and thought I could not do enough for her. My mother's love will never be forgotten.

Young friend, your mother is much concerned about you; she is always ready and willing to help you in time of need. During sickness she is the first one to lend a helping hand. She is also much concerned in regard to your future welfare, and often offers up prayers to God in your behalf during the silent hours of the night. Do not be disobedient to your mother for she is the best and nearest friend you have in this wicked world, and when she is lying beneath the clods of the valley you will then realize the worth of a mother's love. Lima, Ohio.

YOUR MISSION.

 $\mathbf{Y}^{(1)}$ you see that small fountain of pure water gushing forth from every hillside? Did God put it there for any purpose? Has it any work to perform in this world of practical duties? Go ask it, and if it could answer in language you could understand, it would tell you how it filled its little mission by quenching the thirst of many poor, wenry travelers who stop to drink from its cooling waters, and go on | their way rejoicing.

We look into the violets' winsome faces, and they seem to whisper to us wonderful tales of the missions of love they have performed. Their cheery faces seem to speak words of comfort to the sick, and add new life to those who admit them into their presence.

In early Spring we throw open our windows to breathe the fresh morning air, and the first sound that greets our ears is the robin's rich, melodious voice. As we listen, we feel he has been sent to tell us of love and beauty in the world around us, and our hearts feel; in harmony with all things lovable. If, perchance, the heart was sad, it cannot belp being made merry by the rolun's sweet notes.

And thus we might study all Nature, and find that everything seems to have some spemission given as to man—man created and fashioned after God's own image. To him is given the work of saving souls for God, of helping and ministering unto his fellow-men.

Our general thought of mission work lies in the lands across the sea, where we hear of the heathen being Christianized. All cannot go to the foreign lambs, neither are all fitted for that work, but all can share in God's mission fields. Each one has a mission appointed him. but alas, many are neglecting the field wherein they should labor. They are vainly waiting and looking for some great deed to perform, something to make their names famous in this world. Few are they who find such fields.

Some may say, I know not what my mission is; I know not what I can do. Each day our work is pointed out to us, if we will but beed the call. It may be we are sent to minister to some poor outcast, or some lunely invalid, whom God has seen fit to afflict for years, and to them our presence may be a great comfort. Our words may seem to them as sweet and cheering as the robin's first warhlings in Spring. It is to do our mission; but that God has placed us there to watch over dear ones, to mould their young hearts, to speak words of love, of charity, of sympathy. O, how often do we neglect these little duties! How often do we fail to see agement they bring. Give your smiles also to and thirsty traveler. We enjoy being loved and administered unto; how careful ought we to be, then, to minister unto others. Such lit-He duties of love and kinduess may seem to us small, but to God they may be counted among his grandest works.

> In those seemingly small mission fields, we should "weary not in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Let each | beaches and narrow valleys which we knew discouraged Christian take these words to himself, and ask God for renewed strength to sow and till his mission field. Seek to sow it with seeds of good deeds, henevolent acts, kind words, love, sympathy, purity-everything that will add to God's honor and glory. Let us not neglect the work, but see that each hour witness some mission of love recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life.—Gulden Censur.

FROM PALESTINE.

NUMBER XXXIII.

The Lake of Galilee.

[From the "Christian Shoolard" by special Arrangement.]

THE Lake of Galilee possesses so much inter-1 est in the mind of every reader of the New Testament, that I have concluded to devote to it one entire letter. We approached it from the south by ascending the valley of the Jordan from Bethshean. We expected a hot rule along the valley, so we arose at three o'clock in the morning, and were in the saddle a few minutes after four. Daylight was just beginning to dawn over the mountains of Gilead, and the light of the descending moon in the west had not yet faded out, when we rode through the village of Beisan amid the barking of innumerable dogs, who saluted us from the housetops as well as from the streets. Hogs-barking, not biting dogs,- are a specialty with the Arabs.

Our route lay along the direct road from Jerusalem to Danniscus until we reached the river at what is called the Mejamia bridge. This is a massive stone bridge which spans the Jordan by one large arch over the principal bed of the stream, and two of less size over side channels which are filled at high water. The bridge is rudely, but strongly built, and for many centuries it has been the only bridge over the river in actual use. It is built of black basalt, and was once guarded by a large fortified caravanserai of the same material, the ruins of which lie a short distance from it on the western side The stream is contracted here by the masses of rock which form the shores, and just below the bridge there is a rapid in which the river dashes and roars over a descent of eight or ten feet. Here the Damascus road crosses. Here Paul and Naaman crossed, and it is quite likely that the latter here dipped himself as directed by the prophet, and was healed. Here also, I think, must have been one of John's principal places of baptizing, for, being a principal crossing place, routes of travel concentrated here, and it was one of the most convenient places on cial work, some love mission in this little world | the river for the gathering together of the peoof rors. Yet to nothing is there so great a ple. I need scarcely add that there is water here, at any possible stage of the river, admirably suited for immersing. Indeed, I may say, once for all, that I have now seen the Jordan from its mouth to its source; I have ridden many miles along its banks; I have crossed it on horseback, on a bridge, and in a boat; I have swum in it repeatedly and have often ridden in it to try its depth; and I affirm, with the assurance of positive knowledge, that there is no section of it in which a man seeking a place for immersion would encounter much inconvenience in finding one; and that there are few places at which it can be approached without finding such a place immediately at hand. Although in many places, as in all rivers, the banks are too precipitous or too muddy for the purpose; and in many, the current is too deep or too swift at the bank, yet not far from all such places, and usually within a few steps, other spots are found in which none of them ascend from the mouth of the stream, the lewer obstacles of the kind do you encounter. The field of John's preaching and baptism included oftener we are not called from our own homes | the entire length of the river, below the lake of Galilee (Luke m. 3).

Kerok, or Tarichea, a town which anciently stood here. From this ridge we obtained our first full view of the famous lake, and we gazed upon it with deep interest for a long time. The view was in two respects disappointing; the lake appeared smaller than it really is, and the mountains all around seemed to rise abruptly from the water's edge, without the sloping were there in many places. But the deep blue sheet of water itself, widening as it stretched away towards the north, and the tawny hills, 1,000 feet high on the west, and 1,808 on the east, were there, as I expected to see them. After satisfying ourselves with the view from the southern shore, we went on our way toward Tiberias, whither our pack train had preceded The thermometer stood at about 90°, but a refreshing breeze swept over the lake from the north, and we scarcely felt the heat. Just as we rounded the corner of the lake, however, there came down suddenly upon us from the western hills, the hottest wind that I have ever felt. Its first effect on the body was cooling, as if rapidly evaporated the perspiration which had been flowing; but it was burning to our faces, and we involuntarily closed our mouths against it. The mercury went up in a few minutes to 1902. When we had ridden in it a short distance. I remarked that it would be dangerous to endure it long without relief, so we rade into the lake and wet our heads, and the rapid evaporation of the water from our faces and hair kept our heads enol until the temperature of the wind was reduced. It was really a sea breeze which had set in. It first blew down upon as the hot air from the hillsides, and afterward brought to us the cooler air of the Mediterranean. The thermometer came down to about 80° before sunset.

Tiberias, now known by the more euphonious name of Tabiriyeh, is about four miles from the southwestern curve of the lake. About a mile below it are the celebrated hot springs, The temperature of the water is 137°, and it is supposed to have medicinal properties. Several rade stone buildings are constructed about them for bathing purposes, and it is a place of much resort.

From the hot springs begin the ruins of ancient Tiberias, which extend up the lake shore to the present town, and include it. The present town is surrounded by walls, with large round towers at intervals, and a gate on every side. The eastern wall stands in the water, and the gate on that side is the landing place for boats. Walls, towers, and dwellings are all built of basalt, and the place has a most gloomy appearance. An old crumbling mosque, with a beautiful minaret built of yellowish limestone with an occasional band of black basalt, tells of the former glory and present decay of Mohammedanism; while a clean and neatly built convent, with a pretty chapel adjoining it, speaks of the efforts which the Romanists are here making to gain control of both Jews and Arabs. The population of the town is about 3,000, principally Jews. Here lived and died and was buried the famous Jewish Rabbi Maimonides and here, for several centuries after the fall of Jesusalem, was the greatest seat of Hebrew learning. The Sabbath is kept here strictly; the Lord's day is but little observed. The town suffered severely from an earthquake in 18-37.

On the morning of our arrival at Tiberias, we chartered one of the three fishing boats which now supply the town with fish, for our use the following day. We were to pay $8.00 for the hoat with six boatmen, and were to have the privilege of directing its course. The next morning at eight o'clock we set sail from the water gate of the town, and directed our course toward the mouth of the Jordan at the northern end of the lake. The boat was about seven feet wide in the middle, and about twenty-four feet long. At each end was a little deck about six feet long, and soft rugs were spread on these tor our use. I took my position at the low. and spreading my shawl, thickly folded, along obstacles are encountered; and the inrther you the rug, with one end covering the coiled up chain of the auchor, I used the latter for a follow, and rested very comfortably in a reclining position as the boat glided slowly along.-There was wind to fan our faces, and keep as cool under our umbrellas, but not enough to beaving the Mejamia bridge, we ascended fill our sail, though it was spread and ready for the valley, with the river almost continually in the breeze. The boatmen steadily plied the view, to the southern and of the lake. What Can We do for the Colored People?

WAILE we wish much success to the "City Mission," we desire to call " of the friends of missions to a new field lately opened, the colored people who lately fled from the land of bondage and oppression and are settling in different parts of Kansas and the South-west. I would be pleased to hear what can be done for them. Brethren, let us hear what you think we as a free people can do for this poor, despised and down-trodden race.

Dear Brethren:-THE Love-feast was held in the brick church on the 28th of October. The occasion was one long to be remembered. The word was preached in its primitive purity, and from the interest manifested we have great reason to believe it was appreciated. About three hundred and fifty members were present. We have had several additions recently, and we believe there were many impressions left upon the mands of the spectators while the brethren and sisters portrayed the sufferings and death of our glorious Redeemer. This is one of the oldest J. W. CLICK. churches in the valley.

Notice to the Brotherhood at Large,

THE undersigned committee of the Zachariah Albaugh Poor Fund would hereby report that in pursuance of the provisions of said Albaugh will, said committee have paid within the last two years to each of forty churches, amounts rauging from twenty-five to fifty dollars, and have denied twelve applications for various causes. And said committee would now call the attention of all poor churches, who have not already received their portion, to the fact that there is yet a considerable amount of sand funds on hands ready for distribution to my churches entitled thereta.

Dear Brethren:—

PO-DAY, Nov. 18th, brother Kelso left us to greet loved ones at home. He expected to remain over night in Huntingdon, and tomorrow resume his journey. Having remained here six weeks, he felt much improved, so much so that he will be able to fill his duties in the church as formerly. No doubt the brethren and friends will welcome him in his much improved condition. His address will again be Elk Lick, Pa.

Last night we had a soaking rain which was much needed. To day is a very cloudy, misty day, and has a tendency to cast a gloom over the minds of invalids. I am not yet sufficiently restored to return home, and will remain for some time yet. I am rejoiced to hear of the good work of the Lord going on in all parts of the Brotherhood, and what gladsome news to hear of so many new soldiers enlisting under the banner of King Emanual through his recruiting agents, and even some backsliders made new resolves. I am sorry to learn that some thus laboring successfully must leave in the midst of their work for other engagements, and some lose their health and have to give up the work. Brethren, pray earnestly for God to bless the labors of those who are out from their homes laboring earnestly for the salvation of souls and the upbuilding of Zion, and also pray God that he may impress the duty upon the Brotherhood to provide for their necessities so that all may take an humble part in the glorious work which is now begun. Fraternally,

The Frontier Mission.

ME see that when brother Moomaw went to New York and saw there the great necessity of city preaching, he suggested a plan which has gone into effect and we hope much good may be done. A few years ago the Danish Mission was only commenced and now we read of a prosperous church across the bring deep, and of Southern Illinois, and many others equally as important, accomplishing much good. In No. 45 of B. At W. we have an appeal for help, also in No. 17 of Brethren's Adcocate, which no doubt is read by many.

Our front lines a few years ago were Illinois, a little laler Iowa, and now Nebraska, but the front is only a mere skirmish, and as you see in the appeal referred to, we need help, and that too of strong, able men (spiritual), to rout the enemy. He is not very strong, but we are weak and need reinforcements. Now brethren of the front, let us rally to the one glorious cause and make a united call for reinforcements until we accomplish the great work,-like Jacob of old, not let thee go until thou hast blessed us. As I am a poor hand to suggest a plan that will reach the Frontier Mission, will some one of our readers give us a plan that will supply our wants and feed starving souls, that Bear in mind that only those churches whose churches may be established on those tertile prairies which a tew years ago were trodden by the wild beasts and red men of America?

Brethren, help us, think of us, pray for us, We have to travel from fifteen to filty nules to reach the different little groups of brothren, and then not half of the calls are filed. Here is labor, come and help us. Our territory extends west to Colorado, where brother Flory has commenced the Frontier Mission. Let us a good way is to come and settle, here and, hiveout what you preach, but we need unmediate FIMIE Board of Evangelism appointed by the relief. We have been in the front nine years, with now and then small o inforcements, which would only fire and then fall back to the reerves. At only others were then really to take their place good service might be done, but when only a shot is fired once in few weeks, and sometimes longer, from a small gian arthat, I we came expect to bear of much destruction in the camp of Satar. Define here of the plan A. P. Mondelle. Your neady highlier.

CHRIST PREACHED,

seemed to be the subject. He spoke of the mission of Christ-His life, death and resurrection, stating that the resurrection from the dead was one of the most prominent themes of apostolic preaching. The enemies of Christ tried hard to confuse the truth of His resurrection, intending thereby to put an end to Christianity, but they failed because Divine Power was in it .-Some of the Coriuthian brethren must have entertained doubts on the subject of the resurrection or the apostle Paul would not have had occasion to write as we find it in the text. But that Christ rose from the dead was a solid truth, and therefore the primitive ministers of Christ were fully able to argue on that subject. Christ is indeed resurrected, and gone up into heaven. We wait for his second coming, and it becomes us not to doubt his resurrection from the dead but to act as those who truly believe it, and who live in hope that after our decease we shall live again through the power of His glorious resurrection.

Brother Benedict added some appropriate words of exhortation and brother Oller closed the meeting.

HE PATIENT.

Sunday, November 9th.—This seems to be a lay in Indian Summer. Our services this morning at Prices Meeting-house were well attended. Brother Baker took his text from the 7th, 8th, and 9th verses of James, and spoke on Christian patience. He alluded to the fact that James was one of our Lord's apostles—that he wrote to the scattered members of the church of his times—that the Christians were much tried because of their religion-that James comforted them under their trials, and encouraged them to be patient—that they should "stablish their hearts" or see that they were grounded in the faith and practice of the Gospel. Our brother applied the subject to our own times and offered the text as an advice to the Lord's followers now. Whatever our trials or troubles, we should endure unto the end because the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. It is important that we be ready any time to meet the Lord when He comes. Christian endurance is necessary and this is so well illustrated in the seventh verse, that we refer the reader to it for meditation. "Be patient." Let us be patient. Patience is found among those who do not profess to be Christians; but we may most look for it and expect it, among those who name the Name of Christ. Patience among the unconverted is beautiful; but when we see its perfect work in the believers, how much more beautiful! We may have trials in life, and we may have disconragements in religion, but true Christian patience will enable us to surmount them all. Brethren and sisters, let us be patient.

We returned to brother J. C. Moomaw's on the following Monday evening and met with brother W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, Pa. He was soliciting aid for the Brethren's College at that place. He certainly represents the interests of the school with decided ability. He seemed to be much pleased with his visit to South-west Va. We had a delightful evening discussing the present and future prospects of our beloved Church, and the various "causes" that are moulding the destiny thereof. I pronounce brother S. decidedly companionable and hope we will meet frequently on the mission

On the morning of the 29th, the Love-feast of the Roanoke congregation hegan. A goodly numbes of laborers were present and the church was in peace and union and of course we were all happy. Our dear Lord told us we would be happy if we did what he told us to do, and we just found it as he said. If any do not believe it come and try it. On the morning of the 1st of November, our feast at Johns alle began. O, Johnsville! how often do thy dear courts testify to the joy of the worshipers, who praise God in the prayers and hymns, in the tears and mournings. Brethren ministers, John and Moses Brubaker, J. C. Moomaw, Levi Huff and Isaac Riu were present and a large number of visiting brethren and sisters. An unnsually large number of our local members were present. It was the largest communion service ever held in this congregation. The brethren represented the doctrines of the Church in a very efficient manner and the audience, which was very large, paid devont attention to the labors of our teachers. On Sunday morning the hills and vallies poured out a full tide of hungering souls, and at an early hour the large audience room was filled and were addressed by brother J. C. Moomaw from Matt. 5: 1-7, in his usually impressive manner.

This meeting closed the festival season in our district. What inexpressible joy there is in believing and doing what the Master commands us to believe and do.

A few days before our meeting a young woman, Sallie Wells, of Lafayette, aged 21 years, who was visiting her brother a few hundred yards from our house, sought her couch to lay down her weary body to die. Youthful, healthful, gentle, kind, loving and loved, yet her appointed hour was at hand, and, without a murmur or complaint, she yielded her soul into the hands of llim who gave it, and her body to the dark and silent grave. On the evening of the 9th, her spirit took its departure to the realm of spirits and the following day her friends took up their sad journey to her father's house twenty miles distant, and now she rests "near the humble haulet where her fore fathers sleep. "NOT FAR FROM THE KINGDOM."

"Not far, not far from the kingdom, Yet in the shadow of sln. How many are coming and going, How few are entering in?

Not far from the golden gate-way, Where voices whisper and walt, Fearing to enter in holdly, Solingering still at the gate:

Catching the strains of the musle floating so sweetly along, Knowing the song they are singing Yet joining not in the song:

Seeing the warmth and the beauty, The infinite love and the light, Yet weary, and lonely, and waiting, Out in the desolate night!

Out in the dark and the danger, Out in the night and the cold, Though he is fonging to lead them Tenderly into the fold.

Not far, not far from the kingdom, "Fis only a little space; But it may be at last and forever, Out of the resting place.

THE sentiment in the above poem beautifully 1 expresses the condition of some, who, during the past week, attended the series of meetings at this place, but who said to the good Spirit, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a more convenient season I will call for thee." The arrow of conviction reached their hearts and caused them to feel that all was not well; bitter tears were made to flow on account of sin, but still they stand shivering just outside the gate fearing to enter in. They are "not far from the Kingdom" yet are in "the shadow of sin," and are strangers to the covenant of promise,-How sad the condition of such to-night, and how weary and desolate they feel as they realize the troth that they are out in the cold and darkness, and yet they refuse to be led "tenderly into the fold."

Dear friends, Josus stunds with outsretched arms to receive you within His loving embrace His great, sympathetic heart yearns after you and He whispers in accouts of love, "Come unto Me and I will give you rest. His spirit has heen striving, and has impressed you with the necessity of turning away from sin and living for God. Within your hearts there is commotion, but He who walked upon the waters, and who commanded the winds and the sens and they obeyed Him, will pronounce the sweet benediction, "Tears, be still," and there will be a great calm. Then you will wonder why you so long slighted the offers of love and mercy, and you will feel constrained to go out and compel others to come in and enjoy that "peace which the world can never give nor take away."

We often wonder why people prefer living ontside the Church and "away from the tender Shepherd's care," when within there are so many phasures to be realized. The cold and cheerless world offers nothing that can be compared with the rich pastures and the "still waters" of the life of the Christian, nor are they enduring and satisfying in their nature. True, you may enjoy a few trifling pleasures in the giddy rounds of fashion, but there are times when these transitory things are not apprecinobler-a want that can only be filled by accepting Christ and yielding obedience to this requirements. When the day with its him and bustle is over and the dark shadows envelop the quiet world, then it is you have time to reflect, and no doubt often retire to rest with a troubled conscience, and you long for the strong protection of the who is willing to save; but still you "halt between two opinions." You are not "far from the Kingdom," but you are not in it, and hence fail to enjoy that peace the people of God enjoy. Remember that while you linger "outside the gate" you are being borne rapidly down the stream by the current of Time and your privileges are lessening. Jesus says "To-day if you will hear My voice, harden not your heacts," but you say, "after a while," "My spirit shall not always strive with man," is the language of that Savior who now stands waiting to receive you. Then come while in the morning of life and dedicate your time, talents, -your all to the service of God, and the glad news will be carried by augels to the upper regions and cause joy and rejoicing, for Inspirapenteth.'

"I shood outside the gate, A poor, wayfaring child; Within my heart there heat A tempest loud and wild; A fear oppressed my soul, That I might be too late; And oh, I trepilded sore, And prayed outside the gate In Mercy's guise I knew The Saytor long abused,

Who often sought my heart, And wept when I refused; Oh! what a blest return For all my years of sin! I stood outside the gate, And Jesus let me In?

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTH LY FOR DECEMBER, 1879.

THE December "Popular Science Monthly" has an excellent invoice. E. B. Tylor, the great English anthropologist, leads off with an article on "Recent Anthropology," in which he carefully reviews the present state of knowledge on the subject of the antiquity of man. He speaks on this question with authority. The fine researches of Crookes on "Radiant Matter" as a new state of matter, which fixed the attention of the Royal Society so intently, are brought to a close. The article is exquisitely illustrated. But the most striking article of the number is the novel and original paper of Prof. Joseph Le Conte on "The Genesis of Sex." How sex primurily originated has always been an obscure, and indeed an impossible, question in physiology; but Professor Le Conte takes it up as a problem of evolution, and deals with it as falling under the general law of differentiation, and from this point of view he shows that much is already known in relation to the question. and that it is bound to be ultimately completely solved. This essay will repay study on the part of those who care to know about things .-The subject of "Ocean Meteorology" is pursued by Lieutenant Lyons, who gives a large amount of information regarding weather and havigution at sea. Dr. W. B. Dalby discourses of "First-hand and Second-hand knowledge," show ing the gulf there is between them and their different functions in the cultivation of the mind. Dr. Mortimer Granville takes up bramaction in relation to education and the re-education of the adult brain, where its acquisitions have been temporarily lost. Brain-action is cell nutrition and reproduction, and it is therefore the cells that have to be educated. These views are illustrated by Dr. Granville in a very clear and instructive manner. Professor E. O. Vaile gives a curious chapter in the history of early arithmetor; and there is a discriminating and able criticism of Spencer's "Data of Ethics" by Professor Bain. Professor Marsh's Saratoga address on "History and Methods of Paleontological Discovery" is furnished, revised and with new notes, by the author. "The Beginnings of Geographical Science," by George A. Jackson is a very readable bit of scientific history. Proctor dilates on the "Expected Meteoric Display" and there is a currous illustrated paper on "Ma ny-foed horses." Hr. Frederick Hoffman fin mshes a sketch of Hemrich Wilhelm Dove, the late celebrated German meteorologist.

The editor devotes two pungent editorials to Goldwin Smith's late maintesto on the breakdown of morality caused by evolution. It looks as if there was very little left of the historian's case. Smith accused the Chinese of having no real religion—of being a nation of positivists: whereupon the editor of the "Monthly" makes imquiry into the state of morality in the celestial country, with rather striking results.

He was born in Lancaster county and removed to this county about fifty-ax years ago, residing in Kelley township thirty-three years and in Miffiinburg about twenty-three years. He was greatly extermed by all who knew him, in every respect -in business, socially and in the church, He was a plain man, unassuming, generous sympathetic, agreeable and courteous to all-no, matter their station-and his death has caused sadness throughout the entire neighborhood, The funeral occurred on Sunday last, the services being held in the Dunker Church a few miles west of Mitllinburg, Elds. Charles Royer and John L. Beaver officiating. The funeral procession was very lengthy, as it passed thro' Mifflinburg numbering nearly seventy vehicles of various kinds, to which additions were made as it approached the church, increasing the number to 214 -probably the largest number ever in line on an occasion of this character in Union county. Many could not gain access to the church, all the seats and even the aisles beng taken up.—Myflinburg, (Pa.) Telegraph.

Prop. 2d. Buptist churches possess the Bible characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.

D. B. RAY, Affirms.

J. W. Stein, Denies. RAY'S 4TH APPERMENTALS

BHE repeated charge that we are "misrepreseeding the Brethren," is not true. But Mr. S. misrepresents our 5th Arg. We said: "Disciples made such by Jesus Christ are the dildren of God." Luke 14: 20-23. desus made disciples and then baptized them; therefore his example sustains the Baptist characteristic which demands sparitual regeneration and life morber to baptism and church membership Mr. S. admits that "death to sin should precede badism." Of such Paul says: "He that is dead s freed from sin." Therefore freedom from sin must precede baptism and church membership. lahis 2, Neg Mr. S. overthrows himself by raying, "Because we love the brethren is John's welcure of transition from death to life." A. love to the brethren-the children of God-is the Bible evidence of transition from death to ble. 2 Every one must love the brethren poor to haptism and church membership. 3 Therefore, every one must have evidence of tausition from death to life prior to haptism and church membership.

In his 4th affirmative Mr. S. surrendered thus. True haptism can only be received by one aft-"t he loves God." 2. But "love" is the evisence of transition from death to life." 3. Therefore, one must possess evidence of passing 'om death to life before true baptisms

In his 3d affirmative, he was driven to cones that: "We baptize those who are regenerded through the word " 2. Those who are regenerated through the word" are children of ind and possess sparitual life. 3. Therefore, acuding to Mr. Stein, the children of God pasing spiritual life, are the 'only proper subof haptism.

As Mr. S. concedes our position, that we are to be subject to the civil powers that be, that are ordained of God to bear the "sword" against evil doers, his batch of questions' concerning the evils of wars are not in point. He knows that Baptist churches neither make war, go to war, nor advocate war, with carnal weapons. He refuses to take back his rile and slanderous charges that Baptist churches have "legal license" to fulfill the lasts of the flesh. He does lings, and such like,"

In order to sustain the Tunker rendering of the Greek proposition els by la order to (Acts 2: 38) Mr. S. is forced to make baptism in order to repentance in Matt. 3: 11. He has confuted himself, as seen already. To make baptism a condition of repentance, is too lad.

Arg," based on the succession which he perverts, is valid. It is only pretense. We attend to the historic argument at the proper time. The attempt of Mr. S. to literalize the new birth by inventing "an intermediate state between begetting and hirth," has involved him in hopeless confusion. He has the sinner " hegotten by the word" even prior to repentance (see his 5th allirmative.)—In his 2d affirmative. be taught that those that "samply believed," were liable to the Savior's charge," ye are of your father the devil," and that the dead "faith, then must be vitalized by subjection to Christ's yoke,' in baptism. He evidently thinks that the cliddren of the devil, that simply believe, are "regencrated" and "begotten of Gud," and that they may remain imborn of God through life and "become abortives"! Such spiritual darkness can be felt. He ought to know that the terms "begotten" and "born," rendered from the same original, Genmo, are both alike applied to those who are already the children of God. These words denote that those to whom they are apphed are the offspring of God. The construction of the connections in which this original word is found, determines whether it should be rendered logation or born. Where there is but one parent the distinction between begetting and birth, is absurd and nonsensical. When we are "begotten" or "born of God," we are "made partakers of the divine inture," and are the children of God. The phrase "hegotten of God" is never, in the Bible, applied to an unboun "embeye It is always applied to those who have already been born of God. John says: "Every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten at him," I John 4: 1. Is it only the "carbego" here mentioned as loved? Again, John says: "We know that whosoever is born of tiod, sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepoth himself, and that wo ked one toncheth him not." I John 5: 18. But our triend has it that the "begotten of God" become "abortives" Depatten of God and born of God are used interchangably, and always denote the children of God.

In his attempt to answer our six questions Mr. S. has hong himself. I. He admits that om must have "spiritual life in embryo" prior to haptism. 2. "That one begotten may become abatrar," and be lost for want of bajdism. 3. That 'water is not the real mother of any one." 4 That there is but "one plan of salvation," in which baptism is a condition. 5 "That the thief was saved" without baptism Our friend seems to be in the condition of tipsy Paddy's spilt buttermilk-"Just laying loose about, generally." If these 'regenerated," begotten "abortives" are lost, what will our seattered friend do with himself for saying that, "The truly regenerate overcome the world?" (1st Neg.) Do "embryo" "abornves" "over come the world?" As there is but one plan of salvation, and that by bijdism, how did the thief get saved on another plan?

ed upon his talse accomptions a conceening wars, popul sparitually saved persons are entitled to they will not be appreparate till be proved his countries and church membership is enstained fleudish charge that Baptist churches grant 1 (c) "Not by works of righteousness which are not."

"legal liceuse" to fulfill "the works of the flesh." He did charge Buptist churches with all the crimes named in Gal 5: 19-21, though he only quoted a part of each verse. Paul says:

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleunness, laseiviousness, idelatry, witchcraft, hatred. variance, emulations, wrath strife, seditions, heresies, envying, munters, drunkenness, revel-

He must prove or withdraw these foul charges, or be advertised as a deliberate and wilful slanderer of the churches of Christ. He,in effect, repents the same bill of slanders in his last Negative, without one line of proof. When we made in allegation against his church claims we put in the proof. 2. We regard it as proper to bury in buptism Mr. S. does not believe that his "6th Neg. only those, who are "dead to sin," and made alive by the Spirit. In baptism we have both an emblematic burial and resurrection. The resurrection to spiritual life must precede the emblematic resurrection in baptism, otherwise the emblem would be false. 3. Christ's blood was shed before and after his death, as well as in it. 4. Believers should be baptized into the death of Christ, that is, "planted together in the likeness of His death," Hum 6; 5, 5, The Bible authority for happy saved guests at the marriage of the Lamb, is found in Rev. 10: 6-9 and 21; 24 = 0. The Buble does not say whether these "nations of them that are saved" will ever become part of the Bride City or not.

> His other questions are sufficiently met in our review.

> Will Mr. Stein try to maswer the following questions:

 As you hold that there is "an intermediate state between begetting" and the new birth, when one is "born of water," who, are what is his mother? 2. Did the thicf go to heaven without the new birth? Is it now possible for God to have a child been without a Tunker administrator to deliver the "embryo," which is not a child, into a state of childhood? 4. If there is only one plan of salvation, in which bajdism is essented, what did the Savior mean (huke 7: 50) when he said to the woman, "Thy forth hath saved thee; go in peace?" 5. Were those that had received the gift of the Holy Ghost and spake with tongues, baptized before, and in order to make them children of God? See Acts 10; 43–48. The answer,

Our 8th Arg, in support of the fundamental Baptist characteristic that demands spiritual regeneration, the new birth-and spiritual life as essential to baptism and church membership —is based on the fact that salcation, in the sense of pardon, is by grown without works. (a) "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. Now to him, that, worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace but of debt But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the imgodly, his faith is counted for righteousness. Even as David also describeth the idesseduess of the man, unto whom God importern righteousness without works," Bonn, 4:3-9.

Paul did not appose good works, but he did ageise works as a condition of pardon and salvation. But if salvation depends on haptism or church membership, then it depends on works This cannot be, therefore, this Baptist peculiarity is sustained.

(b.) "For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gilt of God: Not of works lest any man should heast, For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God both before ordained that we should walk in them." Eph

Bajdism and joining the church, are suchal ed "in good works," but salvation is "not of As to his twenty questions, more or less thas | works;" therefore our doctrine that none ix have done, but according to his mercy he saved ns, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on as nbundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior." Titus 3: 4, 5,

Being haptized and uniting with the church are "works of righteousness which we have done," Our friend's doctrine contradicts Paul by making salvation by baptism and church membership. But "according to his mercy be saved us" "not by works of righteousness." Therefore, the Baptist characteristic that demands spiritual life, which is embraced in being saved, as independent of, and essential to baptism and church membership, is sustained by the Scriptures.

PREDICTION ABOUT 1880, AND 1887.

SELECTED BY T. G. SNYDER.

N a phomplet recently published, the author, Prof. Grimmer, asserts: "From 1880, to 1887 will be one universal carnival of death." Asia will be depopulated; Europe nearly so, America will lose lifteen million people. Besides plagues, we are to thave storms and tidal waves; mountains are to "loss their heads through the choisest valleys," Navigation will be lost by the thousands, owing to the "capracious differences or the magnetic needle," and islands will appear in mid ocean. All the beasts, irds and fithes will be discused; famine and civil strife will destroy most of the human beings left abive by the plague, and finally, "two years of fire" from 1885 to 1887, will rage with tary in every part of the globe. In 1887 the Star of Bethlehem will reappear in Cassipa's Chair. The immediate result being universal, war and protentials floods and shipwrecks North America is again to be involved in civil war, unless a "Napoleon arises to quell it. But during the these terrible days, the Pacific States will be a paradise of peace to the hellish strife that will be waging throughout the world." The few people that managed to survive till 1857 will have reason to be thankful.-From The Sunday Times,

AN ANECDOTE OF GARIBALDI!

NE evening in 1861, as Gen. Garibaldi (wa) going home, he met a Sardinian shepherd lamenting the loss of a lamb out of his flock Gardaddrat once turned to his staff and acnounced his intention of scouring the mountain m search of the lamb. A grand expedition was organized. Lanterns were brought, and old officiers of many a campaign started off full of zeal to hunt the lugitive. But no lamb wasfound, and the soldiers were ordered to their beds. The next morning Gardbaldi's attendant 'found hon in bed fast usleep. He was surprised at the for the general was always up before anybody else. The attendant went off softly and returned in half an hour. Garibaldi still slept. Arer another delay the attendant waked him. The general rubbed his eyes, and so did his attendant, when he saw the old warmer take from the der the covering the lost lamb, and bid him convey it to the shepherd. The general had kept up the search through the night until he had found it. Even so doth the Good Shejherd go in search of his lost sheep until he finds them.—Sel.

"THE TIME IS SHORT."

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

TME Spring-time and Summer have vanished The beautiful flowers have gone, The trees are disrobed of their foliage, And the wood-land minstrels have flown.

We have reached the bleak month of November, And witness the Winter's gloom; Oh, may we poor mortals remember, That we're passing away to the tomb.

The beauties of youth are declining. The world fades away with its charms, And soon we will lie with pale faces. Enveloped in death's cold arms.

Porget not the Biblical sentence, Disclosed by the servant of God, And with vigilance wait for the summons, When life's troubled journey is trad.

Let each soldier be prompt at his station, And the watchword of Jesus retain, Lest be meet us in dread consternation, When he comes in his glory to reign.

Are we waiting and watching, my brethren, Equipped with the armor of light? Do we trim our lights? are they burning? Can we hail his return with delight?

CONFIDENCE.

BY JOHN POBNEY.

∩ONFIDENCE means, 1st, act of contidence or belief in the reality of a fact or the integrity and veracity of another; 2nd, or, that in which faith is put. Webster.

We must therefore conclude that it requires certain things to establish confidence, and nothing is better calculated to establish it permanently in one another than to be true to one another in all our business transactions in life with each other. For example, how does the little innocent child get confidence in his parents? We answer by the faithful watchful care and true nots of kindness the father and mother bestow upon it. When hungry they fed it: when naked clothed it; when in distress they comforted it, when it fell down they raised at up, and even showed a willingness to render its life happy. Here are the evidences that convinces the child that his parents are a safe refuge to whom it can free in time of danger, and call on them when in want. 3rd. For confidence also areans a feeling of security, self-reliance, frust, affiance, assurance, boldness, conrrege, and is a characteristic that is highly necessary for man in all loisiness transactions in life. If he ever expects to make a success in the same, to enjoy a happy reward as a result of his under-Raking, and unless a man has confidence in what he undertakes, he will fail in rany loisiness, and will suffer loss and shame to himself instead of gain and nappliness. For example, a man may own a farm and if he has no confidence. a faming and withholds the seed when seed time is here, because he conjectures - age unseen difficulty of insects or lather mise - that will couse him to turn a way in despendency this man cannot expect ex more than an unprofitable and i southly production of domonous weeds of bary of time; while the one that had athle nee in Providence sawed his seed. the proper time, could look forward with a hope of a rich harve t. and comfort in life as it becometh a husband And just as little is a woman fit to marry unless she has the same confidence in the man she marries. This holy confidence must be established upit is in the child by the parents, by acts of love and kindness that will create a confidence that they can trust their life to detract from the value of the senses, and their all in each others care. When a lack of this holy confidence is in one or the other, it will make life miserable and unhappy to the innocent party, as well as to the guilty one.

No man would volunteer to be a soldier had he not confidence that he could not gain the victory over the enemy and have a reward for his labor, much less would one offer himself to become a President had he no confidence that he could fill his office as a ruler of the great untion of Λ merica. But the nation must also have confidence in him or his undertaking will prove an entire failure: and this confidence cannot exist without good evidence on both sides, and in case this confidence is lost, there will be rebellion, war, and blood shed.

If confidence on the part of the human family is so necessary to accomplish the desired ends of reward and happiness in this life, how much more is it essential for the Christian to have an unshaken confidence in all his undertakings and transactions in his Christian life. If I had neconfidence in God and his Word, how could I become a Christian? And this confidence must also be established upon testimony, and these God has bountifully given. He sent his Son to redeem and raise him up again, and still continues to give us rain from heaven and make the earth fruitful, and often tills our hearts with gladness. "Behold what manner of love the Eather hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God." Why, dear reader, he took our infirmities and our sin and laid them all on his Son who hore them willingly in his own body up to Calvary's Mount, where he tasted death for you and me. Oh, dear reader! are not these evidences powerful enough to convince you of the heavenly Father's love? to put full confidence in him! And give also love him because he first loved you? This you must show by keeping his commandments.

SKEPTICISM.

BY PROPERANCEURING

MONG the most important influences A that have been brought to bear upon the different religious and philosophical systems of the world, may be mentioned the tendency to skepticism, By skepticism we mean the habit of mistrusting evidence, though the term is more commonly employed as relating to certain kinds of evidence, and especially to evidence of a religious ustine.

It is not strange that among the conflicting theories of philosophy and morals, such a tendency should arise. The history of philosophy is in the main, but the history of two great systems, the sensational and the ideal. From them have -pring all the minor schools of philoso- of the present day may be referred. play, and, in one form or the other, they are said that confid are is a char-banve shown thems lives in the religious spetch nedeed. No man is fit to ling systems we find that in every age a wearan unless he can have ex I membaye can to extremes in one of these woman, that he can live with her and osopher become absorbed in investigatenjoy her society, and give her support | ing the facts of sensation, when the number, variety and magnitude of the phenomens seem to overwhelm him, and he have not sinued, we make him a liar and makes sensation the basis of every mental state, while he disparages the value of the other faculties. On the other on the same principle in one another as hand, let the metaphysician become wrapped in the contemplation of the powers of reason, and he begins at once and to look with contempt upon all experimental knowledge.

> As these tendencies are followed up to their legitimate results, we find the first leading to egotism in morals, atheism in religion, and materialism in philosophy; while in the latter case they have given rise to religious rationalism, to fatalism, and ultimately to complete pantheism. When, therefore, either of these systems has been carried to such an extent that it could no longer impose upon the cre dulity of mankind, skepticism has sprung up, or, in other words, the common sense of mankind has rebelled against the current philosophy of the age.

> Had skepticism been content to keep within its proper limits, and to confine uself to the task of exposing the errors in the different systems of philosophy, it would have been the means of accomplishing much good in the world; but like the philosophies which it was endeavoring to expose, it, too, ran to an extreme, and culminated in the assertion that no possible system of philosophy can develop any truth whatever with absolute certainty.

This spirit of skepticism has shown itself in three principal forms, called absolute skepticism, authoritative skepticism and the skepticism of ignorance, Absolute skepticism consists in that disposition of mind which denies the certainty of any kind of knowledge. It is rarely found, and when it does appear it is only among the more thinking classes of mankind. It has its best representative in the person of David Hume, who having gone, as he thought, to the very liettom of the foundations of the conflicting schools of sensationalism, and rationalism, reached the conclusion that neither our sensations not our reasoning faculties can be relied upon, and that the acquirement of positive knowledge to him the required testimony that you of any kind is an impossibility. This branch of skepticism has not, to our knowledge, any distinguished representative at the present time.

The next branch that we shall notice, the skepticism of ignorance, is confined to an entirely different class of men. It is peculiar to the less educated and more unthinking portion of mankind. It is this kind of skepticism that has marked the great periods of ambeliat that have existed at different times in the world's history. Current systems of belief will from various causes, become shaken to their very centers, and the people, sympathizing in the work of destruction, will corry it on till every vestige of their former faith is swept away. The next generation will grow up juneducated in any belief, and a skepticism will follow, not resulting from any designed rejection of the spiritual faith of markind, lait from ignorance of what there is to behave in. It is to this cause that much of the religious skepticism and infidelity

COMPLETE SANCTIFICATION.

MY W. H. WILLIAM

ZHAT is sanctification? Some say it mems to be holy, pure, elevateddence in himself and in the two directors. Hardly does the philocol above sin. Ac. They further say that they have not sinned for four or five years, and that they have no sin, and when you quote to them, "If we say we his word is not in ns." 1. John 1: 10 They reply that they have no desire to sin. Neither have we a "desire" to sin, but we do not claim to be perfectly holy and pure.

To be sanctified is to be set apart Christ's prayer was, "sanctify them through thy truth." They were set apart for the service of God, they were chosen out of the world; hence they were set apart from the world-were sanctified through the truth.

Another fact is, that we "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth," How could we "grow" if we were al. ready grown. It is impossible for us to be entirely without impurity-though we might not desire to sin. To be whol. ly sanctified is to be set apart from this world.

FIVE REASONS FOR NOT ATTEND. ING PUBLIC WORSHIP.

HY JOHN CALVIN BRHGHT,

TMRST, "I wor ked hard all week and I, as we llasmy team, am very tired," Why did you not use a little foresight? You knew that this day was set apart for the worship of God, and you should not have exerted yourself to such an extent that you would be too tired to meet in the sanctuary of the Lord. Besides von had six days to labor in your tem. poral affairs, and are you too much fatigued to spend one in the interest of the immortal soul?

- 2. "The roads are too bad." How did they get in such a plight? Did you not help to get them in that condition by hawling away your grain? Or if you were sure of making one hundred dol. lars by traveling them to-morrow, would you not do so! Would not that consideration improve them considerably? "And whatshall a man give in exchange for his soul (" "What shall it profit a man if be gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"
- 3. "The weather is too inclement, too hot or too cold." There it is again. But I ask what were you doing all week? Was the weather too warm to harvest the golden grain, or too cold to market it? If not, you should hold your peace, Besides, did not be who made the weather give the command—"not neglecting the assembling of yourselves together"? Λ nd does he not know how to "temper the wind to the shorn lamb"?
- 4. "Brother X, will do the preaching, and he always has the same old song." Of what are your daily meals composed! Is not the bulk of them the same, year in, year out? Would you like to do without them? Or rather, are you not very thankful for them! Then you should be satisfied if your spiritual food is materially the same Truth never becomes unpalatable to a healthy stomach. And perhaps you have not masticated, digested, and been ininted with the doctrine of the "old sons." Besides if you heal to take brother X's place it is quite probable that you would addices well as he does. THE WONDERFUL NAME, AND THE WHEREFORE.

A Christmas Contribution.

BY C. H. BALSEAUGH.

EDICATED to a Saint at Zarephath, who is a widow woman, and to all who relish the dainties of the Celestral Banquet. It is my Christmas Gift to the Israel of God, seasoned with the Love that bleeds for sinners, and dooms them eternally if they live and die in sin. May the Name of Jesus be "as ointment poured forth" to every reader, and may it flow as rivers of water in the self sacrifleing lives of us all.

The Old Testament is not obsolete. Christ antedated His Incarnation, and filled the Old Economy in all its minutia with himself. So he also reaches back and comprehends in His Person as Godman of all dispensations. Old names and old localities, old institutions and events are replete with present interest and instruction. Zarephatle is still the smelting place of the King's gold for beautifying the Heavenly Temple. There the handful of meal and the few drops of oil are still the standing miracle of faith.

"A name above every name." We cannot refer to the august Title without touching a principle that runs through the Universe like a thread through a handful of beads. "He was hefore all things, by Him ALL THINGS CONSIST. Col. 1: 17. Jesus has many Namesseveral hundred—not one of which would be a source of hope and joy to sinners, had He not also this Name above us, for us. Jesus is the mighty, thrilling, updifting Surname, summing up all the marvelous evolutions of God and man in the Divine Prodigy of Nazareth. The Name of names which Paul utters with such holy vehemence as the crown ing glory of the Eternal Tranity, is a Resurrection-name, a Post crucifixion-cognomen, a Name that stands for all that God has done for man and all that man must be in God. Faith in Jesus is something so profound, so high, so vast, so far-reaching, that all the cycles of an Endless Future of ever-unfolding reve lation will never compass its significance. "Let every one that nameth the Name of Christ depart from all iniquity," is the key-note of every God-quickened, blood-washed, spirit-sealed soul on earth. 2 Tim. 2: 19. "Unto Him that LOVED (s, and mushed us from our sins in his own microp, and leath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father; to HIM be glory and deminion, FOREVER Axionalia, Amen," will be the rapturous. ever-deepening hosanua of the redeem ed in the sinless, deathless, painless, sor rowless, nightless Paradise of Jesus.

Something of the significance which the Name Jesus has to Himself must attach to as before its virtues and heat itudes can become our life, our joy, our and profit; but that the authors are am-

But heirs with Him. "Thou shalt call His that will not justify you in disobeying Name JESUS, FOR He shall SAVE His the apostolic injunction, "oot assembling people FROM THEIR SINS." Matt. of yourselves together." Think what 1:21. "Being found in fashion as a man, He humbled himself, and became one-DIENT UNTO DEATH, even the DEATH OF THE CROSS." Philpp. 2: 8, O the heights and depths of these wondrous revelations of Love. Here the heart of God is not only laid bare, but gashed and laid open to the astonished gaze of Heaven, earth, and hell. As Emmanuel became Jesus, so we become saints. No Savior without the Cross; no Christian without conformity to the image of In carnate Deity. Shunning the Cross means courting Hell.—Pampering and petting any sin-begotten propensity of body or soul, is to wag the head and spew contempt at the pain quivering, soul-harrowed, groaning, bleeding, dy ing Jehovah Jesus. To such Jesus is not Jesus except that He saves His own honor in their everlasting damnation. "He saved others, Himself He cannot save," was perhaps—the—bitterest, most satanic, most soul-stinging taunt that lacerated the sensibilities of Jesus during His ministry of sacrifice on earth. He swed Himself even while the cruel aeristons of His murderers were ringing in His ears, and He will in like manner save Himself as He thrusts all opposers and mockers and self-pleasers into bottourless perdition. What on earth are called conventionalities, and personal privileges, and harmless indulgences, are registered in Eternity as "enmity to the Cross of Christ." Philipp. 3: 18,19. What is winked at by the church, is branded by the Cross as "filthy lucre," the "worship of mammon," "uncleanness," "spir itual wickedness," and moral rottenness The all-overshadowing, All-penetrating Name is only another spelling for holiness and righteoneness, and salvation by self-crucifixion, blood and death. It means "wrath, tribulation, and anguish" for many a pet habit which custom has white-washed with the sanctions of manmade religion. The devil has the upperhand in many things in Christendom. every name-Justs. Emmanuel is the on which flesh-mursing, would-be Chris Root-name, the bottomless Fountain of tians vainly strive to print the awful, Mystery and Love, "God with us," in pride-blasting, lust canterizing Name of hell-tasting, of the eternally memorable New York Independent, entitled "Literal Errors and Material Truths in Scripture;" and the pictures of the family of accertain pulpit celebrity, which recently appeared in a Religious Magazine. Distinguished editors and famous preachers are trying hard to prove that the Cross offers a premium to "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life." To preach against sin in the ale struct with the tongues of men and angels," and then endorse the trash and flash and dash of fashion, is making the Name of Jesus the synonym of iniquity. Place side by side the thorn crowned, sin-hearing, prote-damning Emmanuel. and the pictures referred to, and what Christ loving, sin-hating, self-loathing soul can help being shocked at the contrast! O miserable corruption of the doctrine of the Cross. To follow in the footsteps of the despised and rejected Carpenter- -Savier, and make our life the embodiment of the petition, "hallowed by thy Name," is to be the laughingstock of those whose lame, as struth expaumders and gaspel defenders, is echo ing round the world. Many of the pasductions of these intellectual Collaths I

"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." This is salvation. In this we lose the consciousness of sio in the consciousness of God. Let us not forget that to lose the sense of condem. nation is not oecessarily acquaintance with Jesus, whose office it is to save from sin. Placidity may come from iodifference and insensibility, as well as from faith and love. Let this mind be in you"—the mind to stoop, to spend yourself for righteousness to give your last drop of blood, your last spark of life, in the struggle against sin, in the preservation of moral integrity. This did Emmanuel, and thus became the fulfillment of his prophetic infant Namethou shalt call Him Jesus. The ing significance, what unutterable emsacrifice and yet retention of his eternal dignity and glory, or the endless damnation of the human race: this was the alternative. "He was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the like ness of man; and being found in fash. ion as a man HE HEMBLED HIMSELF," and stooped lower and lower, till his obedience brought him face to face with the direful ultimate wages of sm, and he hung upon the Cross the poorest, most despised, most accursed, and yet most glorious, most victorious of Beings. From the Throne of Light and Universal Empire to the darkness and seclusion of a vestal prison, then to the manger and swaddling-bands, then to the toil and sweat and weariness of a poor man's craft, then to the symbolic grave of sin and death, to the wilderness to confront the person and bear the wiles and taunts and temptations of the archifiend, then to the trials and vigils and labors and tears and heart-aches of a rejected ministry, then down, down to the central midnight and horror and soul-anguish of Gethsemane, then deeper down to the lash and spitting, the mockery and treachery, the injustice and barbarism of the Pretorium, and then to the lowest depths of humiliation and ignominy and Jesus. Witness a late editorial in the Golgotha. Such was the descent of the Son of God to redeem us from sin and its woful issues. He humbted himself, HUMBLEIChimself, and HUMBLED himself till he was low enough to atone for the vilest sin, to taste death for every man, make salvation possible to the blackest, most sin-disfigured soul, break the scepter of Hell, and satisfy every jot and tittle of the everlasting righteousness of Jehovah. Now comes Paul raje turous, triumphant, angel-chorusing, God-endorsing "WHEREFORE" in Philipp. 2: 9. O the height and depth, length and breadth of the mystery of Divine Love! How tender, how selfsacrificing, yet how stern, how inexorable, how indissolubly wedded to Rightcousness! How high, how ecstatic, how glorious its Heaven! How deep, how dark, how horrible, how hopeless its Hell! Love reaches through Righteons ness and impales its only begetten. Dar ling on the Cross, and sends all the finally impenitent into the anutterable tor ment of unquenchable fire. Righteons ness reaches through Love and placks hell kindled souls from the smoulderings of sin, and lifts them above Augels in the blessed sonship of Divinity into the Heaven of Heavens, in co-heirship with a hoire, and read them with pleasure Finananuclassing forever in the scale of better than the mighty."

wisdom and bliss and dignity and adoration! So the Son of God became JEsus. So He gave himself into the hands of Infinite justice, and the abuse of men and devils, and became our Sin-hearer, our Hell-averter. "Whenerone God hath also highly exalted Him, and given Him a Name which is above every name: that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in Heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth: and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father." Philpp. 2: 9-11. O with what amazement and awe must the seraphim and chernhim, the principalities and powers in the Celestial Realm, ponder these words! And how full of interest and solemnity to us whose sin necessitated all this Divine sacrifice and humiliation!

In view of these facts of overwhelmphasis the Cross presses into these words— "LET THIS MIND BE IN YOU WHICH WAS ALSO IN CHRIST JESUS." Words so pregnant with the meaning of God and eternity, that to pronounce them with due force Deity wandered in the dust of His footstool in human form thirty three years, and at last burst his Divine-human Heart in a cry of agony to give vent to all the depth and fulness of their overpowering significance! Who will make them the nnalterable, ever-brightening, ever-gladdening, ever sanctifying motto of life here and forever? Who will venture to step where Jesus has not left his footprint? Who will dare to cherish thoughts and desires alien to the mind of Christ! Who will deal with self more indulgent than the Pattern which made the Cross the power of God unto salvation? Who? Hear the awful verdict of Heaven: "FET HIM HE ANATHEMA MARANA. THA."

FASHIONABLE KINDNESS.

WISDOM and fashion are seldom company for each other. Hospitality, meant to be kindly and genial, becomes, under the influence of fashion, fatiguing to one party and oppressive to the other. Measured by the standard of common sense, must we not regard it a foolish sacrifice of personal comfort for a whole family to be subjected to fatigue duty for days before and after a dinner? And for what end? Ostensibly to give pleasure to a certain number of friends, the guests on the occasion, but the real effect is to make them sick.

Instead of "do let me send you some more of this mock turtle," "Another piece of pie?" "Sir, some of this trifle:" "I must insist on your trying some of this nice melon," the language of sincer ity would run as follows: "Pray let me have the pleasure of giving you a touch of the gout;" "Sir, let me help you " a sick-headache." "Madam you cannot surely refuse a crop of pimples and blotches on that face of yours."—SC.

BROTHER and Sister Norman, of Le Sueur County, Minnesota are actively engaged in their Muster's work. From house to house, on the highways, in season and out of season, they earnestly contend for the faith. Bible in hand, they fearlessly contend for the primitive practice of our Lord and Master. One hundred such workers would in a few years almost reform the State.

We are glad to learn from the Progressive Christian that Bro. Bushor was more than a match for Mr. Bergstresser in the debate at Wayneshoro, Pa. The discussion lasted five days, and a report will be given in psimphlet form. It is gratifying to note that the profits arising from the sale of the report is to be used m mission work. May the Lord bless Bro. B. and enable him to go on defending the truth of Jesus. We regret that we could not be present to hear the debate.

It has been a custom among papers to issue but fifty numbers during the year, and into this custom we have fallen; not that we wish to avoid doty, but it enables us to put thing in order for another year. At this time of the year publishers have an immerise amount of work to do, hence they take the two weeks vacation to put things in order. We shall, however, hereafter, issue fitty-two numbers, and try so to arrange our business as to accommodate our patrons, whether we are accommodated or not. The first number of next year, will be sent out so as to reach the readers about January 1st, Bree J. G. Winey of John Co., Mich , sends a report of their Bible School with the following result. Average number teachers, 5; Average number juipils, 43; number versus committed to memory about, 1,500; No Children at Work distributed, 800, and adds: "It is an evident fact that while childrin, and adults too, are at the house of worship they can not at the same time rove through the woods, with gun in hand, or along thestreams fishing, or mother mischief. Children must and will do something. Better take them with you to the house of the hord and spend a few hours in reading and modifuting upon God's word?

The fairth rule of the new plan of holding the General Conference reads thus;

"The members of the church in which the meeting is held, shall be exonerated from paying the amount that others shall pay. And the Committee of Arrangements sloif decide, who are entitled to exomeration, besides, the longregation in which the meeting is held, for scryie s rendered,'

A GLANCE BACKWARD.

▲ GAIN old father Time tells us that moth- er year is almost finished and that we are rapidly nearing our graves. All along the highway of life, God has been good to us, and with grateful hearts we look inc to him for what we have enjoyed.

The year that is just closing has been one full of jev to many hearts, and great sadness to others. Upon one hand health and prosperity have smiled, while on the other sorrow, sickness and adversity have haid hold of many dear souls. Amidst them all, we trust great good his resulted. It is a blessed thing to possess godliness with contentment.

The past year has witnessed many changes we believe for the better. Thousands have holdiv confessed Christ, put him on, fled from sin, and are now living in the light of God's eternal truth. Many of the brethren have traveled to and fro, persuading men to repent, while others have from time to time fed the fleck over which the Holy Ghost made them overseers. While many may monra because they have not been diligent arough in the Master's work, not one of us can weep because we have done too much. Some of us may shed tears because we gave "filthy Incre" too much attention, but who of us are sorrowfal because we gave much attention to the things which are from above? Who is mourning because he has sown the seed of truth? Not one; but on the other hand are not some sorrowful because their affections have been largely set upon the things of the earth? Will we, by God's grace

During the year Ashland College, and

Mt. Morris College have been opened to all who desire to prepare themselves more thoroughly for the active duties of life, while Huntugdon Normal has 'given evidence of increased zeal and energy in the work of training the mind. No doubt many brethren to contend for the whole truth. Our promises and si-ters who are attending these schools, are for field work are about all filled, hence we exmuch more imppy than if they were attending . schools not conducted by brethren. We pray God that those minds may be sanctified through the truth, so that God may be glorified and the church strengthened. We wish also to note that the year just closing has witnessed the introduction of increased mediums for the dissemination of truth. The Gospel Princher, Ashland. Ohio, stepped forth as a defender of truth, and has been gently knocking at the door of many hearts with its hand of love. The Progressive Christian, Berlin, Pa., with boldness declared its determination to fight sin and hold aloft the banner of King Emanuel. Our Sumbry School, Ashland, Ohio, addressed itself to the little folks and the Sunday School teachers, and now having taken unto itself the Young Disciple as a hasband, declares its determination to continue its weekly visits to all who shall give it an invitation. The Brethren's Advocate, Wayneshoro, Pa., we believe, is still. moving onward, and with its parpose to make people better, may it find lodgment in many families. We have now noticed, briefly, the progress of our church literature, and hope that all our cost injournies may be able to do much good with us in the name of Jesus. Towards them all we wish more and more to cultivate feelings of brotherly love; and while we are engaged in a good and noble cause, may we labor for that Christian character which was elemplified by our Master. We each have our way of feaching school, and the readers of our periodicals are the proper judges as to the merits of the various methods. Principles change not; their application, however, is varied.

Perhaps in opening up Bible Schools, the Brethren have, during the year, advanced more rapidly than in any other work. Many places now for the first time witness old and young assemiding to read and study the Word on the books day. Thousands to verses have been memorized to be used in years to come. Things have been made plain by reasoning together, thus brotherly love is no reised.

To missionary labors the church in many places, has been quite active. Evangelists have gone forth, and anodst severe tools and stringgles, scores of precions souls have been brought to Unrist. On the whole we can book back on this Christian labor with a considerable degree of sidisfaction; yet much more might be done of all were aroused. May the coming year find none falling behind in this hely work. We are writing this in the Central part of Minnesota, in a community whore only a few days ago he the pel was preached for the first time. We see the need of more workers, and greater efforts to reach those who are not obeying all the commands of the Gospel. In fact we have and are experiencing something that will do us good; and it several thousand others would travel over the road of experience, perhaps they would find food that would make them strong in the Lord.

"Have we gained in picty and humility?" queries one. We can not speak for all, but we unhisitatingly say that wherever we have been during the year we have seen many changes for the better. In regard to uniformity and plainness of dress, despate the many cries of departures, we have noticed a marked change in tayor of uniformity. We speak in a general sense, and we have confidence that when people once learn the jamendes underlying the dress question very few will desire to follow the absoninable fashions of the world. There are other things which we would with pleasure observe, but we are weary and worn with labours, hence commend all the loved ones to the grace of God, trusting as we grow in years and expe rieuce, we may more fully learn God's will and at last meet in the beautiful beyond.

We make but few promises rather preferring to do more than we are will ing to promise. We expect the assistance of you all, and invite every one to labor with us in making the Brethren AT Work a complete missionary paper-one that will sound out the Gospel in its primitive simplicity with great holdness. HELL-INGERSOLL CONVERTED

NUMBER III.

Of course it does. Yes, it teaches not only the existence of a God, but also of a devil. God has to have a home; that home is heaven. The Devil, too, has to have a home; that home is hell. People have imagined many things concerning both these places. The Bible does not give us a complete programme of the exercises of either of them, but it does teach us the horrors of the one exceed our wildest imagination, while the glory of the other is beyond all present human comprehension.

Infidels say the Bible teaches witchcraft, Who ever learned witchenft from the Bible? Let us have the chapter and verse where it is taught. Does the Bible not teach that witcheraft is an abomination to God? Would God oppose bimself? Suppose Saul did go to a witch of Endor who was said to have a "familiar spirit." Do we read that she got it from the Bible or from God? Now if God and the Bible teach witcheraff, then all witches would be children of God, heirs of the promise, and what could be more absentd than to imagine brothren and sisters persecuting each other instead of a com-

The Bible records events as they appeared and not necessarily as they actually were. If the Bilde narrative would not correspond with what the people's ideas or impressions of it, whether their ideas or impressions were correct or not, how could they regard it as a faithful record? What would be the sense of preserving the history of a thing m such a way that those who were eye witnesses of it would not recognize it? Shall we charge such folly upon an all-wise God? Then instead of the fact that the Bible recognizes such a thing as witchraft being any evidence against it, it only shows how minutely, accurately, faithfully, the Bible describes and records events which took place in its time, and is therefore an evidence of its veracity. Mr. Ingersoll in his lecture on hell, next takes the history of the temptation of Christ by the Devil; and asks, if any one can believe that the devil actually did do these things; just as if he did not know that the meet intelligent of thousands living and millions dead do believe and did believe it. Next asks, in reference to the narration where Christ met the man with the unclean spirit m the country of the Gadarenes and granted the spirit's request to enter a herd of swine, which, when the spirit had entered them, at once ran over a precipice and perished in the sea-he asks whether reasonable men in this nmetrenth century should believe this to be an actual occurrence, and then adds, "If my salvation depends upon believing that I am lost," just as if the trath of it depends upon whether he beheves it and was saved or not! But we can't tell but what he does believe it; for he feaches that it is better to lie than to receive the punishment which truth would entail. Hear what he says about lying. "Suppose your child tells a he. Don't pretend the whole world is going into bankruptcy. Don't pretend that that is the first lie ever told. Tell fliem, like an honest man, that you have told hundreds of lies yourself---- * * * * Suppose a man as much larger than we are as we are larger than rehild five years old, should come at us with " liberly pole in his hands and in tones of thunder want to know "who broke that plate," there would not swear that we had never seen that plate in all our lives, or that it was cracked when we got it. Here then we have the infidels regard for truth. He would choose between telling a lie and the truth wholly on the grounds as to which would pay the best! Now since no church would pay him to plead her gause what infidels do for ridiculing it, and since he would just as soon tell a lie as the iruth, when he asserts a thing how are we to knew whether he has told the truth or not?

Simply by finding out whether it would pay! Mr. Ingersoll next pitches into the Bible for teaching slavery. He wholly neglects the canses by which man fell into slavery. Suppose a visitor from some foreign land should come to the United States and visit our prisons, juls and penterturies, and then return home and report what a set of tyrants, oppossors and persecutors the people of the United States are, telling about the convicts of the prisons and penitentiaries, &c., what would be your opinion of him? Would you not regard him as a hase impostor, a narrow-minded, bigoted fanatactor a prejudiced iduat? Then what must we think of a man who does the same thing with the lible and the church?

Mr. Ingersall next redicules the Bible for what it teaches in Eph. 6: 5; 1 Peter 2: 18, 19; Expdus 21: 7-11, and then for what is said about Jephtha's daughter and Job. He (not the Bible but Ingersoll) says, "Servants, he obedient to your mustcas," is the substation of the meet in certal God to one who works for noth ing and who receives upon his maked back the lash as legal tender for service performed? "Servants, be obedient to your master's, is the salutation of the most merciful God to the slave mother bending over her infant's grave. 'Servants, be obedient to your masters,' is the salutation to a man endeavoring to escape pursuit, followed by savige blood hounds". Where do we read anything like such stuff in the Bible? thre us the chapter and verse where, " 'Servalues, he obedient to your masters, is the sainhitrar of the most mercital God to one who works for nothing and who receives upon his naked back the lash, as legal tender for service performed," or "of a slave mother bending over her inland's grave," or "of a man endeavoring to escape pursuit, followed by sarage bloodhounds". Away with such atrocious misrep resentations! If matters not what some minister or commentator says, but where does the Bible teach any such barbarism? If the gateof Heaven stood open to receive men, who would thus misrepresent and falsify the grandest truths ever divulged to man-we ask, if the gates of Heaven stood open to receive such, what would be the difference between such a place and hell? As additional evidence of how untair, biased and sophistical infidels are, we call your attention to the following circular, advertising Ingersoll's lectures:

The Tribute Tribe excited the hyteolog the A hursh and the se wanted of the anti-liggent and generous, they are demonreed by all electrica Graning, In shirting, by the bestors of wines, the whippers Laddicus the le fevers in JoH, the Judge of presizes the despess of tensors for all the somework with row less, by the determines of the short action of the hypothese tribe firms. It assumes and insimilates that all Christians are ignorant, stingy, "believers in tyrany and slavery," "beaters of wives," "whippers of children," "baters of progress," "despisers of reaon," "cringers and crawlers," "defamers of the dead," and "hypocrites." Where is there a church in all this broad land that would own members, who could be honestly stigmatized with any such epithets? To know what Christianity does for woman let Dr. Jessup tell us how she is treated in heather countries.-

BIG I.

PIG I represents the amount of selfishness a lion in our language—in the name of principle, D man possesses. With some it is the whole man. Take it away and nothing remains. It is the outside, inside, and middle of him.

If he be a farmer all grain that has not been sown at the time and put in the ground in the way he does, or says it should be done, is all wrong and will never be worth anything. If he be a school-teacher, all knowledge not imparted according to his infallible rules is worthless. If he he a student, all knowledge attained in any other way, and from any other source. than from that which he attained his is deceptive and fidse. If he be a minister nobody can preach right who less not knelt at his feet, and been taught by him. If he be an editor, no other paper is worth anything except us it is like his own. Rather than that any body should surpass him in farming, he would prefer universal famine. Rather than that any body should surpass him in teaching he would prefer that all school-houses be destroyed. Rather than that any body should surpass him in learning he would prefer there were no teachers nor books. Rather than any body should surpass him in the ministry he would prefer there were no churches. Rather than any one should surpass bon in editing he would prefer there were no papers. If big I cannot be the top and bottom and middle he would rather see the pale hand of death single all mankind, and the gloom and sensuality of ignorance and the theckness of crime sweep from the earth all virtues and blessings.

There is no sphere in this world that he can call his own. Dronkards spurn him because he is too stingy to "treat." Gamblers hate him because he won't play unless he knows he can win. He seeks only his own good, his men glory, his men exaltation. He would let an orplain freeze to death on his own door step, or starve to death under his own table. No, there is no place in this world be can call his own. He is a curse to the church and a stigma to the world. Now need we say such persons have no Christ in their souls? There is no more concord between them and Christ than there is between Christ and Behal. Christ dwells no more in them than by does in devils. While the angels weep over them, devils clap their hands and shout and roar nebellish joy. A selfish man a Christian! as well call a Chimpauzee a Christian! Bless God, there is no glock by which selfishness, that Mig I," can be screened from the eye and contempt of the church and the world. All efforts to do so are fruitless. No garb of accomplishments candinde it. Gibl a man with education, set in him the day merels of experience, surround him with an the embellishments of society, and the neres of wealth-yel all these cannot so enease the horeven the eye of the prattling labe will see and shrink in horror from it. Oh, how dark the heart of the sellish man! No ray of Gospel light ever reaches his hell benighted soul! No wooing of the spirit has ever cooled his fiery lorain. No emetion of love for lord or lady. man, woman, or child, has ever swelled his soul! No appreciations of other's works, virtues or accomplishments have ever given him one moment of pleasure.

He works for destruction. He longs to sit high above his fellows on the tower of fame and power. With fearful eyes he sees others far above himself. The object of his black heart's desires can only be accomplished by demolishing the work of his fellows. He has neither the desire nor adulity to rise higher than they are. Their tower is built of deeds of honesty, charity and benevolence. Of these he has none, But he is determined to be almer. To do this he seeks to bring his fellows buc. How does he do this? He throws up a fort of ambiguity. Behind this he plants his battery of public speech and print. He then opens fire on them with the shot and chell of slander, base insinuations and misrepresentations. One comes "neither eating nor drinking" and he says "he liath a devil." Another comes "eating and drinking" and he says "a man gluttenous and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sin-

HOME AGAIN

S already announced, Bro. D. M. Miller and A – the writer began meetings in Ripon, Wisconsin, Nov. 22nd, and remained lour days, preaching six sermons. Interest good. On the 27th we started for Le Sueur County, Minuesota, the home of brother and sister Norman, arriving there the 29 h, and commenced meeting in the Disciple church the same evening. We would like right here to give a full account of the contest for truth while in Minnesota but heave that for him who "Chronicles." We anjoy carnest, active work and when men withstand the truth, we feel like being David all the time in Gol's hand to meet the Goliah's. The Lord has a people in Le Sucur county, Minnesota, and will call them out shortly Nothing preventing, we shall return to the work of the Lord next Summer. The seed is sovu, the Bible is being read, the mind awakreal, and all will result to the salvation of souls. we were kindly received and car. ed for; and glad to meet an intelligent, leving people. Some preachers became alarmed, and and visinge of the cloven-footed field, but what | endeavored to stay the work of the Lord, but the truth triumphed all the time. Go where the doctrine of Christ is not practiced in its ancient simplicity, hold it up, urge it upon the people, and then you will hear the "hireling ministry" cry out, "We be Abraham's seed," (John 8: 33), "Dost than teach us?" (John 9: But the common people will hear "gladly."

We arrived frome the 10th, somewhat wearied and not a little unwell; we find so much to do that there is no time to rest, much as rest is desired. We shall now, for sometime, give all our labors to the BRETHREN AT WORK, and endeaver to hold forth the word of life as given by Jesus Christ and the apostles, whether men м. м. Е. will hear or not.

CHRONICLES

ND it came to pass that word came to one Atamiel surmuned Miller that the word of the Lord should be preached in the state of Wisconsin. And he thought it profitable to choose Matthew, the editor, and departed from Lanark, being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God." Then came they to the city called Ripon and "behold a certain disciple was here" named Swigart, who with some of his house, beleived on the Lord; and he took the brothren and ministered unto their necessities so that they lacked nothing while they sojourned among that people. And the Brethren, as was their manner, went into the city and reasoned with the people "out of the Scriptures, opening and alleging" that "God now commandeth men of his envious heart make him two fold more everywhere to repent," and "bedeve the Gos-" is discontinued.

pel," showing that "in every nation he that fear eth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." Moreover from day to day they shunned not to declare to the people that "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord," and that "without faith it is impossible to please him." And it came to pass that on the morning of the 27th, day of the eleventh month, (being an high day) they departed and passed through the cities of Portage and Lacrosse, and came to the city of Winona in Minnesota. On the morrow they departed for St. Peter; arriving there at the going down of the sun, and lodged in an inn hard by the railroad. Here were many boisterous fellows, and like just Lot, the souls of the disciples were vexed by the filthy conversation of the baser sort. Now when the keeper of the inn saw that the brethren were troubled by the uproar, the drinking and smoking, he took them to another part of the house and bade them be comfortable, Early the next day they departed by railway for the village of Ottown over aginst St. Peter where they made inquiry for a disciple named Norman who, it was said lived in the region of Sharon. And they journeyed on foot, arriving at the house of Norman who took, them in and ministered to their wands. Brother Norman and his wife Mary, being the only disciples in this region, had from day to day gone from house to house and strove to teach the people the way of the Lord more perfectly. All the country was stirred up by this "strange doctrine" insomuch that not a few of the chief men feared that their power over the people might be taken awny; but the disciples assured them that only the word of the Lord would be preached.

And it came to pass that as they were about ready to depart to the "synagogue" which was hard by, two brethern, Wirt and Oblinger came in; and their was much rejoicing in the house.

And as they had preached the word in the house of the C--ites, and were about to tell the people to assemble on the morrow, a certain ruler arose and desired to know what the disciples of Jesus were going to preach, alleging that it had been noised abroad that they came hither to pull down the Lord's work. But the disciples continually athrmed that they came not to destroy the work of the Lord, but to establish it. This seemed to satisfy the chief men and they signified their willingness to give an answer on the morrow. And when the morrow came, they were assured that they could continue to preach the word there. And it come to pass that not a few believed, and searched the Scriptures daily to see whether these things were so. The remainder of the acts of the evangelists will be written in the next number. L. E. Arner.

MEETING OF ELDERS.

PROM a correspondent in the Progressive Christian we learn that some of the elders in the Mount Valley, Ohio, held namesting Nov. 11th, with Bro. John Harshey, and appointed three brethren to prepare petitions which are to be presented at their next meeting which is to be held in March, 1880. It is said that Bio. Harshey will also prepare a pelition to be considered.

We had heard of the contemplated meeting, but not knowing its unture and object, we preferred to wait until something more definite should appear. Of course the elders have a perfect right to hold meetings; but we hope they will always keep in view the good of the church, and carefully avoid even the appearance of evil. We believe that the Brethren of Southern Ohio possess too much love, too much devotion to Christ and his blessed truth to be carried away by the flatteries and whims of any one. We believe that when they once learn all the facts from Southern Missouri, they will be better qualified to act wisely and judiciously for the maintenance and perpetuity of peace and harmony in our beloved Brotherhood. We do not believe any number of elders can be persuaded by one-sided evidence to do any rash act. We have confidence in their oft-repeated desires for peace and union, and think that to those who are younger in age and experionce, the elders will give good examples of charity, judgment, forbearance and humility.

HOME.

Where is the happiest frome on earth? Tis not mid 'scenes of noisy mirth; But where God's favor sought aright, Fills every breast with joy and light.

The richest home? It is not found Where wealth and splendor most abound; But whereso'er in hall or cot, Men live contented with their lot.

The fairest home? It is not placed In seenes with outward beauty graced: But where kind words and smiles impart A constant sunshine to the heart.

On such a home of peace and love God showers his blessings from above; And angels, watching o'er it, cry, "Lo! this is like our homeon high!" -The Christian.

THE LOSS OF A WIFE.

I N comparison with the loss of a wife all other bereavements are triffing. The wife! She who fills so large a space in the domestic heaven; she who busied herself so unweariedly for the precious ones around her; hitter is the tear which talls on her cold clay. You stand beside her coffin and think of the past. It seems an amber-colored pathway, where the sun shines upon beautiful flowers, or the stars hang glittering overhead. Fain would the soul lunger there. No thorns are remembered save those your hands have unwillingly planted. Her noble, tender heart lies open to your immost sight .-You think of her now as all gentleness, all purity, all beauty. But she is dead. The head is laid upon a pollow of clay. The hands that have ministered so untiringly me folded beneath the gloomy portal. The heart, whose very beat measured an eternity of love, has under your feet. The flowers she bent over with smiles, bend that ther with tears, slinking the dew from their petals, that the verdure around her may be kept green and beautiful.

There is no white arm over your shoulder, no speaking face to look upfinto the eye of love, no trembling hips to murmur, "Oh. it is foo sad!" There is so strange a bush in every room! No smile to meet you at nightfall! And the old clock ticks and strikes-it was such music when she could hear it. Now it seems to knell on the hours through which you watched the shadows of death gathering on her sweet face. And every day the clock repeats that old story. Mamy another tale it telleth, ten, of benutitud words and deeds that are registered always. You feel—ch, how offen—that the grave campof keep her-that she will live again.

GIRLS USING SLANG.

CARLS should be careful never to sully then T hips by the use of slang phrases, for though they may be innovently uttered, they are apt to have a double meaning, and originate with a class of people who do not besitate to make use of the very lowest and vilest langnage

Some girls use slang because they think it makes their words more expressive and interesting; but this is a very much unstalled idea, for there is nothing more displeasing than to hear words of slang tall from the lips of girls who should be some and tree from any expressions. not calculated to impress their hearers with a sense of their refinement and culture.

The use of slang is becoming so common that ladies use it when conversing with gentlemen. With what degree of respect does a gentleman regard a lady who in this presence makes use of language such as is used in the very lowest class of society? He certainly cannot accord her the same respect which would be hers, if her ileas were expressed in chaste, lady-like terms. It is true, she may not mean to use words that will make her -eem andady-like, but she cannot use slang in any way without saving something her exputended for the lips of a true, pure weeman.

A gentleman owes more respect to a lady than to nie clarg in her presence, and if she refrains from its use the will be more careful of Els own lang rage. It is bod enough for him to ose it at any time, but now much more it is for Elected to the when with fadire-! He is to come extensions as beauty, though, when its use is enso cared by hearing it from his lady compans, hope you are not going to be rich again; for time as not to be most den. I was not satisfied man's respect for you.

say. If the use of slang continues to be so freely indulged in it will become so corrupted as to make it impossible for a single sentence to be uttered entirely free from slang.—Sel.

SKETCH OF A FAMILY.

T is the duty of mothers to sustain the reverses of fortune. Frequent and sudden as they have been in our own country, it is important that young females should possess some employment by which they might obtain a livelihood in case they should be reduced to the necessity of supporting themselves. When females are suddenly reduced from affluence to poverty, how pitiful and contemptible it is to see the mother desponding and helpless. and permitting her daughters to embarrass those whom it is their duty to assist and cheer.

"I have lost my whole fortune," said a merchant as he returned one evening to his home we can no longer keep our carringe. We must leave this large house. The children can no longer go to expensive schools. Yesterday I was a rich man; to-day there is nothing I can call my own."

"Dear husband," said the wife, "we are still rich in each other and our children. Money may pass away, but God has given us a better treasure in these active hands and loving

"Dear father," said the children, "do not look so sober. We will help you to get a living." "What can you do, poor things," said he.

"You shall see! you shall see!" answered sereral voices. "It is a pity if we have been to school for nothing. How can the father of eight children be poor? We shall work and make you rich ngam."

"I shall help," said a little girl, hardly four years old. "I shall not have may new things bought, and I shall sell my great doll."

The heart of the hosband and father, which had sunk within his bosom like a stone, vielifted up. The sweet enthusiasm of the ocene cheered him, and his nightly prayer was bloom song of praise.

They left their stately house. The serv ofwere dismissed. Pictures and plate, rich carpets and furniture, were sold, and she who load been mistress of the mansion shed no tear-

"Pay every deld," said she; "Let no one - "for through us, and we may be happy."

He rested a nest cottage and a small piece of ground not far from the city. With the aid of his sons be cultivated vegetables for the market. He viewed with delight and astonishment the economy of his wife, nurtured as she had been in wealth, and the efficiency which his daughters soon acquired under her training.

The eldest assisted in the household, and also instructed the young children; besides they executed various works which they had learned accomplishments, led which they found rould be disposed of thadvanlage. They cultivated flowers, and sent boquets to market in the cart that conveyed the vegetables; they plaited straw, they painted maps, they executed plain needle work. Every one was at her post, busy and checrful. The little cottage was like a bee-

"We never knew how many things we could do when we hyed in the grand house," said the children, "and we love each other a great deal better here. You call us your little bees,"

"Yes," said the father, "and you make just such honey as the heart likes to feed on."

Economy, as well as industry, was strictly observed; nothing was wasted. Nothing unnecessary was purchased. The eldest daughter became assistant feacher in a distinguished seminary, and the second took her place as instructress to the family.

The dwelling, which had always been kept neat, they were soon able to beautify. Its construction was improved, and the vines and flowering trees were replanted around it. The merchant was hupquer under his woodbine covered porch in a Summer's evening, than he had been in his showy dressing room,

"We are now thriving and prosperous," said he, "shall we return again to the city?"

"Oh, no" was the ununimous ready,

"Let us remain," said the wife, "where we have found health and contentment."

NUMBER XXXIV.

The Lake of Galilee.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement.]

THE huts of the little village of Mejdel, at the southern extremity of this plain, pointed out the locality of Magdala, and brought to mind all the tender love and gratitude bestowed on Jesus by Mary of Magdala, than whom there was none more devoted among his earthly

Parther on we came in sight of the rude huts which the Arabs built from the ruins of Capernaum. For a mile along the lake shore, and half a mile back, these ruins are scattered about, and the Arab huts built among them are now deserted. How strikingly have been fulfilled the words of Jesus: "Thou Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be brought down to hades." And there, too, lies what is left of Bethsahla-a few heaps of black building stones. senttored about over a little cape a mile northeast of Capernaum. Chorazin is equally deso late, but it lies two and a half miles inland, and is hid from the view by an intervening ridge All of these places, have been clearly identified by Captain Wilson, acting under the supices of the Palestine Exploration Fund of Great Brit-thir best landed at no more on the northern shore of the lake, about half a mile west of the mouth of the Jordan. There, under the shade of the dom tree, we took our noon-day meal. In this part of the lake, as the hontman assured me, at least three-fourths of the fishing is done, the fish being attracted thither by the frest food which the Jordan constantly supplies.-Here then, most probably, is the place where the disciples were fishing when Jesus called them, and the place where the seven returned to the confidence the resurrection. That the Beth-aida, serves to confirm sans apposition. We she our hunch, I think, not far from whom the seem are the broiled fish prepared by Jesus.

From the place at which we had landed, we skirted the remainder of the northern end of the take, eastward, and one half of the eastern shore. The Jordan outers, the northern end of the lake nearer the western than the castern side. For about one mile lock, it flows through a valley, baying broken down to it through high hills by a very rapid descent. This valley extends around the morth castern, curve of the take, and is probably five notes long, and two wide at the widest place. At its facthest extremity, along the eastern shore, most have occurred, I think the legding of the five theory and. There is the smooth, grassy plan for the people to sit down upon; there the take shore on which the heat was tied up, is close at hand: and there rises the incomtain slope up which Jesus ascended when the disciples, had entered the boat and he had dismissed the multitude. Any further south, the place would not have pertained to the wilderness of Bethsaida (buke ix 10) nor could the people whom he had left have gone to it around the head of the lake while he was going across (Matt., xiv, 12; John vi. 174. On the other hand, if it had been farther north, the disciples, in sailing to Capernaum, or the other Bethsaida, would not have been going across the sea. John vi. 17; Mark

Captain Wilson was the first explorer, I thank, who claimed to have identified, the place where the heal of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and were drowned. He asserted that there was only one place on the castern shore where the steep sales of the hills came down close to the water, and that elsewhere there was a valley between the hills and water, never less than a quarter of a mile wide

I was anytous to verify this identification. I had carefully scanned that shore from the southern and of the lake where I first came to it, and as far as I could see distinctly the valley of which Wilson speaks was there. I had now saded down several indes from the northern end, and had cound the valley thus far not less than half a mile wide in the narrowest place We sailed slowly on, and just at five o'clock in the diermoon, when we had reached the capformed by what is called Wady Senick, I saw * Father, 'said the youngest, "all we children; the steep place about a unlearway. It is so dis-ficient force to help us on our way if our how were turned westward, and I told the boatman that they might cross to Tiberias. I had scarce. ly attered the word when they all began to gaze at the western sky and chatter with one another in Arabic, in a most exciting manner. In their exc.tement they dropped their oars, and the hoat hegan to drift before the wind. I inquired of the dragomen the cause of the excitement, and he said that they saw signs of a coming storm from the west which alarmed them, and they thought it necessary to pull as fast as possible for the north-western shore. We felt annoyed at the thought of thus turning at a right angle to our intended course when the sun was getting low, and it appeared to us that their lears were ill grounded. One of our party began to remonstrate; but I remembered how treacherons the winds had been to others on this lake, and I insisted that the judgment of the hoatman should prevail. It was well that we so decided, for before we had gone one-third of the way across, we were in the midst of a storm taily as severe as our boat could safely ride. By a skillful management of the hoat we succeeded in reaching, about sunset, the little hay above the ruins of Bethsaida, as far from our camp as we were at noon. There we anchored for a short time, and the boatman stopped a leak which had started in the side of the boat. By hugging the lea shore we next managed to work our way to a point just helow Capernaum, but further than this it was decided that we could not go until the wind abated. It was now after dark. The anchor was cast, and all hands, weary and hungry went to sleep, 1 happened to be lying with my face toward the east; and when the moon, just passed and full. arose over the hills of Bashan, her bright light fell full upon my tace and awoke me. I looked around, and saw that the wind had somewhat fallen, and that the lake was less agitated. I called the dragoman, and he the boatmen, and soon we were again in motion. It was a hard pull against wind and wave, reminding us of the night in which the apostles were "toiling in rowing because the wind was contrary to them" (Mark vi. 45); but we reached the gate of Tibemas at 2 o'clock A. M., and by 3 o'clock we had eaten the dinner which should have been eaten at 6 the previous evening. We were affoat on the lake' eighteen consecutive hours, and it was a wearrsome day; but we were well recompensed. by the information gained, and by having entered somewhat into the experience of Jesus and the twelve. The next day we made a horseback excursion up and down the western shore of fac take; but of this I cannot now speak in a fall. It was full of interest. The following day (Lord's day, June 8) we spent in our camp, there being no place of public worship for us to attend in Tiberms. We hade tarewell to this town gladly, because it was the hottest place we had seen.-During our stay of three days the average temperature was 82 at suurise, 83° at noon, and 85 at dark. The coolest place we could find was at the western gate, either on the shady ale of the wall, or and rethe arch of the gateway itself. White sifting there and watching the almost constant stream of comers and goers, I thought of Lot sitting in the evening at the gate of Sodom, and I remember that Sodom was a hotter place than Tiberias.

Had a meeting on Saturday night, On Sunday foreno a our appointment came in contact with a special appointment of the Baptist triends and haptism by them to be adminishered. The bour arrived, a large congregation is combled, and the minister, Mr. Harris, present. The question new apise as to who should occurpy the time; bolh parties were disposed to yield, each in favor of the other, but finally by the persistent importunities of friend Harris, we screpted his courtesy, and took for our subject, "We will go with gon for we have heard that God is with you," Upon this text we proposed to by the foundation for the future labors of the meeting, assuming that. God was with the Apostolic Church, and that as evidence of his presence with any religious organization since that time, and at the present, we must look for the peculiarities characteristic of the Church when instituted by the Son of God, and under the control of inspired men. Our Emptist brother closed the meeting by prayer and annonneed the ervice of haptism. The Bergstresser-Bashor Debate.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION,

YOUBTLESS the readers of this journal have some knowledge of an expected doctrinal discussion at this place. Brother S. H. Bashor preached several sermous here in January 1878, and in discoursing upon this subject of baptism, he challenged a contradiction of what he said. (Rev.) Mr. Bergstresser of the Lutheran pastos rate was present. Som after Bro. Bashor's meetings closed, the Latheran pastor preached in his church upon these subjects, and represented things quite differently, and as was rumored, made some allusions to our Church doctrines and practices. He also made remarks of a provoking character in public places of business. These facts led some brothren to communicate with brother Basher and encourage a delieuse of the doctrones we hold. Accorilingly the Lutheran minister was challenged. for a discussion of points of difference. Thereupon a correspondence took place in the Revand published here, which entered right of the into an expression of views apar solue of the disputed subjects. The conclusion of this was a the terminal arthury or next country have made harder tain propositions. The time appointed by the butheran unnister was November 11th, 1879, at In A. M. in his charch.

Several months sign. Bro. Bashor published in his poper a brief correspondence between hum and the those the contemplated discussion, but neither brother B. nor any one of a could infer from the Dr.'s replus that a discussion would come to pass. Bro. B. dismissed the matter from further thought.

About November 6th, the Dr. attended a luneral in a neighboring village, and being asked in regard to the discussion at Wayness hero, stated that he would have his hell ring and he would go to his church at the hour uppointed on the 11th, and it his challenger were not there, he would prepare to preach a series manded in the Scriptures. A committee of three brethren were appointed to wait on the Dr. and read the decision of the brethren and sisters. A challenge was at once handed over in a very apparent good feeling. Brother Bashor sent in his acceptance, and a reporter was jointly employed as previously arranged.

The appointed hour having come-Nov. 21st, 6; 30 P. M., a very large congregation was assembled in the Lutheran church to attend the FIRST SESSION.

After singing a familiar hymn the presiding moderator, (Rev.) Mr. Keith assigned the reading of the 133rd Psalm to one of his assistants -Elder D. F. Stouffer. A brief prayer followed, collection was taken to defray expenses of fuel, oil, &c. After the presiding moderator had read the arranged preliminaries and made necessary introductory remarks, he called for the first speech immediately after reading again Proposition 1 - That infants of Christian parents are proper subjects for Christian Baptism and church membership.

At 7 o'clock P. M. Dr. Bergstresser occupied his pulpit, and after some introductory remarks, read a well-written production opening with a definition of Baptism as found in the entechism, Reference was made to circumcision as the type of haptism. The commission, Matt. 28: 19, was appealed to, stating that "all nations" included men, women and children. Mark 14: 10, "Suffer little children," to Luke says, "infants." The desire for Infant Baptism is the foundation of it. Jesus was displeased at those who tried to keep the children away from him. We must become as little children. The timess of children for Baptism was argued as a strong point. Children have only original sin, and need baptism. No reason exists to hinder them. Children have the better right to Baptism and church membership as they are free from pollution. A drunkard and little girl compared. Prov. 22: 6. Dear Bretheren -HAVE combinded to take your paper awhile longer. The church here is in leve as far as I know. I thenk it is wrong to fight against the Lord's commands, and do only a part of them, or those we may libe best. It is like agreeing to do a certain work, and then doing only a part of it. The party that hires you to do the work will not pay unless it be done according to contract. Let us remember to do our work according to contract.

A Sad Trial.

N Sunday night, November 9th, while seated in our church, I was called out and a tolegram handed me. It contained only four words, but they will never be erased from my memory. They announced the sudden death of a dear brother by the falling of a railroad bridge over the Missouri river, forty miles west of St. Louis, known as the St. Charles bridge. In that fearful fall of eighty-four feet, there were seven precions lives lost, my brother doseph included. I took the train the same night and arrived in Moherly, Mo., on the morning of the 10th, there to meet the wife of the dear' departed one. We endeavored to reconcile ourselves to the sad reality of what had befallen us and took the the body on the train and came ncross the Mississippi and proceeded to Danville. Illinois, where the friends of the heartbroken young wife lived. There the body was interred and the next day we took our sorrowful journey home.

As all the friends here could not attend the funeral at Danville, we concluded to have a sermon here. Brother John Metzger and others delivered appropriate addresses in this town last Sabbath, from 1 Peter, 1: 24. He was 34 years old, 20 years he had spent on the radroad, n well known conductor on the line of the T. Isaac Barnhart. W. & W. Road.

Dear Brethren:-

N the 21st., of Nov. '79, the church of Cedar county biwa, met in council and organized by selecting Etds. Enough Eby and Martin Myers, of Illinois, and Marcus Fowler of Jackson county, lova, as a committee to adjus! existing difficulties which were seriously impeding the progress of our little bain of believers After holding six sessions, the meeting closed on the 24th. Taking toe nature of the case into consideration, a very commendable spirit was manifested throughout the meeting, and by the grace of 2md, and the influence of the committee, their wisdom and zeal for Zion's at all describes were adjusted to the satistaction of turch, and in harmony with the general order of our beloved Placeting. May the bend ldess them for their work of love uniting us. And infreening trees a amore the digressed spirits, the church is made to weep or joy, the dead are numb alive, and the last are

During the meeting one presions lamb was received by high rism, the new figure and to open the watery grave. At the close of the congest another precious one was restored into bill tellowship much tears of joy. Public meetings were continued at our clurch house for several days, by brethren Myers and Fowler. During this time brother. Eby was holding meetings with the Plarence he thren at their meetinghouse four miles south of Charence. On account of the inclement weather, and but roads, a full attendance was not obtained, but some were out who never before heard the Brethren preach. Brother Myers also preached an in bresting sermon for us. Be ther Lowbir con tunned the meetings - up till the evening of the 30th, when they were concluded amid the lest of feelings. Brethren, come again, and stay longer. Peace be with all the brethren.

Noncombine with the 5th and 6th queries and their answers, which came up an our District Meeting held with the Burn Oak church, April 7th, 1879, our and of the church assembled in connect on the lack of November. and in order to keep difficulty. Iron among us, decided on the decisions or the queries. The 5th query and miswer reads as follows:

Is it right to grant members church letters recommending them in love and full fellowship when they are disobedient, and do not combrin to the Gespel and the order of the Brethren in adorning their bodies, in modest apparel as hecometh the saints?

Answer, Considered wrong,

Therefore we have decided that members who are out of order presenting certificates to this arm of the church, be visited and exhorted to come to the order as soon as possible; and turther that we grant no certificates to members. insists on as taking his or her certificate with- | she out consenting to come in order, that we re-labor ceive him or her and deal with him according he to Matt. 18,

Course 9. How is it considered by the f ren of this limitrict Meeting for mains hothron to travel and hold series of meetings when they do not conform to the order of the Brethren in their dress?

Answer. Such brethren are referred to the decisions of Annual Meeting in the past, Decided therefore that we will not encourage or consent to traveling ministers preaching in the hounds of our district who are not conformed to the order in their dress, and that these proceedings be published in the B. AT W. so that the brethren can govern themselves accordingly. By order of the church.

TO OUR EDITORS.

DEAR BRETHREN:-You will allow me to address a word to you: The church has, so far as my knowledge goes, made it a rule in all cases that parties offended should apply first to the offending party for satisfaction, hefore bringing the matter to the church for a hearing there, and that, too, before blazing it abroad to the world. In short, the 18th chapter of Matthew was required to be applied first, in all personal offences, and this rub we believe to be advice, and a good one, and its effects exeerd any and all others when applied. But good as the rule is, and general as its requirements in the Brotherhood, it is sometimes overlooked. We gite to only one case.

It would seem that brother John Harshey of Missouri claims to be injured and offended by the statement of brother Eshelman as given by him in report of council meeting and published in B. vr W. No 45, and Progressive Christian, No. 43, but instead of taking his wish to brothers Eshelman, the reporter of the statements, and have long to e greet any mistake which had been mode, and which we are certain he would gladly have done. Brother Harshey, although an ordained elder, and "able to teach others also," quite improdently carries his grievance to a third party, brother Kinsey, of the Vin licator, and through it to the world before the accused party could know anything of the matfor, or have an opportunity to correct it. $\langle \mathrm{T} | \mathrm{d} angle$ was an oversight, for the 18th chapter of M or will apply as well to writers as to talkers. Our sequestial you who are editors as this: When writers seem to forget the Mast re word upon this imblect, and write to you to bring their grievances out before the Unirch and the world, please to remind them of their promise to the Church, and that the matter is not yet ready to be made public. In this way the teelings of our Brotherhood will not become so widely agatidod over some little matter, which should be hashed up at home. And it any of as feel we cannot en alone and tell our brother of the wrongs we think be loss done, then let it do inhe bosom where the wounded feelings viere first felt. Left us at once forgive and torget it without any more at about it. The ford bless LANDON WEST.
